Brown Act Is Clarified

The Attorney General of California has declared that notices of special meetings by public agencies must be received by news media 24 hours before the meeting. The attorney general ruled that mere mailing of notices 24 hours before a meeting is insufficient.

The opinion of Atty. Gen. Thomas C. Lynch contradicts an opinion of the Marin County district attorney's office which would pave the way for secret meetings of official bodies in Marin.

Lynch's interpretation of the Ralph M. Brown Act, which governs closed and special meetings, was delivered Thursday to Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael. Its conclusion is almost identical to opinions issued by the state legislative counsel and the Marin County counsel.

Eight of 14 county district attorneys — who replied to a poll of all 58 in the state by the Independent-Journal — also stated that mailing of notices 24 hours before a special meeting is not sufficient to meet the requirements of the Ralph M. Brown Act.

Lynch's opinion was requested by Bagley after notice of a special meeting of the Sausalito School District board on May 15 was mailed so late that it could not be received by the Independent-Journal until the meeting was over.

The notices were deposited at the Sausalito Post Office at 11 p.m. May 13 announcing the meeting at 7 a.m. May 15. Above the mail slot into which the notices were dropped was a placard which said that nothing mailed at that hour would move until 4 o'clock the next morning automatically making impossible — the post office later said — delivery of the notice to the I-J 24 hours before the meeting.

As it turned out, the notices did not arrive at the I-J until the morning of May 15 after the meeting was over.

In response to complaints that the board did not give 24-hour notice of its meeting, the county district attorney's office declared that a letter is considered received the moment it is dropped in a mailbox.

Lynch disagreed, saying flatly that "mere deposit of such notice in the mail is insufficient."

"The required notice to news media of special meetings of local public agencies including school boards must be actually delivered at least 24 hours before the time of such meeting to those media who have requested notice in writing," the attorney general's opinion said.

Although a general rule is that consent (to a proposal) is deemed to have been communicated between the parties with the deposit of an acceptance in the mail, the rule is not applicable in this case, Lynch said, because "the applicable statute (section 25956 of the California Government Code) requires that the notice to the news media be delivered whether personally or by mail, 24 hours before" the meeting.

Lynch's opinion underlined the words notice and delivered.

It concurred with an opinion issued in June by Gene McCabe, the legislative counsel's expert on the Ralph M. Brown Act.

McCabe wrote that the "posting of the notice in the mail

Angela Davis, Magee Face Murder Charges

Warrants Are Out For Duo

Warrants charging ousted teacher Angela Davis and wounded convict Ruchell Magee with murder and kidnapping were issued yesterday in Marin County.

Magee was wounded in the Aug. 7 shoot-out at Marin Civic Center in which Judge Harold J. Haley, of Marin Superior Court, two other convicts and an accomplice were killed, and Miss Davis has been linked to three of the guns used and possibly a fourth.

Dist. Atty. Bruce Bales said the warrants were issued by Judge Peter Allen Smith of Municipal Court after he said new information in the case came to light at 4 p.m. yesterday. Bales declined further comment.

The Los Angeles Herald-Examiner reported today that in addition to a pistol and two rifles, Miss Davis bought the shotgun which killed the judge two days before the shooting in San Francisco.

Shortly after the warrants were issued, San Francisco police raided a Potrero District home apparently looking for Miss Davis, but found her sister, Mrs. Fania Jackson of Los Angeles, instead.

She was released after questioning.

Bales refused to reveal whether Miss Davis's purchase of guns used in the daring escape attempt by James D. McLain, William Christmas and Magee — aided by Jonathan Jackson, 17, of Pasadena — was the decisive factor in the warrant.

However, shefiff's inspector Ronald Retana confirmed yesterday that a third gun purchased by the avowed Communist and Black Panther had cropped up in the case. This weapon, an M-1 carbine, was bought by her in Los Angeles July 25 at the same store where she bought a Plainfield semiautomatic rifle more than a year ago.

Retana refused to confirm reports that the third weapon had

A NEW CAREER LOOMS

Thomas Making Gallant Struggle

A week ago, Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas was struggling to survive a bullet wound that severed his spine and left him paralyzed from the waist down.

Today, he is exercising in his hospital bed by hoisting himself by his hands on suspended bars, and looking forward to a possible new career as a Marin Municipal Court judge, according to associates.

Thomas was one of five hostages seized by three San Quentin convicts and a young accomplice Aug. 7 in Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley's courtroom. Judge Haley, one of the hostages, was slain by a shotgun blast while the plotters' van loaded with nine persons was trying to get past roadblocks at Marin Civic Center. Two of the three convicts and the youth who smuggled weapons to them in the courtroom are dead.

Thomas, when the shooting started, grabbed a gun from one convict and shot at three of them, he told investigators at the scene.

His rapid recovery has led his doctors to predict he may be able to go home from Marin General hospital in two to three weeks, Thomas' associates in the district attorney's office said yesterday.

They said he would be able to assume normal work loads, considering his paralysis, in a matter of a few weeks to a few months.

The news gave added push to Marin County factions seeking his appointment to municipal court to fill the vacancy coming up when Municipal Judge Hadden W. Roth leaves the bench Sept. 1.

Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner and attorney William O. Weissich said a bipartisan group has asked Gov. Ronald Reagan to delay naming Roth's replacement until Thomas is recovered enough to take the job.

Thomas's wife, Maureen, told friends yesterday he was eagerly reading clippings about the possible judgeship, and was strongly interested in the opportunity.

Weissich stressed that Thomas's law practice has included both civil and criminal trial experience. When he joined the district attorney's office, deputies were still permitted to accept private civil cases.

His boss, Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales, said yesterday: "We expected him to return to his duties, but if he chooses to go on the bench we'll give our wholehearted support to his judgeship."

Thomas joined the district attorney's office in 1962, immediately after passing his bar examinations. He obtained his law degree from the University of San Francisco in 1961 after

Ferry System To Sausalito Returns

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

The beginning of a ferry system linking Sausalito and San Francisco was launched yesterday by the Golden Gate Bridge District in a well-oiled preinaugural cruise for more than 300 persons.

It was the success of the bridge that drove the old ferry system out of business in 1941, a success now so overwhelming that the bridge district got into the transit business to relieve some of its congestion.

Despite months of planning for a joint ferry and bus system, however, the only parts of a bus system in evidence were 50 used Greyhound tires used to cushion the ferryboat at its Pier 7 maintenance berth.

The district bought the year-old, 111-foot ferry in San Diego in May, and to date has invested more than $700,000 setting up the Sausalito system.

The regular service began today.

Yesterday afternoon's cruise proved the 159-ton vessel has the acceleration and maneuverability of a 28-footer as skipper James Gill of San Francisco scooted her away from the ferry building landing.

With her twin 727-

Israel Now Threatening A Peace Stall

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Israel threatened a slowdown in Middle East peace contacts today and said New York was not a suitable site for negotiations. Lebanon charged an Israeli raiding force had thrust across the Lebanese border in a new cease-fire violation.

The Israelis made it clear today they would not proceed with Middle East peace talks until they got action on their charges that Egypt twice had violated the cease-fire by installing more Soviet missiles near the Suez Canal.

Mountanos, Staff Map Plans To Tighten Hall Of Justice Security

The ideas include additional manpower to guard prisoners being taken from jail to courtrooms and back, an alarm system throughout the courtrooms, and additional roving building patrols with walkie-talkie radios.

The suggestions have been handed to County Administrator Alan Bruce for staff review of merit and cost. Mountanos said his staff and Bruce probably will meet Monday or Tuesday to review the security plans.

Meanwhile, Marin's superior and municipal court judges also talked over ways to prevent a repetition of the bloodletting which killed Superior Judge Harold J. Haley and two San Quentin prison inmates and a young accomplice on Aug. 7.

All the judges except presiding Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Superior Court met yesterday noon to discuss solutions to the danger. Wilson, who is ill, will be sent a copy of the judges' proposals. If he concurs, the ideas will probably be discussed next week with Mountanos and the administrator, according to Judge E. Warren McGuire, acting presiding judge of superior court.

Kidnapper Talks

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (UPI)—An arrested terrorist leader said today two kidnaped foreign diplomats will be freed unharmed if the government restores constitutional guaranties and agreed to civi trials for captured leftist militants, a top police source said.

It was unknown whether the government of President Jorge Pacheco Areco would accept the conditions for release of Brazilian Consul Aloysio Dias Gomide, 41, and U.S. Farm expert Claude L. Fly, 65, of Fort Collins, Colo.

Pacheco has said that he will not bargain with terrorist akidnapers who on Aug. 10 murdered Daniel A. Mitrione, 50, of Richmond.

Pacheco has said that he will not bargain with terrorist kidnapers who on Aug. 10 murdered Daniel A. Mitrione, 50, of Richmond, Ind. Mitrione and Gomide were kidnaped separately July 31 and Fly was abducted one week later.

Sniper Roundup

CHICAGO (UPI) — Twenty persons who police say are street-gang members were held today as police sought the snipers who wounded two policemen, one critically, on the South Side Thursday night.

Detective James A. Alfano Jr. remained in critical condition today at Billings Hospital and was to have transfusions through the day, spokesmen said.

Hospital officials said Alfano, wounded in the liver, had received 92 pints of blood in transfusions by midnight Friday.

Police said the incident began when shots were fired at an unmarked gang-intelligence unit squad car. Dozens of shots followed in a half-mile square area as police ducked bullets from snipers.

Patrolman Gregory R. Courchene was wounded by a shotgun pellet in his arm, police said, and was treated and released from a hospital.

Police commander John T. Cartan said the incidents may have been part of a planned street ambush on police.

Missiles Plane

SAIGON (UPI)—North Vietnam fired missiles at a U.S. photo plane but they missed, the U.S. Command said today. A dozen Americans were wounded in fighting that erupted when Communist troops fired on U.S. troops trying to rescue four wounded GIs.

The U.S. Command said a Navy RF8 photo reconnaissance jet was fired on by North Vietnamese missile crews Friday six miles south of the North Vietnamese port of Vinh. The jet and two armed escort jets evaded the missiles and did not fire back, the spokesman said.

Vinh is 145 miles north-northwest of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) separating the two Vietnams and 170 miles south of Hanoi. A similar incident occurred near Vinh Aug. 3.

Aircraft Call

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (UPI) —Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said today the decrease in the number of America's overseas land bases increases the need for aircraft carriers to serve as airbases afloat.

Laird spoke at the keel laying of the nuclear attack carrier USS Eisenhower.

"The attack carrier has been the backbone of our sea power during the past three turbulent decades," Laird said. "For the foreseeable future, the attack carrier will remain an indispensable element of American sea power."

The new ship, third of America's nuclear-powered attack carriers, was named in honor of the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower who began the development of nuclear-powered vessels to operate both on the surface and below the surface of the ocean, Laird said.

He said Eisenhower's grandson, David, also present for the keel-laying ceremony, was a doubly fitting participant in the program because "he is about to begin his service in the United States Navy."

In a speech prepared for the ceremony, Laird said the United States naval forces in the Mediterranean today are "reassuring our NATO allies as well as all who seek to restore peace and stability in the Mideast."

Slight Injury

Timothy J. Hale, 20, of 92 Woodside Drive, San Anselmo, was injured slightly at 3:30 a.m. today when the car he was driving missed a curve and crashed into a tree near his home. Hale told police he would seek treatment from his personal physician.

Fifth Day Of Fast For Chavez

SALINAS, Calif. (UPI)—Cesar Chavez entered his fifth day of fasting today despite an order by his physician to end it.

Fearing for his health, Dr. Jerome Lackner told UPI he had told the director of the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee (UFWOC) to end the fast Friday night.

Dr. Lackner said Chavez, who ended a 25-day fast in 1968, "is so weak that he is confined to bed" and that he "is much sicker now than he was after two or three weeks of his previous fast." Lackner said if the fast is not ended soon Chavez may suffer "irreparable damage."

Chavez continued fasting in the wake of five major victories for the UFWOC Friday. But a union spokesman said Chavez, who has already dropped 14 pounds, may soon end his fast.

The union announced settlement in the Salinas and Santa Maria Valleys, the signing of a major grower in the Fresno area and the dropping of two suits against the union Friday night.

Sixty-two Santa Maria valley growers agreed to rehire employes dismissed when the growers signed agreements with the Teamsters union. Some 2,000 workers struck the growers after they signed contracts requiring the dismissal of all workers who refused to join the Teamsters within 10 days.

In another development, the Frank Coit Ranch west of Fresno became the first major Fresno area ranch to sign with the UFWOC when the union accepted a pact calling for a $2.50 minimum hourly wage and a 53 cent per box incentive pay.

The union had struck Coit's 9,000 acre melon, tomato and cotton ranch which employes 500 workers during the peak season. The spokesman said, however, that workers will be paid far above the minimum scale during the melon season.

He said workers averaged $5 an hour last year but that they will receive $6 an hour this year under the new contract.

Britain Guarding Nausea Gas Plant

GUILDFORD, England (London Express Service) — British police and special branch officers are guarding the largest nausea gas producing factory in Europe — believed to be the chief target for a team of I.R.A. saboteurs.

The plant itself was closed with all the employees away on vacation.

But around the factory, surrounded by thick woods in the middle of the Surrey countryside, plainclothes police officers were on watch.

Missile Curbs For SALT Talks

VIENNA (UPI) —The United States has offered to limit its Safeguard antiballistic missile (ABM) System in exchange for Soviet curbs on the giant SS9 missiles, diplomatic sources said Saturday.

The sources said this was one of the key proposals energing from four months of negotiations at the Vienna round of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT), which ended Friday. An agreement is possible, they said, but all points will be under intense study in Washington and Moscow before negotiations resume in Helsinki Nov. 2.

Other major points, according to the sources, include:

—An American proposal for a numerical ceiling on strategic delivery systems—both long-range missiles and heavy bombers. Under this plan, bombers and missiles would count equally. Since the United States has more delivery systems than Russia, such a ceiling would freeze the number of American arms and allow the Soviets to catch up.

— A low-level limit on ABMs. Single defensive rings around Moscow and Washington are most likely to be the method adopted. This would mean that Russia could keep its ABM ring around Moscow, but America must tear down its ABM installations in North Dakota and Montana.

One of the two powers is expected to present a draft treaty soon after the Helsinki round opens, the sources said. Although many political, geographical and military details remain to be worked out, they said the treaty might be finished when SALT recesses before Christmas. A Spring session in Vienna is expected.

The sources said the exchange involving the American ABM and the Soviet SS9 was an "apples and oranges" deal necessitated by the fact that the two nations, having different security requiremtns, place a different value on weapons systems.

In addition, they said, there is considerable doubt in America whether the Safeguard ABM System will ever work properly —and these doubts are matched by the suspicion that the Soviet SS9 is too big and unwieldly to be efficient strike weapons.

Because of this, the sources said, the two weapons systems made excellent bargaining tools.

The most likely agreement, they said, would allow both nations to install single rings of ABMs and to build a few giant missiles. In both cases, the numbers would be low enough to keep either system from reinvigorating the arms race.

The institute for strategic studies, a highly-regarded London research organization, said the United States had a total of 2,160 land-based Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles (ICBM), submarine-launched missiles and long-range heavy bombers at the end of 1969. At the same time, it said, the Soviet total was only 1,410.

The Soviet Union has narrowed that gap since then, but is still believed to be behind. Since any acceptable arms limitation must be based on parity, a ceiling rather than a freeze on strategic delivery systems is expected to be negotiated in Helsinki, to give Russia a chance to catch up.

California Is Now The Top State

WASHINGTON (UPI) - For the first time since 1960, New York is not the most populous state in the nation. That title went to California in the 1970 census.

Preliminary figures from the 1970 count showed the population of California to be 19,696,840 on April 1. This was an increase of almost 4 million since the last census in 1960.

While the exact figures for New York have not yet been calculated, the state's estimated 1969 population was 18.3 million, and census officials said it was unlikely New York had gained in one year the 1.4 million persons needed to match California.

Congressional leaders have estimated California will gain four seats in the House of Representatives as a result of its rapid increase in population. Census officials refused to comment on the predictions, but Friday's preliminary count indicated they were accurate.

Virginia was the most populous state in the country during the late 18th and early 19th centuries. But in 1810, New York took the title and held it during every census count until now.

The Census Bureau must complete its count by Dec. 1, when the results will be presented to President Nixon.

Hirohito Prays For Peace On Anniversary

TOKYO (UPI)—Emperor Hirohito prayed for peace today at a ceremony for war victims on the 25th anniversary of Japan's defeat in World War II.

Clad in Western striped pants and swallow-tailed morning coat, Hirohito joined 5,000 persons at memorial rites in Budokan Hall for an estimated three million Japanese military and civilian victims who died in the war.

The stooped monarch, 69, walked slowly to the specially built dais and silently prayed for one minute at noon. It was the precise time that the emperor, who was regarded as a living god until his country lost the war, went on the air for the first time 25 years ago to tell his country of unconditional surrender to the allied powers.

Following the silent prayer, Hirohito, who was accompanied by Empress Nagako in a blue Western dress, read briefly from a sheet of paper in his high-pitched voice.

"I am still at pain when I think of those who lost their lives in the war," Hirohito said. "I pray for peace at home and abroad."

Prime Minister Eisaku Sato, whose conservative government sponsored the memorial service, said "Japan has achieved prosperity surpassing that of the prewar years as a result of the hard efforts of the entire people."

The country, he said, "should look back to the lesson we learned from the previous conflict. We should make further efforts for the maintenance of peace in the world and the development of our nation."

The rites held at Budokan, a structure built for the 1964 Olympic games in the former palace ground across the street from the moated palace, was one of many similar services held across the country.

Marin Total Valuation Of Property Up

Total assessed valuation of all property in Marin this fiscal year is $635,074,736, up 8.5 per cent over last year's $585,388,558, county auditor-controller Michael Mitchell announced yesterday.

Mitchell said the amount is close to earlier estimates, meaning that the basic county tax rate will be close to the $2.50 per $100 assessed valuation figured in June. Last year's tax rate was $2.395. This year's official tax rate will be set by the board of supervisors on Sept. 1.

A breakdown of total assessed valuation is:

Local secured roll (all land and improvements locally assessed) — $543,003,414; unsecured roll (including personal property and inventories of business establishments, livestock and boats) — $26,501,970; public utilities (assessed by the state) — $34,646,220; hmeowners exemptions — $27,070,245; and business inventory exemptions — $3,852,887.

Both homeowner and business inventory exemptions represent tax relief to county property owners, but the county's taxing agencies get that revenue back in state reimbursements.

Mitchell said he would have a breakdown of assessed value by schools and other special districts next week.

UC Medical School Nears Minority Goal

With relatively little fuss or fanfare, the medical school at the University of California San Francisco Medical Center has recruited more minority students than any other predominately white medical school in the country.

The medical center set a goal that 25 per cent of the entering class of each of its schools mould be minority students.

Last fall, in an entering class of 136, the medical school had 22 Negroes, eight Mexican-Americans, and one American Indian. This year, with the admissions process almost complete, the school expects 33 minority-group freshmen in a class of 134.

horsepower diesels running well below maximum power, the Golden Gate made it to Sausalito in just over 25 minutes.

Seating for the 588 passengers is arranged on three decks, with the two lower decks enclosed except for their aft sections. The top deck is open, and was almost warm under the clear sky.

The Golden Gate carries a crew of six, plus two to handle coffee in the morning and martinis at night.

Bridge officials proudly displayed the vessel, each making a special point of his specialty. The district's security chief, Dale Norton, pointed out that the fare boxes were like vaults, and should be burglar-proof.

The highlight of the departure was the arrival of former Mayor Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley, who rolled down the gangplank and right up to the bar on his bicycle. Like Gen. Douglas MacArtur's landing in the Philippines, the scene was photographed repeatedly so it would be just right.

Meyer, 43, said he had ridden from his North Beach office, and uses the bicycle regularly to make business calls in San Francisco. He predicted that other commuters will want to take their bicycles on the ferry insead of using buses at either end of the ride.

Bicycle racks are planned on the ferry, but none is installed yet.

Despite a fairly heavy chop on the bay, the ride was smooth and quiet, with very little vibration from the engines — except on the lowest deck just above the engine room.

Ingredients for the libations were provided by the operator of the concession on the ferry, and a copious spread of food was bought with district funds as part of the $1,500 appropriated to kick off the service.

The hoopla today was to include the Guckenheimer Sour Kraut Band and a parade of vintage automobiles from San Francisco to Sausalito. Also to be on hand was the Santa Rosa chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America.

The renaming of the vessel was declared official with the busting of a bottle of water on her prow while picking up more persons in Sausalito.

Mrs. William Moskovitz of San Francisco, wife of the president of the bridge board, managed to break the bottle after about a half dozen hefty wacks. The bottle was filled with water from all the rivers flowing into the bay.

The ferry landing in Sausalito, shocking blue in color, even was decorated with colorful flower planters — filled with flowers only minutes before the ferry arrived.

Hundreds lined the Sausalito shoreline as the ferry made its first passenger trip from San Francisco.

Among the passengers was former Marin Supervisor Thomas T. Storer, who long ago championed the need to return ferries to the bay. "I've always believed this day would come, although my sanity was questioned a number of times," he said.

The only unanswered question — the answer to be found only in the hard test of experience — was whether the average commuter will be able to consume two martinis in 25 minutes.

Also in conflict with the Marin district attorney's opinion was a memorandum from Marin County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney to all Marin school and special districts boards.

Maloney recommended that "mail should not be used if there is any likelihood that the paper will not actually receive the notice 24 hours in advance of the meeting."

He suggested notices be delivered personally, but if the mail must be used the letter should be registered or certified.

If the mail is used, Maloney said, the newspaper should also be notified by telephone in order to avoid any misunderstandings.

Eight of 14 county district attorneys responding to the I-J survey agreed that notice of special meetings must actually be delivered 24 hours prior to the meeting.

Five others agreed with the Marin district attorney's office that mailing the notice 24 hours before the meeting was sufficient to meet the legal requirements: the district attorneys of Tehama, Monterey, Inyo and Napa counties, as well as the Sacramento County counsel.

The district attorney of Madera County answered that he considered mailing of notice sufficient "assuming that newspaper in normal course of post office deliveries will receive mail before actual meeting."

District attorneys in Ventura, San Diego, Humboldt, Shasta, Sierra , San Mateo, Lake and Santa Cruz counties said the notice must be actually received by the newspaper 24 hours before a meeting.

Bales had indicated yesterday his office was not considering conspiracy charges against the 26-year-old Miss Davis on the basis of reports in a Los Angeles newspaper that she presided over a Watts gathering that "tried" judges and lawmen and sentenced them to be "revolutioned to death."

Bales refused to comment on rumors that Miss Davis had obtained a passport and fled to Canada, bound elsewhere, or that he was seen in Bakersfield last night.

An all points bulletin was issued after last night's raid failed to turn up Miss Davis.

Bales also indicated he had no information linking anyone else to the case and declined to say whether undercover men were to attend the funeral of Jackson today at St. Augustine Episcopal Church in Oakland.

Rumors have circulated that, in addition to Black Panther leader Huey Newton, Miss Davis would attend the funeral for the brother of George L. Jackson, one of the three-so-called Soledad Brothers.

The black convicts are accused of murdering a white guard at Soledad State Prison last January. They are at San Quentin State Prison awaiting trial.

Miss Davis helped organize the Soledad Brothers Defense Committee in June and had been denied permission to serve as an investigator for the trio and to talk with them at the prison.

In addition to the carbine and the rifle, authorities said Miss Davis bought a Browning automatic pistol in January 1968 that Jackson used in the escape try.

Jackson entered Judge Haley's courtroom, where McClain was being tried for knifing a prison guard, and attempted to free them. The armed group used Haley, three women jurors and Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas as hostages.

After loading the hostages into the rented truck, gunfire broke out with San Quentin guards outside the Hall of Justice. In addition to Haley, Christmas, 27; McLain, 37, and Jackson were killed.

Thomas was paralyzed from the waist down by bullet wounds and a woman juror was shot in the arm in the gun battle.

Thomas was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital and Magee, transferred from the recovery room to a regular hospital room at the San Quentin hospital, was reported in satisfactory condition.

Miss Davis is scheduled to speak at a Black Panther rally in San Francisco Civic Center next week in behalf of the Soledad Brothers.

Ministry, referring to the peace mission of United Nations special envoy Gunnar V. Jaring, said:

"Following the Egyptian violations of the cease-fire Israel is considering slowing down her contacts with Mr. Jarring."

Gazit said Israel wanted the talks held at the foreign minister level and somewhere else than New York. He did not specify the site but political sources said the Israelis were pushing for Cyprus.

"It is inconceivable that such complicated negotiations should be held at only ambassadorial level," Gazit said in an interview on the state radio. "Israel also considers New York as the least suitable of all the proposed venues because of the publicity that would attend the talks there."

Valley of Love

In the valley of our love,
Deep in the caves of my heart,
Comes all the ecstasy of life
From the very start.
In this valley of our love,
Deep in the wells of my thought,
Comes joys, tears and living things,
The Angels brought.
In this valley of our love,
Deep in the soft clouds of light,
So true with all the love, tears and strife,
God gave me you.

Peacock Gap Area Fence Angers Group

Members of the Marin Conservation League have challenged placement of a fence around private property in the Peacock Gap area contending the land has been used by hikers and cyclists for many years.

New York Cal Industrial Corp. fenced the 1,900 acres this spring at the request of the Marin County Sheriff's Department, Eugene E. Wallace, the company's assistant secretary, told the Independent-Journal.

He said marijuana parties, beer busts and stolen car stripping abounded on company land, forcing barbed wire fences and no trespassing signs. The property is opposite Rat Rock.

Company guards patrolling the land have been instructed not to interfere with legal activities, Wallace said, so there is no interference with recreation.

The fence and signs are necessary because "they (the sheriff's office) claim that unless there is a sign, they are not allowed to make an arrest," Wallace said.

Nevertheless, the fence, although allowing public access through a truck entrance, has drawn fire from members of the Marin Conservation League as illegal.

Joseph A. Forest, deputy county counsel, indicated the arguments may be valid in view of a decision by the Supreme Court in April against a fence blocking access to a beach.

Forest said if the public has had use of the Peacock Gap land for more than five years, has also used the access area, and has encountered no opposition from the owners, then "it is certainly possible that there is an implied dedication for public use."

Harold Gregg, executive director of the Marin Conservation League, said the group had not studied the matter and there was no indication whether the league planned to file suit against the fence.

DISPUTED FENCE — A Peacock Gap land owner says he needs this fence to protect his property from illegal activities, but some conservationists say it blocks a long-established public use. (Independent-Journal photo)

UC Professor To Fly Plane On Latin Trip

Dr. Robert N. Hamburger, Professor of Pediatrics and Chief of the Pediatric Immunology and Allergy Division of UC School of Medicine, at San Diego, left recently on a 7,500-mile odyssey through Central and South America to alert pediatricians in these areas to the possible dangers of the drug chloramphenicol and also to lecture on the "Development of the Immunoglobulins."

Dr. Hamburger, a licensed pilot since 1941, will hedge-hop across Central and South America for a month with his wife, Sonia, as co-pilot in a single engine Comanche.

Holland is one of the world's leading exporters of butter and cheese.

Word 'Tyranny' Used By Defense In Rivas Trial

A family doctor, who used the word "tyranny" to describe Fidel I. Rivas' control over his wife and 11 children, was the first witness for the defense yesterday in the trial of Ronald Rivas, 21, on murder charges.

Young Rivas is accused of gunning down his father in their Novato home on the night of July 17, 1969.

Dr. Morris Katkoff of Greenbrae testified he had treated the Rivas parents and children on several occasions. He said the father had come to him with complaints of ulcer trouble, stomach pains and other illnesses. The doctor testified he felt most of the elder Rivas' troubles were feigned.

Katkoff also said he treated young Rivas' sister, Jeanette, for extreme nervous conditions, which he blamed in the "tyranny" of the father toward his wife and children.

The doctor recalled a 1968 discussion with Mrs. Marjorie Rivas over her husband's repeated acts of violence toward her and the impact of his actions on the children.

Yvonne Rivas Slager, another sister, followed on the stand yesterday to testify that young Rivas repeatedly tried to be close with his father, but was rebuffed with foul language and taunts as to his masculinity.

The nonjury trial, before Superior Court Judge Thomas F. Keating, was recessed until Tuesday morning.

Professors Discount Soil Pollution Perils

There is no danger of nitrate soil pollution when citrus growers follow recommended rates of fertilizer applications.

This is the overall conclusion of two University of California scientists at Riverside. Drs. Parker F. Pratt and Winston W. Jones studied more than a thousand samples of soil excavated from as deep as 100 feet.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Why Must A Man Wait Until 21 To Marry Without Parents' Consent?

DEAR HELEN:

The killing age is 18, the voting age will be 18 unless they challenge it so how come a guy must wait, in most states, until he's 21 before he can get married without parents' consent? And how come he can't sign a legal contract unless some adult co-signs? Or buy booze or be in a bar or gambling club?

I think they should make things simple by voting the age of majority in at 19 instead of 21 — and that means you're a total adult at 19, not just a half-way one. I say 19 because by that time most young people are out of high school and either in college or on their own. Age 18 seems too young, but if you aren't mature by 19, you aren't going to be much better by 21. — PERRY

DEAR PERRY:

Would you settle for age 20? There's already an organization dedicated to lowering the age of majority by one year. It urges those in favor to write their Congressmen. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

A reader asked what young people can do to help make our country something to be proud of again.

Well, there's an election coming up. If even 10 per cent of the students would get interested in politics and go out and work for their candidates — and inspire those candidates to keep up the good fight — we'd see a big change.

Also, it's up to the young to keep people interested in fighting pollution, poverty and bringing about peace. They can do it with a mass education program, fanning out into the community and talking to adults — the voters.

If our generation is interested in doing more than just screaming and complaining, they should unite and see how powerful they are. And they'd better not make their big push for peace because that scares the Establishment. Instead, I'm for joining the "environment party" and getting things done. We don't need the vote to influence others, as we have found out in the past. — JOHN

DEAR JOHN:

Hear, hear! But how many will? — H.

(P.S. Which reminds me of a Pat Paulson "lecture." He said the 18-year-old vote won't change things much "because the drinking age is still 21 and you have to be smashed out of your gourd to vote for any of their candidates." — H.

DEAR HELEN:

The other day at the beach I overheard two middle-aged women discussing a couple of long-haired boys. One said, "Look at that creep." The other answered, "Repulsive!"

Then I looked at these ladies. Their hair was bleached and frizzy. A cigarette hung from one's lips, and the other was drinking a can of beer. Their combined weight was about 300, and they had on bikinis. Talk about bulges!

Fitting Problems Of Skirts

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I recently made a scooter skirt but am unhappy with the way it bunches up between my legs when I walk. How can I avoid this annoying fault? I would love this type of skirt if I could correct the fit.

MRS. R. G.

DEAR MRS. R. G.:

Unfortunately, a skooter skirt must be fitted as carefully as slacks and can't be cut out the way you would cut a skirt. Your problem could be any one of several fitting problems; you might check them all. First, the crotch seam might be too long. Secondly, if your legs are slightly heavy, there is a chance you need more room in the leg width. Carefully check your measurements against your pattern to see where the variation appears.

Another point to remember is that they can't be fitted too loosely or they will also have a tendency to bunch up. Once you have worked the bugs out of your pattern, you will love making these skirts.

MRS. HAROLD D. Schmelling, Jamesville, N.Y., is this week's Tailor Trix winner for her sewing suggestion.

"When a hem has to be faced on a washable garment such as little girls' dresses, (and now suddenly mothers' dresses), I use gauze bandages. This lightweight material is pre-shrunk and comes in many different widths so you can use the one that fits your needs best."

DEAR EUNICE,

Please share via your column some instructions for fitting a pattern to a figure with a very slim derriere (in spite of a hip measurement of 36 inches). I am very flat below the waist in back. My skirts seem to want to "cup" in back.

MRS. P.T.M.

DEAR MRS. P.T.M.,

This can be solved to a large extent by your darts. As I have explained many times before, darts are an aid to fitting. The more shape you have in any one area, the deeper the darts must be. In your case, if you took a deep dart, it would naturally release too much fabric at the end of your dart for a flat measurement.

If two darts are used in your dress, you can possibly eliminate one altogether, if there is only one dart, reduce the width of it to about ¼-inch tapering to nothing at the hipline. You will probably now have excess fabric at the back of the skirt in the width and will have to take more of a seam allowance from the skirt back than the skirt front.

DEAR EUNICE,

I have been using a size 12 pattern, but now it seems to be too small in the bust and shoulder area. I haven't changed in weight so am at a loss as to what has happened. I did write to the pattern company, and they said they are substantially reducing the ease allowance in the bust and shoulder area and have increased the waist and hip allowance. I am about ready to try to learn to design my own clothes since the patterns are so little help.

MRS. W.A.

DEAR MRS. W.A.,

From your measurements, it seems to me that a size 14 would fit you much better in all areas. I think it is wise to carefully check the construction or style lines of a dress and then choose which of the two sizes would fit best for that particular pattern.

In recent years, the designers have created garments that fit much closer to the body and the bustline was greatly reduced. In fact, the first clue to this type of garment would be the amount of bustline darting. Some patterns actually eliminated any sign of a bust dart. You would naturally need more ease in this type of dress and perhpas would be better off in a larger size.

On the other hand with the return of the shirt type dress, which means much more looseness in the bodice area, you might be able to comfortably wear the smaller size pattern. This really isn't such a big, huge problem if you will just spend a little time trying to understand the amount of ease the designer intended for that particular garment.

Eunice Farmer discusses what size pattern to buy in her helpful booklet "Your Pattern and You." To obtain your booklet send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Sew Simple in care of the Independent-Journal.

Hair Style Showing Set

California Cosmetologists will attend a hair fashion show at the Hilton Hotel in San Francisco over Labor Day weekend.

The new hair fashions, designed by the Hair Fashion Committee of the California Cosmetologist Association, following the styling trends demonstrated by the national association, have a look of gentle elegance.

"California women like to display more freedom in their hair styles," according to Sallie Ponce Hantz, styles director. "Therefore we try to develop more flexible styles, that can express their individuality,".

A small head look will be empasized this fall, she said. Hair will not rise as high as in former years. And it will be softer, with pouf curls, providing a billowing effect. Poufs are also used instead of tight curls in front of the ears.

Falls are still in for evening wear, according to Miss Hantz.

The cosmetologists will also compete for honors in the creation of styles based on the current trend.

Nerve Gas Dump Delayed By Weather

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Atlantic storm has forced a 24-hour postponement in the Army's plans to dump 418 vaults of obsolete nerve gas off the Florida coast and the U.S. Court of Appeals has scheduled a hearing for Monday that could change the plans entirely.

The court agreed late Friday to hear the appeal of Florida Gov. Claude Kirk and the Environmental Defense Fund that the Army be prevented from sinking a World War II liberty ship hulk containing the gas 282 miles east of Cape Kennedy in 16,000 feet of water.

In accepting the appeal of Judge Green's decision, however, the court of appeals did not order the Army to cease preparations for the dump.

A spokesman said immediately the Army would proceed with its original plan, which called for the gas laden ship to be towed out of the Sunny Point, N.C., military terminal Sunday, arriving at the dump site at about dawn Tuesday.

But the operation was postponed 24 hours when the Navy decided Friday night that a big storm heading for the lower Bahama Islands could move into the dumping site by Tuesday.

"It's considered a big storm and it's moving fast and it poses a definite threat to the scuttling," said Lt. Cmdr. Jay Standiford, weather forecasters in Miami said the storm might develop into a full-blown hurricane.

The Florida governor and the environmentalists asked that the gas be dumped in shallower water, perhaps off the New Jersey coast where other such vaults have been sunk. They feared the crushing pressures of three miles of ocean water would crack the concrete and steel vaults and release their contents all at once.

Although the Army said sea water would neutralize the gas before it could do any harm to humans, Judge Green suggested to Army lawyers they pick a shallower spot just to be sure. She said it would be better for the gas to escape gradually so it would pose less of a danger to marine life.

Experts testified that sea water is one of the best agents for neutralizing the gas, but they conceded there would be more damage to marine life if the vaults broke open at once.

The Army admitted it made a mistake in encasing the rockets in concrete, but said there was no way now to detoxify them on land and it was becoming more dangerous to leave the deteriorating rockets on the surface.

A team of British experts sent to investigate the U.S. plans said Friday it was satisfied the disposal would cause no serious harm. They flew to the United States when England expressed to the U.S. embassy the concern of the governments of the Bahamas and Bermuda. The dumping spot is about 160 miles northeast of the Bahamas.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

The Unlicensed Can't Use Court

Some day a court may need your testimony in order to arrive at a just verdict in some trial.

There are three ways of giving testimony:

(1) By affidavit — a sworn statement;

(2) By deposition — a sworn statement including cross-examination by the other side; and

(3) At the trial itself by spoken questions and answers and cross-examination.

Many persons called to testify are afraid of taking an oath and testifying before an "audience," or of being tricked under cross-examination as in a movie or television "trial."

Anoyne, however, can be a good witness by following simple guidelines:

1. Tell the truth. You may have talked to others about the case, for example, the lawyer for the side you are with. Say so.

2. Testify in your own words. Do not memorize what you are to say. That is almost certain to sound rehearsed and possibly false.

3. Listen carefully to the lawyer's questions and answer directly.

4. If you make a mistake (who doesn't?), correct yourself at once. If you forget some detail, say so. Don't bluff or hedge.

5. Stop talking when the judge or attorney breaks in. Don't try to sneak in any answers. If you do, this could cause a mistrial.

Tell only what you actually saw, heard, or felt.

An "expert witness" such as a doctor or engineer may give his opinion. But as a rule, you cannot offer your opinion as evidence; you can only report facts you witnessed.

The witness is one of the keys to our system of justice.

Most cases turn upon a question of fact, which only a witness can answer. Because of his importance, the witness is subject to the law of perjury.

A false witness harms not just a single case, but he can also undermine the public's confidence in our courts as well.

Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.

Driver Suffers Cut On Head

A Corte Madera woman suffered a cut head in an auto accident in Kent Woodlands yesterday, the California Highway Patrol reported.

The highway patrol said a vehicle driven by Ronald G. Lee, 58, of 22 Granada Drive, Corte Madera, crossed the center line on Evergreen Drive and collided with a vehicle driven by Cecelia Ann Cavalier, 17, of Shady Lane, Ross, at 5:55 p.m.

The patrol said Mrs. Lee was taken to Marin General Hospital with a head cut.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

U.S. Has Eliminated Smallpox But Vaccines Must Continue

Not one proven case of smallpox has been seen in the United States for the last 15 years. This was accomplished thru extensive and routine use of smallpox vaccine. It has now been suggested that we stop vaccinations because there is no smallpox. Furthermore, too many people are developing reactions to the vaccine and deaths have occurred.

Between 1920 and 1930, more than 530,000 cases of smallpox with 4,790 deaths occurred in this country. A good vaccine was available but not enough people were immunized. Another 25 years elapsed before the incidence fell to zero and this took place only because our health authorities waged a persistent campaign for universal vaccination. Estimates show that 90 per cent of the population of the United States has been immunized.

TO STOP VACCINATING our children at this time would mean that, in a few years, a large segment of our population would be susceptible to the disease. This might not present a problem if we built a wall around our country and excluded all outsiders. In 1924, two men and a boy infected with smallpox in Winnipeg, Canada, traveled to Duluth, Detroit, and New Britain, Conn. They left in their wake 74,000 cases of smallpox with 1,270 deaths.

But jet air travel is not conducive to isolation and travelers from infected areas get into our country with ease. Our present vaccination policy is all that stands between us and smallpox.

IT IS TRUE that there are eight or nine deaths per year among the 14,000,000 people vaccinated annually. Some of these fatalities could have been prevented by following well known indications and contraindications for the use of the vaccine. Reactions are less likely to occur in children than in adolescents and adults, instead of stopping the procedure, we should use our know-how to develop a safer vaccine

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

SUSCEPTIBLE TO CYSTITIS

Mrs. T. K. R. writes: I've had three babies and each time, just before I'm due to go home, I develop a urinary infection and have to stay in the hospital for treatment. What do you suppose is wrong with me?

REPLY

Apparently your bladder is susceptible to infection. With each confinement, the infection is reactivated by catheterization and other procudures incident to delivery. Our leaflet on cystitis can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

TETANUA FROM CUT

L. D. Writes: How soon after getting a cut does lockjaw develop?

REPLY

If the wound is contaminated by the bacilli, tetanus develops within three days to four weeks. The sooner it occures, the more serious the disease, and vice versa.

COLD MILK

P. R. writes: Is it harmful to drink a glass of cold milk on top of a hot supper?

REPLY

No. The heat of the stomach will warm the milk in time. Some individuals develop abdominal cramps after drinking cold liquids but the discomfort usually in momentary.

Innocent Plea To Pot Haul

Five persons accused in the July 31 sale of 20 kilos of marijuana to narcotics agents pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin County Municipal Court.

Judge Peter Allen Smith set a preliminary hearing Sept. 22 for Eric de St. Aubin, 36, of no known address; Peter Lasoff, 25, of Mill Valley; Virginia Jane Lucas, 27, of San Anselmo; John Albert Lucas, 28, of Sausalito, and Gerald Keith Smith, 22, of San Anselmo.

In addition to the felony pot sale charge, various members of the group are accused of marijuana possession and possession of cocaine.

Hearing Set In Heroin Case

Preliminary hearing has been set for Sept. 1 in Marin Municipal Court for four young persons accused of being involved in a heroin sale at Second and B streets, San Rafael, on July 14.

The accused are Rae Dawn Hirsch, 21, of Lucas Valley; Dale Luther Johnston, 21, of San Anselmo; John Young, Jr., of San Quentin, and Deborah Jean Biesemier, 19, of Santa Venetia.

Charges of marijuana possession, heroin possession, conspiracy to possess heroin, and sale of heroin have been brought against the four in varying combinations.

Summer Fog Rolls Into Bay

The first banks of fog roll through the Golden Gate and, more slowly, over the Marin headlands on an early summer afternoon. The view from Vista Point on the Marin side of the Golden Gate Bridge changes with the fog and within hours will be obliterated by the gray dampness. In the distance the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge enters downtown San Francisco where skyscrapers appear above the fog. On the Marin side of the Golden Gate Bridge, disappearing in the fog, Horseshoe Cove and Fort Baker bask in the sunshine a while longer. Portions of the fort, which was established in 1866 as part of the Lime Point Military Reservation, may become part of a Golden Gate National Recreation Area if legislation introduced by Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District, passes. The fort was renamed in 1897 in honor of orator Edward Dickinson Baker, close friend of Abraham Lincoln, who was killed at the Battle of Ball's Bluff during the Civil War. Portions of the fort have already been acquired by the state as part of a projected Marin Headlands State Park. Above Horsehoe Cove and the military barracks, Highway 101 winds its way off the bridge and cuts across Fort Baker propertybefore disappearing into a hill.

Meet Shakespeare in Marin This Summer*

3 GREAT PLAYS

The Tempest
Taming of the Shrew
Henry V

JULY 17 - SEPT. 27

Plus six special performances of BRIGADOON
Aug. 18, 19, 25, 26; Sept. 1, 2

* If you haven't yet met Shakespeare it's time to meet the bard at Forest Meadows. He has been practicing magic for 350 years. Your chance, now, to see how.

The time is now to buy tickets to this spectacle under the stars . . . Marin County's own production of magic, color, action and great words.

It's enough that Shakespeare wrote these plays. But to see and hear them in the green of Forest Meadows Theatre (where even a stream flows past the stage) is a play itself on your imagination.

There will be 37 performances during the summer, plus six of the delightful, musical, BRIGADOON. This is rich fare and the dates will fit your plans if you simply plan to attend.

But be careful. DON'T let the days go by. Don't keep Shakespeare waiting - after 350 years! Decide that you must see him. Line up the family, your friends, even a theatre party. Then call the Festival Box Office, 456-1490 - certainly a magic number in entertainment.

If you do nothing else, meet Shakespeare in Marin this summer.

POPE GREETS GUEST — West German Chancellor Willy Brandt is received by Pope Paul VI during the Bonn leader's recent visit to Rome. Brandt presented the Holy See a check for $8,000 to be used for encyclical work. In a recent speech the Pontiff pointed out that the Vatican is running into a serious shortage of cash. It is not likely Brandt's gift will swell the coffers, but the Pope praised the gift in the spirit of giving. (German Features photo)

LACK OF CASH

Vatican In Financial Strain

VATICAN CITY (UPI) —The Vatican is seen by most persons as one of the richest institutions in the world, but according to Pope Paul VI it is hard up for ready cash.

"How easy it would be to demonstrate that the fabulous riches which from time to time public opinion attributes to the church, are often insufficient for the modest and legitimate needs of ordinary life," the Pope said in a recent speech.

In fact, some Vatican sources said the Pope may have been putting it mildly. They said the Vatican probably is undergoing a serious financial crisis.

The view of the Vatican as an enormously rich institution is not a mistaken one. But how is it possible to put a cash value on so much of its wealth? For example, take Michelangelo's sculpture of the Pieta or his paintings in the Sistine Chapel. Art dealers would balk at quoting even a rough estimate of their value.

The art treasures provide a source of income in that millions of visitors pay 500 lire (80 cents) a head to see them. But officials said most of this money is spent on upkeep of the museums. Another steady source of income—and like all Vatican earnings, never disclosed—is the sale of stamps.

The Vatican's chief financial interest is its stock holdings, worldwide and immense, but again secret. When the Vatican signed a concordat (treaty) with the Benito Mussolini regime in 1929, it received $40 million in compensation for the loss of papal territories and an even larger sum in Italian state bonds. This was the foundation for its stock portfolio, boosted by heavy investment in land and real estate.

But Vatican sources said the Roman Catholic Church has suffered along with most other investors in the general decline of stock values and they reported the Pope's financial advisers are planning to remove much invested capital to banks and other traditional forms of saving.

Another reason for this, the sources said, is that the Pope wants to avoid criticism frequently voiced here that by owning stocks in a certain company, the Vatican also controls the policies of that company.

As the Pope said, and Vatican sources back up, the church often is hard pressed to meet its everyday needs.

"We give with one hand what we receive with the other," Pope Pius XI once said.

The Vatican pays the wages of more than 1,000 employees and about 500 clerics who work for the Roman Curia, the church's central government. It recently sold stocks and real estate in Rome to give a 10 per cent increase to the employees. This church's rise from 500 million did not affect cardinals who, with a monthly salary of $900, are among the church's highest-paid servants.

The Vatican also helps finance the work of its missionary department, whose expenses increase with the expansion of the church in lands where the Sunday collection pickings are slim. The members to more than 600 million in the past decade is partly due to expansion in missionary areas.

But even diocesan areas which support themselves, such as the United States, are not providing the funds they used to, Vatican sources said. American bishops now tend to use their cash surpluses, if they have any, for helping social and urban problems in their own dioceses rather than send them to the Vatican, the sources said.

The Vatican maintains diplomatic representation in more than 60 countries, an expense which is questioned by many Catholics. Less in dispute is the Vatican's support of church charities, such as Caritas, and its attempts to alleviate suffering or promote development through such programs as the $1 million development plan it sponsored in Latin America last year. This was paid for by the sale of the former apostolic nunciature (embassy) in Paris.

Vatican sources said future large expenditures would have to be met by the sale of property or stocks, which would decrease the church's capital investment.

But the Pope said the church should be poor and also should be seen to be poor.

PRIEST SHORTAGE

Parish System In France Is Doomed

PARIS (Toronto News Service) — The Catholic Church in France is running very short of priests. One consequence is total reorganization of clergy, decided upon by a congress of French bishops and priests.

The traditional parish and the traditional parish priest are destined to disappear, together with the parish as the unit of church organization.

One member of the bishop-priest assembly said: "Most of our churches may very well become historical monuments".

Monseigneur Matagrin, bishop of Grenoble, did not hesitate to describe the decisions taken by the assembly as a revolution."

What is aimed at is a form of organization in which there will be a body of priests living together a communal life, each charged with one specific section or class of the faithful. The parish priest will lose much of his powers and will no longer be appointed to a parish for life.

One priest, for example, will deal with the working-class members of his region, another with the white-collar workers, another with executives, and so on.

The parish will be replaced by a larger area tended by a body of priests who will decide in common with the senior priest how their work is best to be undertaken.

In other words, Catholic priests will follow the modern trend in specialization. How this will affect the feeling of ordinary Catholics of belonging to one religious community remains to be seen.

This "away with old parishes" decision was accompanied by a decision to insist even more than in the past on the vow of celibacy. Some church observers had been hoping for a trend in the opposite direction.

During a mass in Lourdes, the famous miracle pilgrimage centre, Monseigneur Buyot, chairman of the episcopal commission of the Catholic clergy, exclaimed: "We say yes to celibacy freely consented". Some took this as meaning a liberalization of the celibacy condition. But he explained afterwards that he meant the exact opposite.

He explained that the French Catholic Church would in future only accept men as priests who not only submitted themselves to celibacy by discipline, but who wanted celibacy absolutely, as monks and other religious do.

France regards herself as a Catholic country, in which 95 per cent of adults declare themselves Catholic and baptized. But then comes the but. The great majority admit that they do not practice their religion regularly.

Most — 80 per cent of adults — still get married in church, but only 20 to 25 per cent go to mass every Sunday.

The decline in the number of priests has been going on steadily since the turn of the century. Seventy years ago there were 54,800 priests, or one for every 752 inhabitants. Today there are less than 40,000 priests, or one for every 1,200 inhabitants.

The priest shortage problem is not entirely new. Saint Augustune, bishop of Hippo (North Africa) was already complaining about the same thing around the year 400 A.D.

A public opinion poll taken last year indicated that 73 per cent of French adults believe in the existence of God, but a higher percentage does not believe in the existence of the devil or of hell.

A similar question showed that in the United States 60 per cent of the adult population believes the devil exists.

A New Way Minister Is Ordained

Rev. James E. Doop of Mill Valley was ordained last Sunday as a minister in The Way, a non-denominational Biblical teaching group.

The ceremony was conducted by officials from The Way Research Center of New Knoxville, Ohio.

Formerly a minister in the San Francisco Haight-Ashbury, he later spent time with a denominational operation in the Bay Area.

The Way's theological concept centers around two areas—teaching and daily Christian encounter.

Presently Doop is president of The Way West, which has two groups in Marin County.

A Tough Question: How To Tell Child About God

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religious Writer

"How do you tell a seven-year-old child what God is like?" asked a man who has one.

That's a tough question, as many conscientious parents have learned from experience. Children won't settle for dogmatic definitions, and abstract concepts such as "ground of being" or "first cause" have little meaning for them.

On the other hand, it's a grave mistake to offer them "childish" anthropomorphic concepts of God. Many people have become atheists because they never outgrew an early image of God as a bearded old man or an all-seeing and vindictive judge seated on a throne in a cloudland named Heaven.

Of course, all concepts of God are inadequate and therefore to some degree misleading. The best educated adult is no more capable than a young child of devising an image of God that will encompass His total reality.

So the problem boils down to choosing the images and analogies which are the least likely to mislead or confuse a child.

The New Testament offers two solutions.

One, suggested by I John 4:8, is to tell a child that "God is like your mother's love for you." You can't see it, or weigh it, or measure it, or assign it a shape or a location. But you know it's real, because you have experienced its effects.

In the same way, we cannot see God, or assign Him a particular shape or location, but we know He's real because we can see the effects of His activity as creator of the universe, author of its natural laws, and ultimate source of all love, truth and beauty.

Another analogy, often used by Jesus, depicts God as being like a good human father, only more so.

This concept of "Our Father in Heaven" must be very carefully presented to make sure a young child doesn't get the idea that God LOOKS like a man. The point, which Jesus' parables make wonderfully clear, is that God ACTS in his dealings with us in a father-like way.

Of course, if a child has never known a human father, or has been exposed only to a father who is harsh, indifferent, weak, wishy-washy or indulgent, this concept of God as father will mislead and dismay him.

The antidote is to explain that God is the kind of father that human fathers ought to be, if only they were good enough, wise enough and unselfish enough. And this explanation can be buttressed by using some of Jesus' own picture-stories, particularly the Parable of the Prodigal Son, which vividly reveal the loving, forgiving, accepting, caring character of the heavenly Father.

If a parent is lucky, his inquiring child will demand to know, at some point, "Where is God?" That's a door-opening question. It enables the parent to say that God is everywhere, like sunlight, but you are most likely to encounter His presence in your own heart where He makes Himself known as the Spirit of Love.

TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE

Dirk Gansloser of San Rafael slides home safely on a wild pitch, but his Holiday Magic team lost to Active 20-30 Club of Eureka, 3-2, yesterday in Joe DiMaggio Tournament at San Rafael's Albert Park. Holiday Magic later dropped its second game, 3-1, to Drake and was eliminated from further competition. Eureka pitcher covering play above is Eric Kahoalii.

OAKLAND (UPI) —At first Chuck Dobson was a little upset.

The talented and streaking Oakland righthander was pitching a four-hit shutout Friday night when Manager John McNamara decided it was time to make a change.

The fact the maneuver paid off in a 4-0 victory for the A's over the Baltimore Orioles and put Oakland only four games behind Minnesota satisfied in order Dobson, McNamara and Jim Grant.

"I like to finish anything I start," said Dobson, who with Grant's help, picked up his eighth straight victory and 15th of the year overall. "I didn't want to come out, but after Mudcat got out of the inning, I figured it was the right thing to do."

Dobson, who equalled his major league season high for victories, walked pinch-hitter Chico Salmon and gave up a sinlge to Don Buford. That put two men on with Paul Blair and Boog Powell the next scheduled batters and the A's ahead 3-0.

McNamara said he just had to take Dobson out.

"In that situation you have to think in terms of winning the game and not worry about any one individual," said McNamara. "Dobson pitched well enough and I figured he had come to the end of the line. Maybe I have to make that move today and it might backfire, but I can't think that way."

ONE THOUGHT

Grant said he had only one thought in mind when he came in and that "was to throw strikes and forget about the men on base. You have to think positive in a situation like that."

Grant, who gained credit for his 21st save, retired Blair on a soft fly to right and Powell on a roller to first.

Powell almost tied the score at 3-3 in the fifth when he also came up with two men on. He lined an inside fast ball 400 feet to right but the blow was foul by about five feet.

"I figured he (Powell) must have been upset he didn't get the homer," Dobson said, "So I threw him the very same pitch. Psychologically, a pitcher has the upper hand in that situation."

It worked, as Powell popped weakly to third. Those were the only serious threats the Orioles made.

HITTING HEROES

Rick Monday and Bert Campaneris were the hitting heroes as the A's made up their sixth game this week on the slumping Twins.

Monday drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly in the third and his ninth homer in the eighth. Campaneris had three singles, scored two runs and drove in one. Sal Bando drove in the other Oakland run.

Owner Charlie Finley finally let his emotions catch up with him. When the final out was made he jumped from his seat and raised his arm in a victory gesture.

"Things are starting to get a little warm," he said, and then made his way to the A's dressing room for a round of handshakes.

The A's have two tough games left with the Orioles, who are comfortably in front in the American League East race. Today, they faced Mike Cuellar (16-7) and on Sunday they go against Dave McNally (17-7). Oakland counters with Jim Hunter (15-9) and Diego Segui (7-8).

But things seem to be going Oakland's way of late and most of the A's now feel they can beat anyone. They got only three hits off Sam McDowell, Cleveland's talented flame thrower, Thursday and lost by only a run, 4-3.

"When you are going good a lot of things you couldn't do before suddenly become almost routine," said captain Sal Bando. "Maybe we won't beat Cueller and McNally but we'll give them a good run."

Wide Open PGA Scramble

By JOHN G. GRIFFIN.
UPI Sports Editor

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Dark horses Larry Hinson and Dave Stockton lead the field back into the pressure cooker for the third round of the PGA championship today, b ut Jack Nicklaus sounded the warning about what might happen at the steaming Southern Hills Country Club:

"You can make up four shots in one hole here."

Nicklaus took a spectacular fall from grace Friday as Hinson and Stockton, both playing in the relative cool of the morning, marched to identical 36-hole scores of even-par 140 to set the pace at the midway mark. Nicklaus, co-first-round leader, staggered through the afternoon steam-bath to a 77 and a 144 total.

Hinson, of Douglas, Ga., and Stockton, of Westlake, Calif., had a one-stroke lead over a trio of golfers at 141—Mason Rudolph, Hale Irwin, and Mike Hill, brother of controversial Dave Hill.

FORMIDABLE GROUP

But an even more formidable group at 142, only two strokes off the pace, included Masters champion Billy Casper, Dick Lotz, Arnold Palmer, and South Africa's Gary Player, who tied for the best score of the day on Friday with a 68 that included a string of four birdies.

Nine more golfers came at 143, including Julius Boros, wht won under identical hot conditions at San Antonio, Texas, 1968, and then came Nicklaus, defending champion Ray Floyd and five others at 144—the four strokes off the pace that Nicklaus mentioned in his warning.

PGA ON TELEVISION

The PGA was to be televised nationally today at 3 p.m. and again tomorrow at 2 p.m. by ABC.

Forecasts were for another day of blazing heat at Southern Hills, possibly matching the 100-degree high of Friday. And the heat continued to be a dominant factor in the play.

Hinson, starting in the morning, added a 71 to his first-round 69 for his 140 and Stockton tacked on his second straight 70. Then those two sat back and waited while first one and then another "big name" of the game tried to match that total and failed.

MILLER FADES

John Miller, young San Franciscan who shared the first-round lead with Nicklaus, faded first, eventually drifting back to 145. Nicklaus stumbled through an opening nine 39 and Palmer moved into a two-stroke lead.

Then Palmer took a double-bogey six on the 12th hole, being forced to stand knee deep in water to play one shot from the edge of the water hazard. Player made a big charge with a five-under-par 31 on the front nine as he birdied the second through fifth holes. And then Player faded in the heat of the afternoon to a back-nine 37.

But now the field has been cut to the low 70 and ties—and, with first teeoff at 10 a.m. CDT, there will be less disparity in the heat conditions faced by the contestants.

Chief casualty of the cut was U.S. Open Champion Tony Jacklin, who shot a 79 for a 153 total.

While many of the players constantly mopped their faces with water-soaked towels to beat the heat, Mike Hill said he found it tougher to stand around in the heat and wait than to actually play.

DIFFERENT MACHINE

"I don't know where the jam up was, why it took five hours to play a round," said Hill. "But those fellows who don't mind being out there that long have a different kind of machine than I have."

Gary Player, one of golf's original thinkers, didn't think the heat was too bad and didn't think it was responsible for his back nine woes.

"Heat shouldn't bother anyone of my age, 34, if they're in good condition, and I'm in good condition," said Player.

The South African star, who proved his point by toddling off for another long practice session after finishing his round, also had a word of dihagreement about the rough—it's too easy.

"They have rough on these courses and what happens the day before a tournament starts?" asked Player.

"They cut it. Never on the pro tour do we play a tough rough. That's wrong. If you make a bad putt, you are penalized. Then you should also be penalized if you make a bad drive."

No-No In DiMag Tourney

Drake of San Anselmo and Rohnert Park stayed alive, Holiday Magic of San Rafael lost some of its magic and a San Francisco lad pitched a no-hitter yesterday to highlight the Northern California Joe DiMaggio Baseball League's Northern California Regional Tournament at Albert Park, San Rafael.

Drake, playing with its back to the wall in this double elimination tournament after losing to Rohnert Park Thursday, came back to eliminate Holiday Magic, 3-1 last night.

Earlier in the day Holiday Magic lost its first game to the Active 20-30 Club of Eureka, 3-2, as Eureka's Eric Kahoali pitched a one-hitter.

Rohnert Park returned last night with a 6-4 victory over Meyers Safety Switch of the San Francisco Bay League. Earlier in the day the Rohnert Parkers were victims of a no-hitter pitched by Dave Weidinger of the San Francisco Beach League's Allied Cleaners in an 8-0 romp. Weidinger gave up a first inning walk that was erased on a double play, then retired the next 19 consecutive batters while striking out a dozen.

Today's schedule was to open at 3:45 p.m. with a battle of the unbeatens — Allied Cleaners vs. Active 20-30.

Then at 6 p.m. it will be Drake vs. Rohnert Park, the winner of which will return at 8:15 to oppose the loser of this afternoon's first game.

FINALS TOMORROW

The championship game will be played at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Wildness on the part of Holiday Magic pitcher Marty Moroski helped Drake win their All-Marin battle last night. Drake's two first inning runs came on walks to Damian Casalnuevo and Clifford Hall, two wild pitches scoring Casalnuevo and a triple by Mike Bauman scoring Hall. Drake made it 3-0 in the second inning when Steve Hale doubled home Cap Purcell who had walked.

Drake's John Moresco went the distance on the mound, striking out eight and walking one. Moroski struck out nine but walked four.

In last night's final game Rohnert Park was led to its 6-4 win over Meyers Safety Switch by Steve Temple who had three singles and a walk and one run batted in. The Sonoma County team had only five hits but capitalized on five Meyers errors, eight walks and two hit batters.

Sohner Blanks Defending Champs In State Softball

Morey Swarm pitched a one-hitter and Sohner Tree Service of San Anselmo scored twice in the bottom of the sixth inning to beat defending champion Stornetta's Dairy of Napa, 2-0, in the California State Softball Tournament before an overflow crowd in Napa last night.

The Treemen return to action at 9 o'clock tonight to battle Wilson and Russell Ford of Vallejo, a 6-1 conqueror of Petaluma's Greyview Farms Thursday.

All games in the 16-team double elimination tourney are played at Napa's Kennedy Park.

Swarm was the complete master last night as the talented righthander limited the Napa club to one infield single while fanning five. Only one ball was handled by a Sohner outfielder.

WINNING RALLY

Ron Blum popped out but Jess Munyon singled infield to send McCamish to third from where he scored on John Brookman's infield hopper.

A Midsummer's Nightmare As Colts Clobber Chiefs

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)—Tom Maxwell broke up a midsummer quarterbacks' nightmare Friday night with a 28-yard return of a pass interception for a touchdown, pushing the Baltimore Colts to a 17-3 exhibition football victory over the Kansas City Chiefs.

Maxwell's interception, with 12:01 to play, was one of eight in the game, five by the Colts and three by the Chiefs.

Kansas City's No. 2 signal-caller, Mike Livingston, was the victim, trying to lob a throw into the hands of Gloster Richardson in the flat.

The play, said Maxwell, a second-year pro from Texas A&M, "is always in the back of your mind. And they'd used it a few times, too."

The 195-pounder raced into the end zone untouched after picking off the pass.

"It was one of those kind that you have a good feeling about when you make it," Maxwell said when asked if he thought he would score.

Attempting to explain the rash of interceptions, he said, "It's still pre-season and sometimes the timing between the quarterbacks and receivers isn't perfect. Both defenses were playing fine, heads-up ball."

Veteran running back Tom Matte increased the score with two seconds to play when he crossed the goal line on a 28-yard sweep, eluding several tacklers.

Lou Michaels kicked a 17-yard field goal in the first quarter and the Chiefs' Jan Stenerud booted a 26-yarder in the second period to set the stage for Maxwell's decisive play.

Baltimore quarterback John Unitas played the first quarter, Jim Ward the second and third and Earl Morrall the fourth. The Chiefs used Len Dawson, Livingston, Jackie Lee and John Huarte. Dawson played the first 2½ quarters.

Said Baltimore coach Don McCafferty, "We got a chance to see the people we wanted to see and still beat an excellent football team."

Added Kansas City's Hank Stram, "We made too many mistakes. It's as simple as that. Defensively, I thought we played well enough to beat a team like Baltimore."

Raiders Get Nocturnal Tuneup Drill

Madden said he planned to split quarterbacking duties between Ken Stabler and Daryle Lamonica, as he did in the Raiders' opening exhibition loss to Baltimore, 33-21.

"We don't plan to play George Blanda," Madden said. "Pre-season is for game experience, and that's one thing George doesn't need."

Stabler, a left-handed passer, threw three TD passes in the Baltimore game. Stabler was 17 for 27 for 211 yards and was intercepted three times after Lamonica had functioned for the opening quarter.

Monday's game will be the first pro night game ever played at Philadelphia's Franklin Field, where Madden's Raiders will hold a light workout Sunday night immediately after stepping off their flight from Oakland.

A's Purchase Cincy Pitcher

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Oakland A's have purchased former New York Yankee relief pitcher Dooley Womack from the Cincinnati Reds to beef up the A's pitching staff for the stretch drive of the pennant race. Womack was to join the A's as quickly as he could get to Oakland from Indianapolis, where he has spent this season playing in the American Association.

MISS WALSH IN NATIONAL FINAL TODAY

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Top-seeded Sharon Walsh, the defending title holder, and fourth-seeded Eliza Pande Friday entered the final round of the U.S. girls' 18-and-under grass court tennis championships.

Miss Walsh, of San Rafael, Calif., defeated sixth-seeded Marcelyn Louie of San Francisco, 6-4, 6-0.

Miss Pande, of Palo Alto, Calif., won her semifinal by 6-3, 7-5 over second-seeded Janet Newberry of LaJolla, Calif.

Detroit Batters Buffalo

It was an almost too-familiar scene for Rauch, Wilson and the Bills. The disappointments of the old season were spilling into the new. The Detroit Lions had just vanquished Buffalo, 22-6 in a game that was too similar to the New York Jets' 33-10 romp a week earlier.

"We are not ready in a lot of posts," Rauch told newsmen. "We have to put combinations together. We have put the pieces together."

Running back O.J. Simpson agreed: "We made too many little mistakes."

23 Innings And Giants Get Nowhere

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—It took the San Francisco Giants 23 innings to go nowhere.

After splitting a doubleheader with the St. Louis Cards Friday night—losing the 13-inning opener 2-1 and recouping the nightcap 5-4—the Giants are still three games under the elusive .500 mark.

Now 20 1-2 games off Cincinnati's pace in the National League West, the Giants must reach for humbler goals. But even balancing the season's wins and losses is an elusive target for the Giants, as something always seems to go wrong.

In Friday's nightcap, however, the Giants pulled things back together and edged past the Cards on Bobby Bonds' 10th inning Texas-leaguer which eluded the groping gloves of three Cards and scored Frank Johnson from first base.

Bonds also knocked in the Giants' first run of the nightcap with a double and drove home his team's only run in the opener with a single.

Don McMahon, who was tagged with the loss in the opener, won the second game to boost his record to 8-4.

The Giants battled back in the nightcap to tie the score at 4-4 in the eighth when pinch-hitter Dietz walked and pinch-hitter Ron Hunt clobbered his sixth homer of the year. Ken Henderson had connected for his 14th homer in the seventh to bring the Giants to within striking distance.

In the opener, Julian Javier scored the winning run from third after Dietz fielded Joe Hague's sacrifice bunt and fired the ball low and wide of third baseman Jim Hart.

Marin's Ray Leach Eyes The Masters

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Not one to set his goals too low, golfer Ray Leach, home in Novato between semesters at Brigham Young University, has his sights set on the Masters, golf's premier tournament.

But first things first.

There's the qualifying round for the National Amateur tournament Aug. 17 at Silverado Country Club in Napa, and if he qualifies, the national tourney itself at Portland, Sept. 1.

Top eight winners in the national amateur earn spots in the Masters, and in the golf world, baby, that's where it's at.

Leach, now older (20) and wiser since blazing through a high school career of fantastic golf in the Marin County Athletic League, will be a junior when he returns to the BYU campus at Salt Lake City.

In his freshman year at BYU he was named a third team All-American golfer and moved up to second team All-American his sophomore year. He expects nothing less than first team All-American honors his junior and senior years.

RAY LEACH
Has high hopes

HONORARY MEMBER

A scratch golfer since the age of 14, Leach is playing his golf these days at Olympic Club in San Francisco where he has had an honorary junior membership since age 16. His early golfing was at Indian Valley Golf Club in Novato, where his father, Al, is manager and part owner.

If you could use that old expression — walk on the course softly and use a big club, or something like that — that would fit Leach. He doesn't get rattled easily. He's got a perfect temperament for the professional golf tour, which he will most likely join after college days are over.

NOW'S TIME

In his freshman year at the Utah college, Leach tied for second in the NCAA tournament and this past season finished third. It's now time for him to win it all, he feels.

Among his accomplishments when in the junior ranks were championships in the Northern California Juniors, California State titles in 1966 and '67, and runner-up honors in the 1966 national juniors.

He's the first to admit to showing no emotions on the golf course. While the 18 handicappers are throwing clubs and kicking trees, Leach methodically takes his swing and marches up for his next shot.

MECHANICAL THING

"As long as I'm playing well, nothing will rattle me," he said. "Golf is a mechanical thing with me. I learned early in the game that you have to have the right mental attitude, then it's just a matter of putting what you have to work."

A communications major, taking courses in advertising and public relations, Leach readily admits playing on the university's golf team has an adverse effect on his grades.

"During November through March there's no golf, just snow," he said. "But in the spring and summer my grades definitely drop. We have tourneys almost every week and some last three and four days. It really gets tough keeping up the grades."

When Leach was 14 he tied the Indian Valley course record with a 64 and then at 18 he broke it with a sizzling nine under par 62. At 17 he became the youngest golfer to ever win the San Francisco City Golf Championship. Ray's birthday is 28 days sooner than Ken Venturi, who was also 17 when he won the city crown in 1950.

And you know how far Venturi has gone in the game of golf.

Injury Riddled 49ers Get Baptism Of Fire Tonight

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers hope to start on the long road back tonight when they open their National Football League exhibition season here against Cleveland.

The Prospectors suffered through a dismal exhibition campaign in 1969 and then were a disastrous 4-8-2 in the regular season. This year coach Dick Nolan admits he will be trying a little harder for victories in the pre-season play to give his charges a winning feeling.

To prove it, he has announced that regulars John Brodie and Steve Spurrier will share quarterback duties and has named a mostly-veteran lineup to open. First-round rookies Cedrick Hardman and Bruce Taylor should see plenty of action on defense, however.

The 49er defense is injury-riddled for a team that has yet to face an opponent. Stan Hindman has not received clearance following a 1969 knee operation, while Tom Hart, Bill Belk and Dave Wilcox all have injuries that could keep them out of action, too. Linebacker Skip Vanderbundt is off for two weeks of service duty.

A crowd of 40,000 is expected to sit in on the contest.

The Browns have announced they will give Don Gault a long look at quarterback in this one. He was on the taxi squad last season but looked sharp in Cleveland's 30-17 loss to Los Angeles.

TV COVERAGE

Tonight's game will be seen on delayed video tape at 8 o'clock over television channels 2 and 13.

Pro Gridder Fails Physical, Leaves Oilers

HOUSTON (UPI) — George Rice, a former Louisiana State star, has refused to sign a letter relieving the Houston Oilers of any further responsibilities for his injuries and he will try to play for another professional football team.

Rice, a 6-3, 260-pound tackle, failed his physical and left the Oilers' training camp at Kerrville Friday.

Rice said he was angry with owner Bud Adams and vice president John Collins for trying to persuade him to sign the injury waiver clause.

Rice, 26, joined the Oilers in 1967 and became a starter the next year. He suffered a knee injury in November of that year and underwent two operations and missed last season.

Rice is now a free agent but the Oilers can call him back at any time before Oct. 15 for another physical even if he joins another team.

Sports Driver Badly Injured

Knight's car, traveling close to 100 mph, shot off the winding 2.3 mile track past a fast curve Friday and slammed into a dirt bank.

A Frantic Week For Twins As Huge Lead Evaporates

By VITO STELLINO
UPI Sports Writer

This has been a lost week for the Minnesota Twins.

Just last Saturday the Twins beat Oakland for the second straight game to move nine games ahead of the California Angels and 10 ahead of the A's in the Western Division race.

It was starting to look like a runaway until the Twins lost a doubleheader to Oakland on Sunday and were beaten by the A's again on Monday. Three straight losses to the Washington Senators on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday stretched the losing streak to six.

The streak was extended to seven straight Friday night when the Twins took an 8-1 lambasting at the hands of the Boston Red Sox. The Twins have a day-night doubleheader set with the Red Sox today and have a shot at the unenviable feat of losing nine straight games in a week.

DOWN TO FOUR

Meanwhile, in just six days, the nine game lead is down to four. Oakland beat Baltimore 4-0 to move within four games of the Twins while California downed Detroit 7-3 to get within 4½ of the staggering leaders.

In the other games, New York nipped Kansas City 3-2 in 10 innings, Washington beat Chicago 6-5 in 10 innings and Milwaukee downed Cleveland 4-3 in 11 innings.

Minnesota couldn't get Carl Yastrzemski out while losing to the Red Sox. He walked three times, hit a two-run homer and a run-scoring single to boost his league-leading average to .331. Rico Petrocelli added a solo homer. Ray Culp pitched a nine-hitter to get the win as he stranded 10 Twins.

A three-run homer by winning pitcher Clyde Wright and a two-run homer by Tommie Reynolds carried California past Detroit. Wright gained his 16th victory although he was lifted in the seventh. Mickey Lolich took the loss.

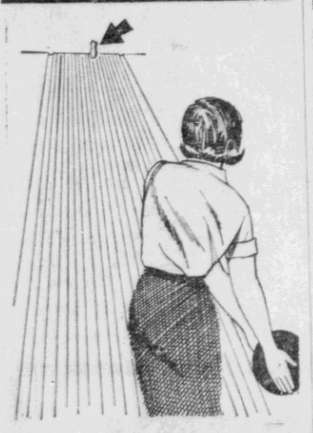
BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG



I've frequently seen a bowler tick off what she thought was a one-pin spare only to find another stick standing. That's something that will hurt you and your teammates. Make it a habit to check for hidden pins when you go to the ball return.

St. Louis Cardinals Purchase Bertaina

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals today bought Frank Bertaina from Rochester of the Baltimore Orioles farm system, it was announced by club officials.

Bertaina, 26, compiled a 12-3 record with Rochester this season. The lefthander will replace Al Hrabosky, who was optioned to the Cards' Arkansas farm team.

Adopt Simplest Assumption: Opponent Is Acting Normally

It pays to assume that your opponents are acting normally unless your contract depends on the assumption that they are doing something unusual. I could probably clarify that complicated idea with six or seven hundred words, but it's easier to do so with a single bridge hand.

Opening lead — ♣ 8

NORMAL ACTION

In one of the qualifying matches between Taiwan and Norway at the world championship a few weeks ago, the Chinese West led the eight of clubs. Like most experts the Chinese avoided leading the top of a three-card suit. If West was acting normally, this eight of clubs was almost surely the top of a doubleton.

Nevertheless, South cashed two high clubs to discard a spade from dummy, and then tried to cash a third high club. This maneuver met with the success it deserved.

West ruffed with the seven of hearts, and dummy had to overruff with the jack. Now declarer led the ten of spades from dummy. East played low, and South had to guess what to do. He guessed wrong, and lost the trick to the queen of spades.

NO RECOVERY

There was no recovery from this unfortunate guess. West led a spade to the ace, and East returned the ten of clubs to make dummy ruff. Now West was sure to get a trick with the king of trumps, and East had to get his ace of diamonds.

LEAD DIAMOND

After winning the first trick with the king of clubs, South should lend a diamond at once. If East wins and returns a spade, South may make his contract even if he guesses wrong; he may lose only two spades and one diamond.

In short, South could make his contract if he assumed West's opening lead was an ordinary doubleton. There was no need to play the hand in an upside-down style, creating a way for the defenders to beat him.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ — J 10 6
♥ — A J 6
♦ — K Q 9 7 4 2
♣ — 4.

ANSWER: Pass.

The hand is not quite good enough for an opening bid. If your diamonds were headed by K-Q-J and you didn't have the jack of spades, you might open because then your jack would have real value. In the actual hand, the jack of spades is of doubtful value.

UC Research: Insects Don't React To Radio

University of California engineers have at least partly laid to rest an old and enduring belief among a number of entomologists — that insects communicate by a form of radio.

Charles Susskind, professor of engineering science at Berkeley and an authority on radio waves, and graduate student Henry S. Hsiao report after two years of research that while insects are equipped for infrared reception they do not respond to it.

Haley's Tragic Death Stirs Memories Of Another Break

THE TRAGIC KIDNAPPING and murder of Judge Harold Haley by San Quentin convicts bent on escape stirred the memories of certain old-timers among us.

Momentarily they were whisked backward in time to Jan. 16, 1935.

The State Prison Board was having lunch at the home of San Quentin Warden James B. Holohan. Mrs. Holohan and her sister were present.

Suddenly, two armed convicts came in a back door and "covered" the group with their guns. The warden darted out another doorway to give the alarm. In the hallway he ran into two more armed convicts who beat him unmercifully, fracturing his skull. He nearly died.

After arguing among themselves briefly over whom to take as hostages, the four convicts paused to exchange clothes with prison board members. Then they marched four prison board members — president Frank Sykes, former president Warren Atherton, secretary Mark Noon and member Joseph Stephens — out the front door and into the warden's car. Two prison guards were forced to join the party, one as driver.

OUT THE PRISON gates they drove, with a car load of prison guards in pursuit. No one fired a shot — yet.

Into San Rafael and onto Highway 101 they went, heading north to the Black Point Cutoff.

Prison officials, the California Highway patrol and then-sheriff Walter Sellmer all had called the Black Point draw bridge (over Petaluma River) to make sure it was raised, cutting off the fleeing car's escape.

When the speeding convicts and their hostages reached the bridge and perceived the trap, they stopped and ordered prison board secretary Mark Noon out of the car. He was directed to hike back and flag down the carload of armed officers following and warn them to allow the fleeing convicts to double back — or the hostages would be killed.

Noon did as he was told; the pursuers held their fire as the warden's car carrying escapees and hostages passed in the opposite direction.

The lawmen took up the chase again and pursued the fleeing convicts to Novato and then onto the Novato-Hicks Valley Road ultimately to Tomales.

ON JANUARY 16, 1935, Dist. Atty. Albert E. Bagshaw had been in office only nine days. He was in Tomales to prosecute a case in Justice Court there. He had driven out with Undersheriff Edmund (Bud) Blum; and their car had suffered a broken axle and they were temporarily stranded in Tomales after court adjourned.

A telephone call from San Rafael informed them of the prison break and indicated the escape car was apparently headed for Tomales.

Bagshaw borrowed a gun from Blum who carried several in his car.

Soon the car bearing escapees and hostages arrived. Bagshaw ordered firing confined to the tires only so as not to endanger the hostages.

At least one tire was flattened and the getaway car continued toward Valley Ford.

Not far behind was a car carrying Sonoma County Undersheriff Mike Flohr and an armed posse from Santa Rosa. Bagshaw and Blum climbed aboard to pursue the escapers whom they rapidly overtook.

THE ESCAPE CAR turned off a side road to the Valley Ford creamery. The would-be escapees jumped from the car and ran into the creamery buildings.

"Look out, Al," shouted the undersheriff.

Gun at the ready, Bagshaw whirled and fired.

The leader of the escape, convict Rudolph B. Straight, 34, fell dead. He had been described as hating everybody. He had a record of previous escape attempts while serving time for a Berkeley bank robbery.

The other three surrendered meekly.

PRISON BOARD MEMBERS Sykes and Stephens were wounded by gunfire but recovered, as did Warden Holohan, who was treated by Dr. Leo L. Stanley, then prison surgeon.

Harold Haley was a deputy district attorney under Al Bagshaw then. Clinton Duffy, later to become San Quentin's most famous warden, was secretary to Warden Holohan.

State Sen. Charles Reindollar, San Rafael, headed a legislative inquiry into the break. Gov. Frank F. Merriam called for an overhaul of the parole system. (A parolee had smuggled the gun into the prison for the escapers.)

San Rafael Police Chief Sabin Kane spoke before the 20-30 Club to declare that steps should be taken to provide better protection against prison breaks.

The San Rafael Independent enjoyed a two-hour news beat bringing the whole story to its readers.

Dist. Atty. Bagshaw, assisted by his deputy, Harold Haley, prosecuted the would-be escapers under the "Little Lindbergh Law" of California.

One convict pleaded guilty to a lesser charge. He subsequently was paroled. But he lived to violate parole, go back to prison and die in a later escape attempt from Folsom.

The other two pleaded innocent, were tried and convicted. After appeals were denied, they were hanged — the last two persons executed by hanging before the gas chamber was installed at San Quentin.

Wonder what will happen to the lone survivor of this most recent tragic escape attempt?

—Jack Craemer

Nostalgic Floral Note

Amaryllis lilies are blooming all over Marin and Sonoma counties each August. This South African native has blossoms which resemble regal lilies, but are a bright pink in color.

Before the days of much public nudity, it was considered vaguely naughty to call them 'naked ladies.' Their fleshy color and the fact that the flowers are borne on bare stems months after the leaves have turned brown and withered, lends credibility to the naked part. Ladies — well — those old-timers had romantic notions, too.

Bouquets And Brickbats

A BOUQUET of deep gratitude and appreciation to Paul Zensius on the occasion of his retirement from the California Highway Patrol after 28 years of service to all of us. We will be fortunate if the new crop of highway patrolmen produces even a few of his rare, dedicated kind. May his retirement be long and enjoyable.

A BRICKBAT to Larkspur City Mgr. Kent Bathurst who told the I-J one week that his city was NOT working on a ferry terminal plan but then presented one to the Golden Gate Bridge board the following week. An explanation is called for, obviously.

BOUQUETS to the organization known as Friends of Sonoma State who are seeking to raise funds to support the athletic program at Sonoma State College, in dire straits after the Associated Students voted to disband, thereby ending student body financial support for sports. May the Friends' efforts succeed.

A BOUQUET with best wishes for success to Earl W. Jones, just appointed acting president of Sonoma State College. He apparently will need everybody's best wishes and then some; even before he officially took over, a group of former student body officers met to pledge resistance to his administration.

Reader Hits High Tax Rate In Hub

The San Anselmo tax rate has been set at $2.59 — Corte Madera's is 99 cents, Novato's is 75 cents, Fairfax's is $1.74, Belvedere's is $1.70.

Those San Anselmo citizens who have loudly acclaimed they hope the County will reduce its tax rate but don't care if San Anselmo raises theirs may have been the very ones instrumental in helping to keep our rate the second highest in the County!

Only three miles of our streets have been paved in the last 5 years while our Public Works Department accumulated our gas tax funds and blew the whole wad on the Hub. (Does it really cost a quarter of a million dollars to signalize an intersection?)

Now, with no backlog of gas tax funds the property owners of San Anselmo are having to put up over $200,000 to pave 5 miles of streets in this next year. Did these streets SUDDENLY deteriorate or have they been neglected all along because our Engineer and certain city councilmen were selfishly pushing through their pet scheme?

And three of our councilmen have insisted that $57,000 remain in the budget for a "master plan" supposed to cost $114,000 although the Federal government has just turned the plan down. But, as Mr. Reed said at one budget session, it ($57,000) will stay in the budget "because it would be too difficult to explain this to the people all over again."

How naive and apathetic are San Anselmans supposed to be?

Key Club Offers New Paper Drive

Our society is concerned about our environment, and justifiably so. Yes, there is a lot of talk going around about improving our environment, but very few people do anything about it. That's why it's so very important to become involved and contribute to local conservation projects. Paper drives are types of projects available to everyone. The papers collected are recycled, thus saving our trees.

There are a few paper drives in operation around our county but a relatively new and unknown paper drive has recently been started for the residents who live in or around the San Rafael area. This new paper drive is being sponsored by the San Rafael High Key club, a Kiwanis sponsored youth organization. Drop-offs may be made at the San Rafael Corporation Yard, on Lincoln just south of 2nd, any day between 8 and 4. Thanks very much.

Brothers Protest Island Development

My brother, 9, and I, 11, wish to protest against overdevelopment of the Santa Venetia Island. We want you to realize that there are many kinds of wild life living there. There are owls, gopher snages, caccoons, rabbits, egrets and other sea birds. If you allow too much building, all these creatures will be homeless.

There are already too few areas where wild life can live and multiply.

Marin's Tragedy Points To Burger's Courtroom Plea

The weird gun battle that took the lives of a California judge, two convicts and a man seeking to free them has provided terrifying validation of the condemnation which, by bizarre coincidence, Chief Justice Burger was delivering that same day of "unseemly, outrageous episodes" in courtrooms.

Even in retrospect, it seems inconceivable that a confederate could invade a courtroom while two prisoners were on trial, pull weapons out of a flight bag and cow all the assembled forces of the law. But the self-identification of the three as "revolutionaries" makes it impossible to divorce their action from the incidents the Chief Justice was deploring — incidents in which defendants who have abandoned all respect for the judicial process do everything in their power to discredit and destroy it.

It is nonsense to imply, as did one critic of the Burger remarks at the American Bar Association convention in St. Louis, that those who insist on decorum in the courtroom are endeavoring to set the stage for "a declaration of martial law" that would stifle the rights of accused persons. This is a classic case of shifting the fault from the offender to the offended.

The surest way to turn courthouses into garrisons, replete with all the trappings of a police state, lies in systematic efforts by militant foes of the Established order to upset it by outbreaks in the courtroom, whether in the form of mass demonstrations or other contemptuous behavior.

The horrible armed invasion that shattered San Rafael's Superior Court is eloquent evidence that Justice Burger's concern is abundantly warranted. The American court system requires civilized conduct on the part of everyone —prosecutors, defendants, lawyers, court personnel and spectators — if it is to fulfill its essential mission of protecting the rights of all Americans, including those who want to make America over in a new image. — New York Times

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

"INTELLECTUAL man," speculates Tom Prideaux, "possibly has become too much of an explaining creature. Villains without motives, however, can still excite us in Shakespeare, on Broadway, or in fairy tales. When St. George slays the dragon, who wants to hear the beast explain with his dying puffs of fire, "It wasn't really my fault. I'm maladjusted. My mother ran off with a sea monster?' I believe we need frequent vacations from explanations."

Berkeley's Calm Now, But Peace Candidates Lose! What Then?

BERKELEY—This is the advance post for the student revolution that has swept the country. The turmoil at Berkeley and at others of the nine campuses of the university of California is embedded in the politics of the state and the nation.

The revolution is producing a deeply rooted counter-revolution on the fight. This is the reason, in the view of most politicians of whatever persuasion, that Gov. Ronald Reagan will be reelected in November by a majority at least as large as that of four years ago when he was unknown except as a movie and television performer.

IT SEEMS TO matter little that the governor has failed to carry out the two principal promises he made in the 1966 campaign. One was to keep taxes down. He is engaged in a prolonged hassle with the Legislature over passage of his tax program after having added a billion dollars onto the state's tax bill.

His second promise was to clean up the mess in Berkeley. Bricked-up bank windows, plywood covering shattered glass in ships, university buildings badly damaged—the evidence is overwhelming that the mess is still a mess. In the process of trying to clean it up the university has become a political football with the struggle going on in the board of regents.

CONSERVATIVE regents — and perhaps Reagan, an ex-officio member — would like to remove Chancellor Roger Heyns who presides over the vast structure with its 106,000 students. They say he is too permissive and they would like to replace him with a tough administrator who would crack down on all forms of dissent.

The regents' sessions have come to resemble not so much football as the outlawed sport of bear baiting. The liberals bait Reagan and Reagan baits them back.

Berkeley's probelem is complicated by the non-students, the hippies who came here from all over the country, attracted by the climate and the subculture of drugs and sex. In this off-season with summer school ended, University officials estimate that 4,500 are holed up in the warrens along Telegraph Avenue. In the fall with the opening of the new term the number will grow to 6,000 or 7,000.

RECENTLY the Berkeley police rounded up 580 juvenile runaways, some only 13 or 14, and returned them to their homes in a dozen states, chiefly in the Midwest. The student newspaper, The Daily Californian, published an indignant editorial calling this a violation of civil liberties which would further increase polarization and precede disorders that "will make previous riots lok like debutante balls."

There is a suspicion here that the President's Commission on Campus Unrest with William W. Scranton as its chairman, is out to discredit the university and pin a label of destroyer on Reagan. William French Smith, chairman of the board of regents, was indignant when he was given only 24 hours notice to appear before the Scranton commission in Los Angeles. One witness to appear was the university chief of police, William Beal. He submitted a list of 68 disorders over eight years, ranging from demonstrations to repeated fire bombings of town and university property.

PREDICTIONS of what will happen in September are hard to come by. While the university is not granting students time off to work in the congressional elections, there will be a lot of activity.

When peace candidates fail of elections, as seems likely, the test would come. Then the revolutionists will say: "You see the system doesn't work, and so we must destroy it."

Parent Says, 'Because I Said So!' So, No Generation Gap In Tahiti

TAHITI — At first glance Tahiti and the surrounding islands live up to their reputation as being an earthlike paradise. But after a week you notice many things wrong.

It's sad to report but Tahiti lacks many of the refinements that Americans are used to.

For example, during the 10 days we spent in Polynesia there was not one smog alert. I kept inquiring about smog, but only got blank stares from the natives. The simple souls didn't even know what smog was, which shows you how far behind the times the Polynesians still are.

ANOTHER THING that struck me was the fact that none of the dancers out here are topless. The Tahitian dancers prefer to wear bras to going bare, and an Americna tourist can make a fortune selling photos of Los Angeles go-go dancers to the natives, who are shocked that we allow our women to dance with nothing on.

It takes a few days for an American to get used to dancers wearing bras, but after awhile you stop staring and it doesn't bother you at all.

One of the things that strikes you about Tahiti is the noise, which is deafening. The wind blowing through the palm trees, the surf crashing against the coral and the constant flapping of the sails in the breeze is more than a person can stand. It's no wonder after a few days of this that a person longs for the quiet and solitude of New York City or Cleveland.

ANOTHER THING that hits you is the lack of formality in clothing. The women out here are not even conscious that the midi is now in fashion and they are still wearing their sarongs above the knees. They also insist on wearing flowers in their hair.

One is amazed to see men without coats and ties in restaurants and bars. A tourist can't help wondering what on earth the missionaries have been doing all these years.

I am sorry to report that when you leave the main island of Papeete, there is no television. The only entertainment available on Bora Bora and Moorea and Raitaea is provided by the natives who sing and dance until early hours of the morning.

IT'S HARD TO believe that any civilization can survive without Johnny Carson or Laugh In, but somehow the Tahitians manage to do it.

At the same time, you can see the effects the lack of television has had on the natives. They have no idea which detergent contains the most active ingredients: they don't know which shampoo will add luster to their hair. They have no clue as to what works faster than aspirin, and they don't even know what mouth wash to use when someone accuses them of bad breath.

The only thing the Tahitians have going for them, as far as we could tell, is that there is no generation gap.

A YOUNG MAN does not argue with his father when he's told he can't borrow the outrigger canoe. A young girl must be in her hut by 10 o'clock at night.

How do Tahitian parents manage to wield this control over their children? They attribute it to a secret Tahitian phrase that has been passed down through the generations. When a child asks why he cannot do a certain thing, a Tahitian parent always replies, "No te mea ua parau vau mi tera." Translated in English, it means "Because I said so."

Interest Rising In Mass Transit

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Mass transit, long ago jilted by the automobile-loving public, may be on the verge of a nationwide comeback.

On a downhill curve since World War II, the bus, the subway, and the commuter train now are being touted as the answer to such critical urban problems as smog and traffic jams.

This revival of interest in mass transit comes none to soon. Since 1945, transit fares have tripled, but the number of passengers has dropped by one-third. Over 235 bus and subway firms have gone out of business.

Two things combined to give mass transit a second chance. One is growing government support for mass transit projects. The other is a spate of innovative ideas on how to move commuters with speed and comfort.

At the top of the idea list is the tracked air cushion vehicle. Propelled by an electric motor, this train-like vehicle rides over a guideway on a thin cushion of air and is capable of speeds up to 300 miles an hour.

Futuristic? Not at all. France already has tested a working model. The Federal Railroad Administration begins its own tests next year at Pueblo, Colo.

By late 1972, a 150-mile-an-hour version of the air cushion vehicle may be in operation between the Los Angeles International Airport and the San Fernando Valley.

Ever hear of a gravity train? The Transportation Department is investigating the prospect of using these so-called tube trains for mass transit and city-to-city travel. Operating as much as 1,500 feet underground, the trains would roll downhill to stations, and then use a combination of acquired momentum and vacuum pressure to climb uphill.

Then there is the "SkyBus" system being used for Pittsburgh commuters. Rolling on overhead tracks, the SkyBus cars tie downtown Pittsburgh to an outlying suburb. SkyBus is designed to be fully automated and controlled by a computer.

Other cities are using so-called "people-movers" to keep traffic moving from point to point in downtown areas and around massive airport terminals. The "Dashaveyor," for example, consists of small, electric-powered units capable of carrying six to 24 passengers over a track at speeds of 80 miles an hour. It is being considered for use at a new Dallas airport.

Braniff Airlines already is using its own people-mover in Dallas. Called the "Jetrail," it is a monorail system which carries passengers from parking lot to plane gate. Suspended from an overhead rail, Jetrail cars can carry 2,000 persons an hour in each direction. It is equipped with passenger-operated destination buttons like those used in an elevator.

A passenger arriving at Dallas stops in a special lounge and telephones for his car, left in the parking lot when he departed. By the time he arrives at the parking lot in his Jetrail car, his own car is waiting for him.

In fast-growing San Jose, Calif., officials are considering a Goodyear-developed transit system called "Carveyor." Each Carveyor mini-car can seat from two to 10 persons. The cars ride on a constantly moving belt, and the system operates on an escalator-like principle —Carveyors are always available at loading stations just as escalator steps are always ready.

While such exotic forms of transportation may be more eye-catching, for all but the largest cities in the United States, rapid transit usually means bus transportation.

But like the car, the bus is the victim of traffic jams.

One solution to this is the reserved highway lane for buses. For example, under a federal-state project, one lane of Interstate 95 leading into Washington, D.C., from suburban Virginia is now used exclusively by commuter buses during rush hours.

Carrying tie same idea one step farther, the Transportation Department is studying the possibility of funding a test project that would let car pools share the reserved bus lane.

One of the most revolutionary ideas for buses is the "Dial-a-Bus" system. Scheduled to begin next year in the town of Haddonfield, N.J., it responds to demands from customers who will use a telephone or a push-button sidewalk call box. A computer center will direct the buses over new routes to pick up waiting passengers.

In Washington, D.C., another computerized system is being installed which will allow a bus driver to "call for a green light" to speed his way through traffic. New York and Dallas already have computerized systems which gear traffic lights to the changing flow of traffic.

Even the commuter himself is leaving his mark on bus transportation. In Reston, Va., a Washington, D.C., suburb, commuters charter their own buses and run an express service downtown, complete with drinks for homeward bound commuters.

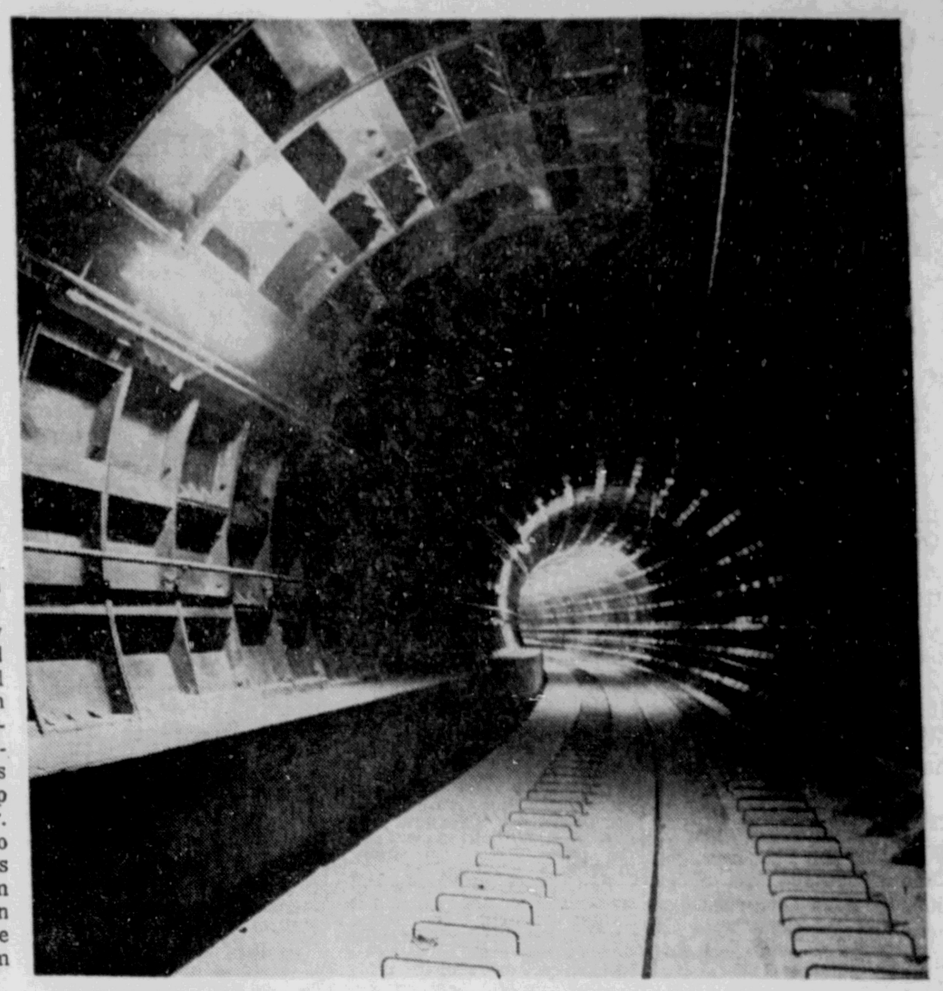
The subway, however, still is the only practical way to move large numbers of people rapidly through congested metropolitan areas. Washington is building a new subway system. In San Francisco, the 75-mile Bay Area Rapid Transit, scheduled for operation in 1972, will provide modern cars with automated fare collection systems based on distance traveled. Chicago is making plans to replace its famed Loop elevated system with a subway.

The fuel for the drive to overhaul the nation's mass transit system is coming from the federal government. Nixon has asked Congress to approve a $10 billion, 12-year program to revive mass transit.

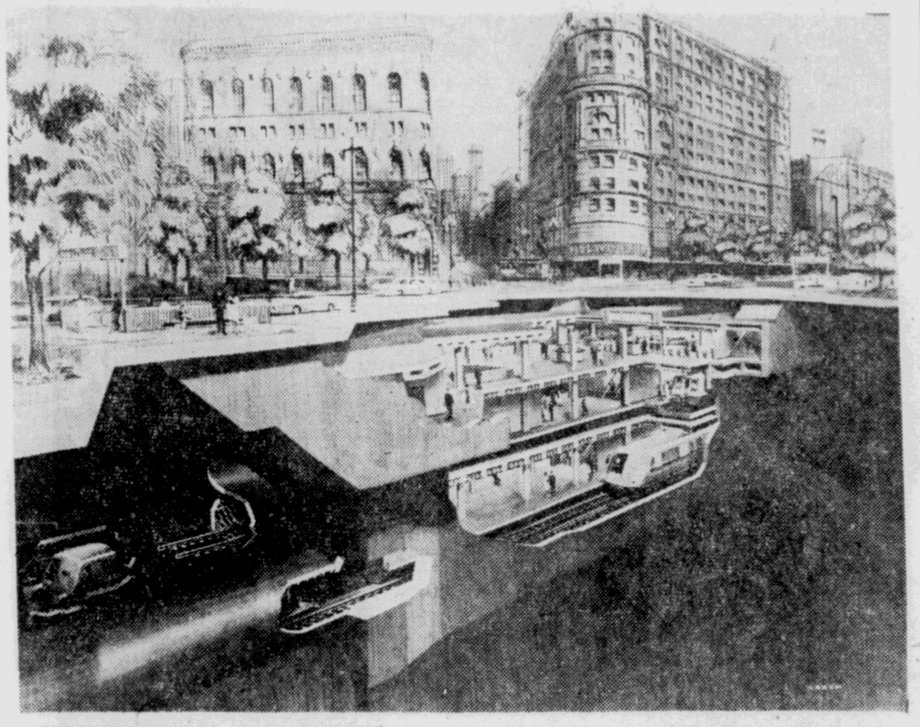
But critics say this sum is not nearly enough to do the job needed. Others fear the powerful highway lobby may block any congressional attempt to inject massive amounts of money into transit programs.

Most observers agree that the most serious problem facing mass transit reform is public apathy. For every city with a new transit program, there's another that has rejected a bond issue to finance such a program.

But transit backers feel time is on their side. Their argument is simply this: Mass transit must succeed because there is no alternative.



BIG, LONG HOLE — A completed half-mile section of the Bay Area Rapid Transit (BART) curves toward Ninth Street and southern Alameda County from this point beneath Broadway in downtown Oakland. The tunnel contains emergency walkway, handrail, and permanent lighting. Similar sections have been excavated in other parts of downtown Oakland, in Berkeley, and in San Francisco and the 75-mile subway system will be completed by 1972.



CHANGING UP AND DOWN — San Francisco's skyline erupts with steel and concrete while more structures burrow underground. An artist's sketch shows how the routine subway stops will work once BART is completed in 1972. The upper level is a passenger mezzanine, the middle level accommodates Municipal Railway lines, and the lower level carries BART trains.

Behind The News

Future Pressure Expected To Expand BART System

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It will be two years before the Bay Area Rapid Transit system is completed, but pressure is already building to extend BART's tracks in several directions.

Requests have already been made to study extension to the San Francisco and Oakland airports, the Livermore area of the East Bay, even all the way to Sacramento.

"We expect many requests for extension — demands for extension — when people see what BART has to offer," said George L. McDonald, spokesman for the district. "And we are gearing up to meet the demands.

BART had always been planned as the nucleus of a much larger regional transit network. It will, with its "feeder" services, take care of a broad area on the east side of the bay. But on the west side, San Mateo County, a major "bedroom" area for city workers, is not included. Nor is Marin County to the north across the Golden Gate Bridge, nor burgeoning Santa Clara County at the southern end of the bay.

San Mateo County, on the Peninsula south of San Francisco, would have been BART's easiest commuter run, with no bridges to cross and population centers strung out along an existing rail right-of-way. But the county board of supervisors declined to put BART to a vote of the people.

Some years later pressure brought formation of a separate transit district, but it went out of business this year after conducting a million dollar survey. The survey found a link-up with BART advisable, but the county government instead put to a vote an alternative proposal for a subsidized bus system that would eventually serve rapid transit. It was rejected.

Serious negotiations are now under way between BART, San Francisco and San Mateo County to extend the rapid transit line from the city limits to San Francisco International Airport, which is half way down the San Mateo County coastline.

San Jose, on the south end of the bay, has more population that Oakland and is one of the fastest growing centers in the nation. The local bus system last year had to get an emergency subsidy from the city to stay in business. The voters later rejected a proposal to buy out the bus company and expand its service.

A new proposal is to go on the San Jose ballot next November. It will include an interim subsidized bus system but will emphasize planning for a more effective modern transit system.

Unlike San Francisco where the general direction of traffic to the center of the city and the location of BART lines is narrowed by many factors, San Jose is sprawling in all directions. Its transit problem is much like that of Los Angeles.

James Lyon, chairman of the Santa Clara County Transit Committee's subcommittee on hardware and technology, says his group is looking for a lightweight transit car that need not carry many passengers but should be cheap enough to be strung all over the area, possibly suspended over existing streets.

The regional transit picture also includes a BART line linking San Francisco to Oakland by the long land route around the bottom of the bay through San Jose.

For Marin County to the north, the transit problem centers on crossing the Golden Gate. The majestic red bridge is now crowded to capacity with commuter autos and buses.

Engineering studies made at the time BART was being proposed left some doubt as to whether the bridge could carry a transit line which was to run below the auto deck. Since that time, most transit schemes for the county involved ferries.

Recently the directors of the Golden Gate Bridge District decided to go into transit themselves. Only last week the district heard a proposal by the Philip F. Spaulding Associates of Seattle to set up a $14.2 million ferry service.

A few days earlier another company, Hydrodyne Marine of San Francisco, called the press to the unveiling of a 300-passenger hydrofoil ferry for Marin commuter service, but the vessel was unable to get started.

Numerous other schemes have been tried. The Bay Area had the first U.S. experiment with air-cushioned ferries, with little success.

BART Already Nears Completion

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — While many cities have modern rapid transit systems on the drawing board, the San Francisco Bay Area has one on the ground, nearly ready to go.

The first 80-mile-an-hour computer-controlled trains for BART — the Bay Area Rapid Transit district — are due from the manufacturer shortly.

All but four miles of the 75-mile track is under construction. A year from now the $1.3 billion BART system will be preparing inaugural ceremonies for its first paying passengers.

If it proves anything, BART will prove that vast projects can still be planned and carried out despite massive roadblocks of bureaucracy, dissension, and urban congestion.

BART is one-third subway, one-third ground-level, and one-third aerial track. It has three arms on the east side of San Francisco Bay, stretching north through Berkeley to Richmond, south through Hayward to Fremont, and east through the Oakland hills to the warm bedroom towns of Contra Costa County.

The subway reaches far out into the San Francisco residential neighborhoods, where the tracks then spring up from the ground aboard an aerial skyway stretched along a single file of concrete piers to the city limits.

By 1975 Bart expects to be carrying 200,000 passengers per day, which it figures will cut down rush hour freeway traffic by as much as 50 per cent.

BART has been many years in the womb. The talk stage began at the end of World War II. A state legislative commission was established in 1951 and it presented a plan in 1957 for a 385-mile rapid transit system covering nine counties around San Francisco Bay.

Six counties wrote themselves out of the system. Their argument was that they would be paying for costly subways and stations in the city. But on Nov. 6, 1962, San Francisco, Alameda and Contra Costa counties approved a $792 million bond issue to build BART.

Since then BART has moved ahead, defying massive obstacles and subduing harsh critics. Taxpayers lawsuits were fought. Rivalry between Oakland and San Francisco was overcome. To get more money to buy its trains, BART had a two-year fight that resulted in a 1-2 cent local sales tax increase.

To pay for the $180 million bay tube, BART persuaded the state to keep collecting tolls on the Bay Bridge after the span paid itself off.

Numerous federal grants were won because BART was trying out new schemes.

The City of Berkeley voted millions of dollars in extra taxes on itself to have a subway instead of an aerial line that would slice the city in half.

BART got together with state highway builders to run its track down the middle of a freeway, thus saving a lot of valuable city land.

Each part in the new system, from the fasteners that tie down the track, to the complex control center built by Westinghouse, involved developing, evaluating and testing new technology.

To mesh everything satisfactorily in an orderly way was a monumental challenge itself, even for the computers. Completion of the system is two years behind schedule and is costing several hundred millions more than expected.

However, as the day draws near and thousands of visitors are shown through the unfinished tunnels and stations, the critics are seldom heard. Many commuters are planning a BART credit card instead of a new car in 1971.

This Week In The World

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Peace was the byword as the guns were silenced at the Suez Canal and bitter words between the Soviet Union and West Germany were quieted with a treaty. But the ironic catchword was war as the material for its conduct — missiles and nerve gas — shared the headlines.

Israel and the United Arab Republic lifted their fingers from the explosive Mideast trigger at the start of an American-inspired 90-day ceasefire aimed at getting the two belligerents plus Jordan to sit down at a peace parley.

Diplomacy on all fronts characterized the undercover efforts designed to achieve a lasting Middle Eastern peace, but public charges by Israel that Egypt, with the help of the Soviet Union, had moved missiles closer to the Suez Canal threatened to jeopardize the peace initiatives.

To the north, months of negotiations between the Soviet Union and West Germany were finalized in Moscow with the signing of a treaty pledging to observe the sanctity of existing European borders.

With their signatures, West German Chancellor Willy Brandt and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin opened the way to closer ties between West Germany and the Communist-dominated nations of Eastern Europe.

In Washington, the Nixon administration achieved victory in its fight to expand the Safeguard antimissile system when the Senate by a five vote margin defeated an amendment designed to block the system from spreading.

The vote was 52-47, but the subject still is faced with possible modification next week in another balloting while senators opposed to Safeguard grumble about the last minute administration move which may have caused its victory.

The spark which may have ignited some 11th hour vote switching was a telegram by Gerald C. Smith, chief arms control negotiator at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) with the Soviet Union in Vienna, urging the Senate to vote for Safeguard to prevent an American "static" position on deployment.

In the south, two trains weighted with 66 tons of World War II nerve gas crawled at a snail's pace to the Sunny Point Army Terminal at Southport, N.C., to be loaded on a rusting ship for sinking in the Atlantic 282 miles east of Cape Kennedy.

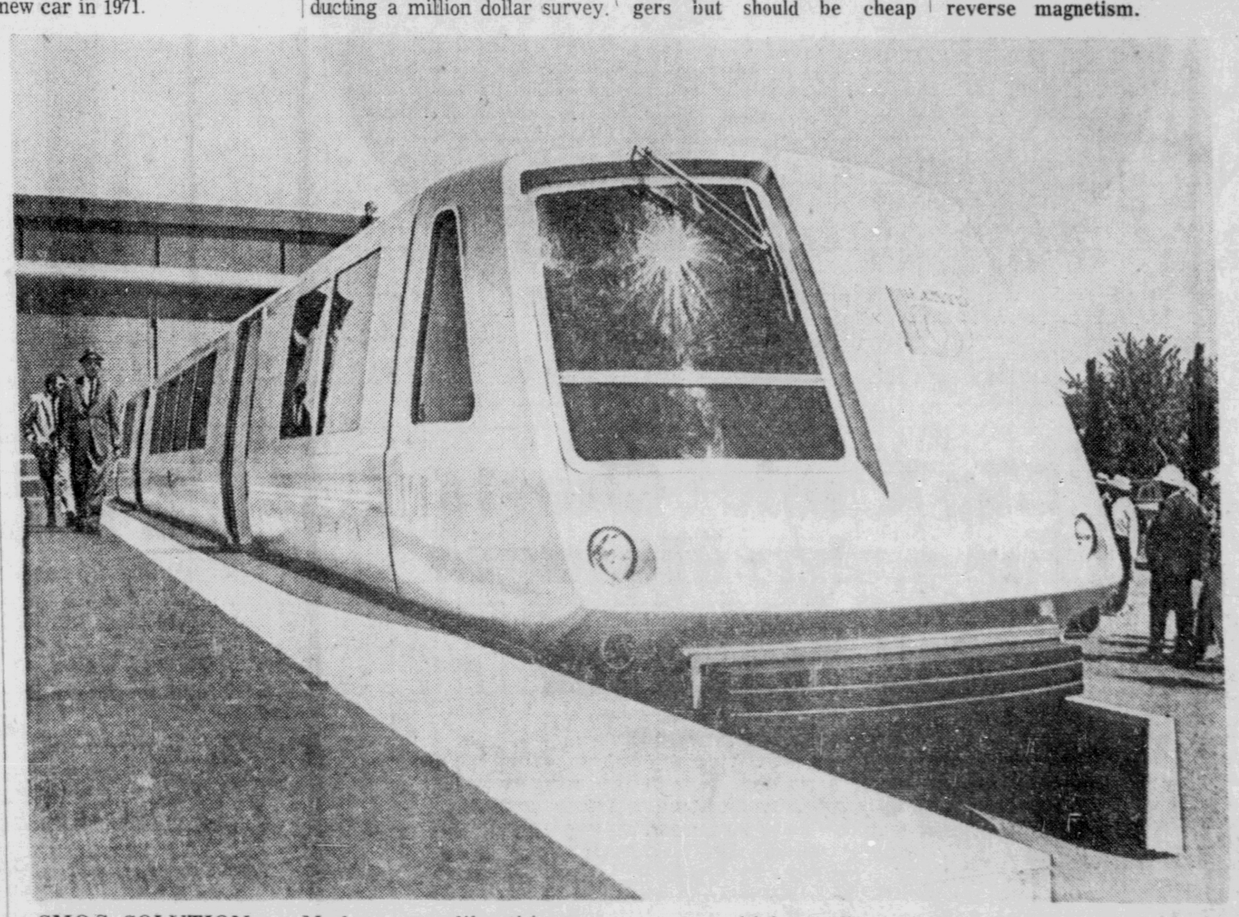
Around The World, Around The Clock

WASHINGTON — President Nixon signed legislation replacing the 181-year-old Post Office Department with an independent postal agency. The bill, which ends congressional authority over the postal service also gives postal workers an 8 per cent retroactive pay hike.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay — The body of Dan Mitrione, the chief U.S. police adviser to Uruguay, was found in a car on a Montevideo street 11 days after he was kidnaped by guerrillas.

CUZCO, Peru — A Peruvian national airlines plane crashed moments after takeoff on a flight to Lima, killing all but one of the 91 passengers and nine crew members. Fifty-four passengers were Americans, most of them teen-agers.

WASHINGTON — President Nixon vetoed two bills totaling $22 billion, some $1 billion more than he requested, but the House later overrode his veto on the $4.4 billion education measure.



SMOG SOLUTION — Modern cars like this one offer hopes of curbing air pollution in the Bay Area when the BART system opens in 1972. The system will link San Francisco with East Bay communities and leads the way in mass transit systems which are becoming more popular as people realize the subway is the most practical way to move large numbers of people through large metropolitan areas.

Watch Those Golden Gate Span Pieces

Well, at least pieces of the bridge.

It seems that original rivets from the bridge are being sold commercially by a San Francisco store for a staggering $50 apiece. That's complete with rust, and encased in clear plastic.

Several district directors reacted indignantly last week when a newspaper carried advertisements about the sale, and the district's attorney, Thomas M. Jenkins, immediately investigated.

He reported yesterday that he had advised both the store, Roos-Atkins, and the firm distributing the rivets, Designs Unlimited of San Francisco, that their commercial use of the bridge's name was unauthorized, that the rivets were district property, and that they must be returned.

Jenkins told newsmen that he had not yet received a response from the distributor. He noted that the store, contrary to its advertising claim that it had 1,000 to sell, told him it had only six.

Jenkins said he did not know how the distributor got hold of the rivets, but an Independent-Journal check of a similar sale last year found that they were taken by a bridge employee.

At least that was the explanation of a spokesman at Designs Unlimited at the time. He said he had a friend who worked on the bridge who gave the rivets to him.

The rivets are replaced by bolts as they rust. Most of them fall into the water, but a few are caught as they pop when their heads are chiseled off.

Cancer Donation

Member stations of the Marin Independent Service Station Association plan to donate two cents from every gallon of gasoline sold Sept. 4 to the Marin Branch of the American Cancer Society for its home care program.

Tentative Nod To Span Jump Barriers

Under consideration off and on during the past 22 years, the proposal traditionally draws objections that it would block views, mar the bridge's beauty and cause new structural pressure on the span.

But strong recommendations for a barrier from experts in suicide prevention yesterday convinced the board to have the staff seek an engineering and architectural firm to submit proposals. The firm also is to estimate the cost of installing a barrier, both a small section for testing and a full-scale one.

Directors also approved recommendations by their special suicide prevention committee to increase to round-the-clock duty the roving patrol of bridge crews, buy a special television monitoring system and provide bridge crews with a suicide prevention training program.

According to the California Highway Patrol, 391 persons have been confirmed suicides from the bridge since the span opened in 1937.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring noted that bridge crews save 10 persons for each one who jumps.

The special television, to cost $28,000, works at night and in light fog. The existing cameras are ineffective at such times.

The Golden Gate District Directors Also:

BID — Received a low bid of $72,750 from Johnson and Higgins of San Francisco to provide comprehensive personal injury and property damage insurance for three years, up from a three-year premium of $7,100 under the expiring insurance. A spokesman for the firm said the former premium was "ridiculous" in light of the potential insurance risk from some 30 million vehicles crossing the bridge a year.

LIGHTS — Received a report from Dist. Engineer Robert E. Shields that new bridge lights are being tested that use one-third as much electricity but provide improved illumination.

PLAN — Received a report from Shields that the long-range transportation plan being drawn for the district by Kaiser Engineers will be ready on Oct. 22 instead of Oct. 1. He said there had been delays in forecasting patronage and because of additional work evaluating alternative transit plans.

FERRY — Received a report from Shields that plans will be prepared shortly to beautify the area around the downtown Sausalito ferry landing.

DEBRIS — Ratified payment of $3,000 to Marshal M. Mirza Inc. to clear debris from the North Sausalito parking lot for ferry commuters.

MEETINGS — Set a meeting of the joint transportation and finance-auditing committee at 10:30 a.m. Aug. 27 in toll plaza offices to review financing of the proposed joint ferry and bus system. The committee also will meet at 8 p.m. that day in San Francisco to get a progress report on Kaiser Engineering's long-range transit plan.

BUSES — Learned that the streets and transportation committee of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors will meet at 2 p.m. Aug. 27 in city hall to consider final approval of stops and routes for the district's commuter bus system.

HALEY — Adjourned in memory of Marin Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley, killed in last week's escape attempt at the Hall of Justice.

Abbernathy Again

ATLANTA (UPI)—The Southern Christian Leadership Conference re-elected the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy its president at its 13th annual convention's closing session Friday. It also attacked the FBI.

The Friday business session also passed 10 resolutions, one of them venting the civil rights organization's anger over a recent Time Magazine article which implied that its founder, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., had a "vigorous" extramarital sex life.

Another resolution called for complete withdrawal of all American troops from Vietnam by the end of the year.

Abernathy, who Thursday night called for SCLC to sponsor another nonviolent mass march on Washington to "put this country on trial," was re-elected along with all other incumbent officers.

McNears Beach Could Be Enlarged By Tract

One of two owners of property to the north of McNears has agreed to sell the land for expansion of the adjoining county park.

Pierre W. Joske, director of county parks and recreation, said the property, to the north of the park, comprises 31 acres, of which is underwater.

The county last month filed a condemnation suit against the two owners.

One, Ronald C. Titus of Sausalito, has agreed to sell his half interest for $80,000, Joske reported. Joske will ask the board of supervisors Tuesday to accept the settlement.

The other half interest is owned by Linday Bailey Graham, minor daughter of John D. Graham of Peacock Gap. Negotiations will continue while the suit is pending against this half interest, said Joske.

Purchase of the 31-acre Titus-Graham parcel would extend the 24-acre park and beach frontage to the China Camp property.

'Until That Time, I've Much To Give'

That Is The Gutsy Philosophy Of Stephan Binion, Sclerosis Patient

By GIL PEARSON

"Until that time, I've much to give;
"Until that time, I want to live."

This gripping couplet rounds out a poem which so lightened the heart of a hospital patient that his wife wrote the poet, Stephan Binion, that "your rhyme has done more for my stricken husband than all the medical attention he has received."

Seasoned writers can complete careers filled with successful publishings without ever achieving so magnificent a nod of esteem.

THE FACT THAT the tribute stemmed from Stephan Binion's very first literary effort to be published suggests that Marin County is not only home to a talent of considerable potential, but also to a courageous spirit. For Stephan Binion is a three-year, pain-wracked, bed-ridden victim of multiple sclerosis.

His determined record of having penned, within the year that he has practiced writing as an avocation, 38 other poems, 55 short stories, a novel, two one-act plays and a 168-page movie script must stand as inspiration for any other patients confronted by disheartenment.

It was Elizabeth St. Davids, bouncy, vivacious British-born viscountess, who set up our interview with Binion in his Tiburon bachelor digs at 5 Benton Court the other day. She served us tea in the grand English manner with all the appropriate flourishes.

"ELIZABETH OFTEN pops in with crumpets and cheery words," Stephan volunteered. "But we do fight like cats and dogs over writing — but on the highest plane, of course."

Elizabeth who lives next door with her husband, Gerald Schiffam, five barking dogs and a coiffured Angora cat, has written for the slicks in England and the United States and currently for confessions. Her well-known column, "Both Sides of Paradise," is must reading for subscribers to the Mill Valley Record.

Never in a lifetime of interviewing have we encountered such hilarious repartee as transpires between nimble-minded Elizabeth and rapier-witted Stephan. Both are intellectuals, each, a person unto his own. Never to back down. Nor to give an inch. To top one another to the very very end. Always seeking and finding thrusts to provoke amusement in each other and their listeners.

STEPHAN MIMICS magnificently throughout his endless array of stories. And you don't progress far into any given subject without sparking his interruption with jabbing fun-asides of side-splitting caliber.

His merry flashing dark eyes, gyrating eyebrows, and facial imitations grab you. You get hooked on the man. You begin to love this gutsy fellow so astonishingly capable of hoisting the spirits of friends around his bedside, while he lies there in constant pain.

"Until that time, I've much to give; Until that time, I want to live."

MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS is characterized by muscular weakness and tremor. It is defined as a persistent disease in which there is sclerosis in various parts of the nervous system. The medical use of the Greek "scleros" translates as many hardenings of body tissues or parts, as by excessive growth of fibrous connective tissues.

"It is of unknown origin," Binion says. "There is no known cure, treatment, or medication. Its effect varies.

"In my case the hurt is mainly from the pelvic cavity extending downwards, and, the use of my hands fails progressively. Some organs don't function. I've worn a catheter for years." You peruse his poems and you find:

"I DON'T DESPAIR the passing years. Nor tremble faced by truth. The bygone days will wrench no tears; I don't despair the passing years. I face each age sans misspent fears of lost or fading youth; I don't despair

the passing years. Nor tremble faced by truth."

Stephan Binion, of German parentage, was born 45 years ago in a doctor's office on Sullivan Street in Greenwich Village, New York. His formal schooling included courses at the universities of Maryland and Heidelberg.

The piano has been his prime interest from childhood. He served all over Europe for the U. S. Army as a cryptographic security officer, qualifying principally because of fluent German and an analytical mind.

NOTWITHSTANDING his extraordinarily long fingers (he needs but four to span the keyboard octave), his interest shifted from the playing of the piano to its mechanical functioning.

"I became fascinated with the instrument's design and construction," Binion recalls. "I brain picked experts in the art of fine manufacturing. I studied German texts on piano restoration techniques. And, I learned many of the principles of piano mechanics from the musically inclined during many hours of sipping wretched-coffee at sidewalk cafes in Frankfurt, Mannheim, Stuttgart, Heidelberg and elsewhere.

"I wound up as a partner in the J-B Co., 1570 California Street, San Francisco, with Leonard W. Jared.

"We take misused pianos and re-create great instruments by completely dismantling, rebuilding, re-stringing and refinishing. And, as well, we sell the prestigious Schiedmayer piano, made in Stuttgart, for which we hold the exclusive U.S. franchise.

"FOR 13 YEARS my long, strong fingers served me well in drawing taut thousands of fortified wire piano strings. After much struggle we were reaching the fruits for our labors when I began to feel numbness in my finger tips."

That was five years ago.

On his 40th birthday doctors correctly diagnosed Binion's problem as diabetes and cured him within six months. But numbness in hands, feet, and legs continued for another year at which time the diagnosis of multiple sclerosis was determined.

Today Stephan spends 18 hours a day in bed and six hours in a wheelchair. A year ago he propped an electric typewriter up on his bed tray and began writing with all the enthusiasm he had demonstrated during his piano revitalizing days.

"IN THE BEGINNING I tooled out 15 to 25 pages a day using the hunt-peck formula," he reports, "but now I'm down to two or three."

His alert eyes flash excitedly and he roars with laughter when recalling neighbor Elizabeth's teasing encouragement when she shouts, "You can't write worth a darn!" and, his bellowed reply, "I thank you from the heart of my bottom!"

Stephan Binion has not permitted his helpless state and gradually-increasing loss of finger dexterity to bring on any psychological brooding. He looks for the positive aspects of life, however limited they might be for him.

"You know a million jokes,"

"What Is This New Qiana Nylon?"

Qiana nylon is a new glamour fabric originated by Dupont. At present, in garments, the supply is very limited. The fabric has been alloted only to the top European and American designers and the garments will be marketed only in a selected number of stores. The cost of Qiana nylon garments is extremely high, though prices will come down as more of the fabric becomes available.

Qiana nylon, Dupont says, has qualities never before attained in synthetic fibers. These include drape, hand, feel, lustre and a better color clarity than silk. It resists wrinkling, has excellent crease and pleat retention. Its clear, brilliant colors are colorfast to sunlight and normal washing and drycleaning. It resists yellowing and water spotting.

Qiana nylon sounds like a most desirable fiber and fabric, if you can find it and afford it.

IT TAKES powerful hands and nimble fingers to draw taut wires such as these in the tuning area of a $4,000 to $5,000 Schiedmayer piano. Stephan Binion's hands could once do the job. But no longer. His J-B Co. of San Francisco holds an exclusive U.S. franchise for the Schiedmayer piano, which is made in Stuttgart.

we observed following hysterics over three of them.

And he replied, "Oh yes, I do. And they come in handy because of my frequent hospital visits for treatments for periodic bladder difficulties resulting from permanent catheter wear. I find I can't get the nurses to do a thing for me until I come up with a daily funny."

AT HOME HIS wheelchair gets him about the living room to enjoy mounted photography and watercolors produced as hobbies during years when his hands were firm. And he loves his hi-fi and, as well, his own cheffing of such gourmet dishes as Boeuf en Daube, Cassoulet de Leicester, Gnow Yuke Fon, Kidney Creole, Lasagne Binion and Gateau Moka.

The man's eyes bathe in merriment when he funs up, "I was born a count, but presently I'm no account."

But then he adds soberly that his philosophy today is most closely expressed in that old classic, "I cried because I had no shoes until I saw a man who had no feet."

STEPHAN'S HOPES for the future include finding an agent for his writings, particularly for his Bill the Kid movie script for which he accomplished a prodigious quantity of research.

Also, he wants to see his brother Rudolph Binion win next year's Nobel Prize for literature with his tome, "Frau Lou," published by the Princeton University Press. Frau Lou was Nietzche's wayward disciple. The work was considered for the 1970 award.

"My bed is hard, the sheets are cold — It's not because I'm very old. The legs gave up, the hands soon too — My wheelchair does what feet could do. But I can speak and think and write; 'Til these leave me I'll be alright. Until that time, I've much to give; Until that time, I want to live."

A Con's View Of Prison Doc—

Both Hatred And Respect

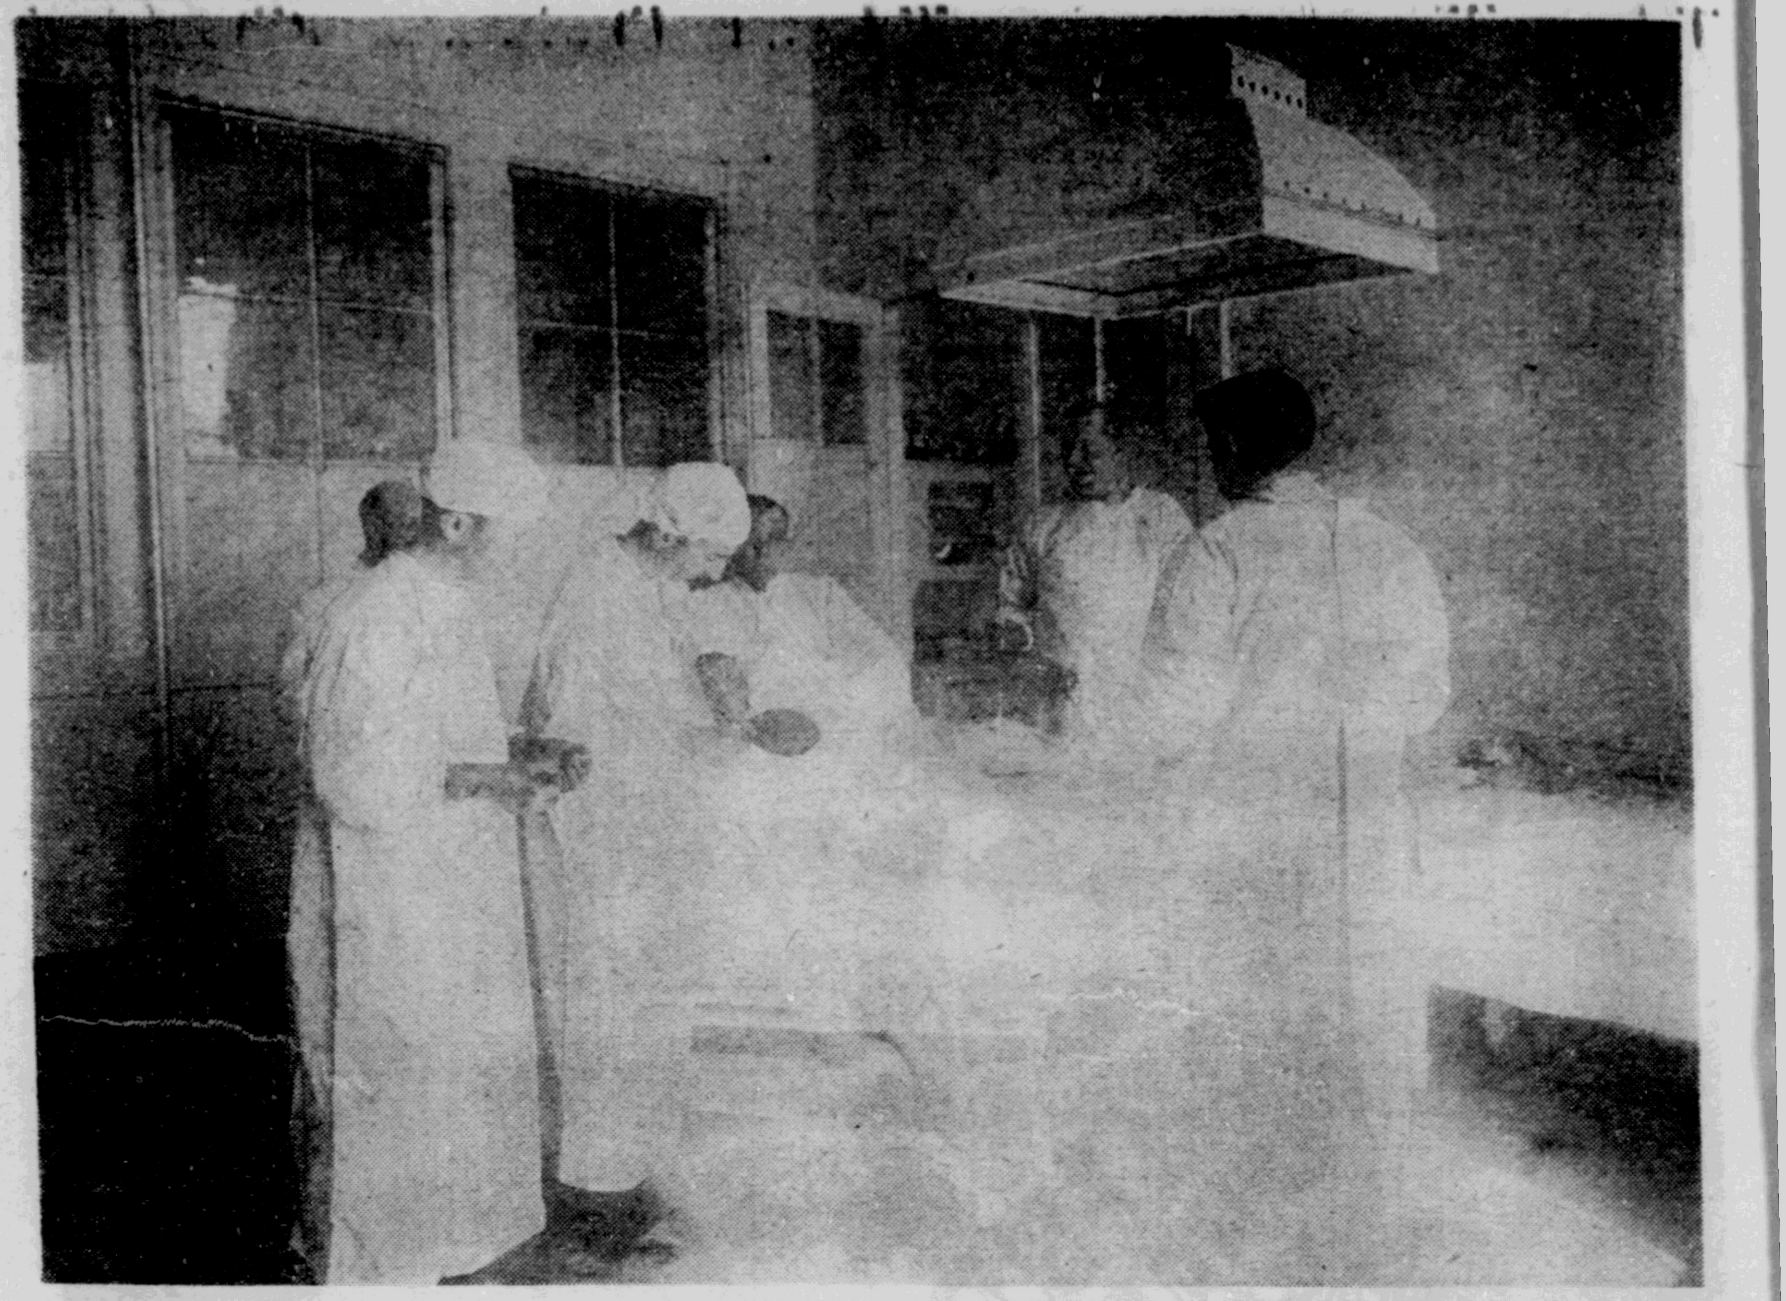
By DR. LEO L. STANLEY

Why do men in prison so often endanger and lose their lives by partaking of filtered shellac, cleaning type fluid, denatured alcohol and other things they know to be poison?

Is it the recklessness that is inherent in their characters? Is it the monotony of their lives that causes them to seek any kind of excitement? The seemingly ceaseless clanging of steel on steel? The cramped cells in which they live? Or the awful guilts so many of them bear for their past actions?

I do not know the answer. But I do know that sometimes it is the most intelligent, the best educated, the seemingly most normal among the prison population who resort to this senseless practice.



IN SURGERY, Dr. Leo L. Stanley, long-time chief medical officer at San Quentin Prison, fought for the lives of men who often hated him because he had, on other less serious occasions, seen through their malingering and guile.

A CASE IN point was Charley Mears, editor of the prison newspaper.

He deliberately drank a cleaning fluid which he and others had found discarded during a "party" in the print shop. Within three hours he was dead. Later yet another inmate died. And two others barely escaped death and became invalids as a result of their escapade.

Medical science has no antidote for this poison and all efforts to save Charley Mears' life were futile.

AND WITH HIS death, my thoughts turned back to an occasion a few weeks earlier when Charley, in his capacity as newspaper editor, had visited the hospital "to get a story." We had even permitted him to be present in the operating room while we performed surgery.

I had expected the usual feature about the hospital medical department. But instead he wrote a penetrating and personal piece about me — and the relationship of the prison doctor to the prison inmates.

It was illuminating to see myself as others saw me. Particularly as the convicts saw me.

HIS PIECE WENT like this:

"The Chief Croaker — that's what the prisoners call him, this steely-eyed man who watches over them.

"And they adorn that phrase with many anathematized adjectives. They hate him. For his slender, supple body is like a whip — a whip wielded by an iron will. He is tireless, alert. And he lashes them — drives them until fury burns disease from their trembling bodies.

"And he fights for them, too.

"But they hate him. His tongue seems tipped with iodine. His eyes cut like steel knives, seemingly to gaze with contempt at groaning humanity. The weaklings wilt under the scorn of his smile, a smile that cuts through them, tosses them aside, like a clean north wind ripping the scum off a stagnant pond.

"FOR THAT IS what the weaklings are — scum.

"Yet the strong men hate him, too. They hate him because of the mockery that lies in his steady eyes. But the fierce men — the men without fear, the men who deal in death themselves — respect this man who is without fear himself. And they give him grudging admiration: 'Damn him, he's inhuman.'

"We heard many things about the prison Croaker. We wondered about him, and we watched. Then we went in to fence with him — and lost."

"That was a long time ago, in the days when our chains were fresh and galling. Time heals all scars, and laughter lightens all loads. We can laugh now — and whether we won or lost then, we win!"

"BUT IN THOSE days we shook our head in madness and snarled. Like a wolf we paced, looking for a hole. The Mill leered at us, and held like a leech. And we vowed to beat it — with guile.

"We developed a bad heart. We had fooled medicos before, and, truthfully, we were not in superb shape. Few prisoners can be. We determined to get worse. So we performed a few swift gymnastics under the shed and slid over to the 'pogey.'

" 'Bum pump, Doc!' The ice eyes drilled into us.

" 'Been running? What's the matter with you?' And there was scorching sarcasm in his tone. Indignantly we lied, and tried to look thin and pathetic. It did not do us a bit of good. Words flailed us from the room. And we left with curses on our lips.

"LATER WE TRIED to laugh, and still much later succeeded. Life is a game, win or lose. There can be no draw. We had lost — as we had lost before and in so many ways — so we went to the Mill and stayed.

"For awhile we swore fearful oaths and vowed that never again would the Croaker get an opportunity to scourge us with his scorn, that never again would our path lead to the 'pogey' door, that nothing would ever make us sick."

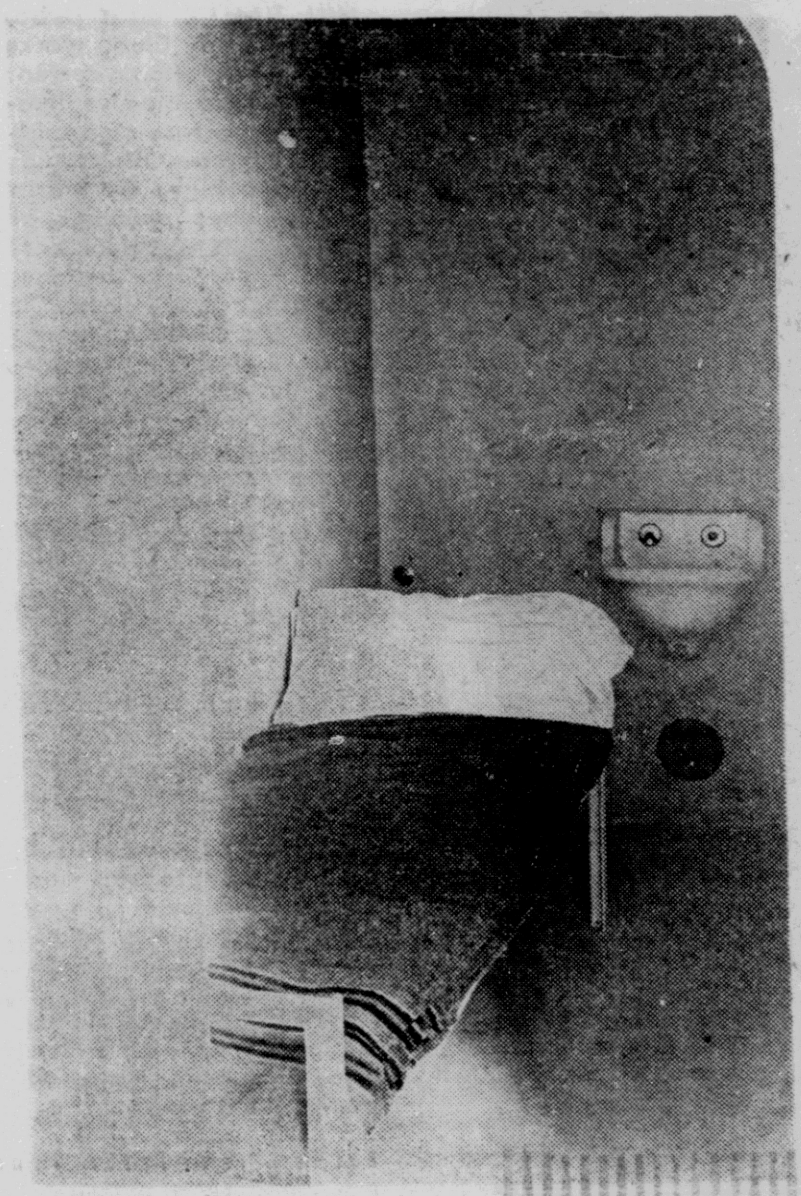
With Charley Mears worse than sick — now dead — I thought back to that story. It had been so perceptive in its look into the tightrope the prison doctor and other prison officials as well must walk in their relationships with the inmates.

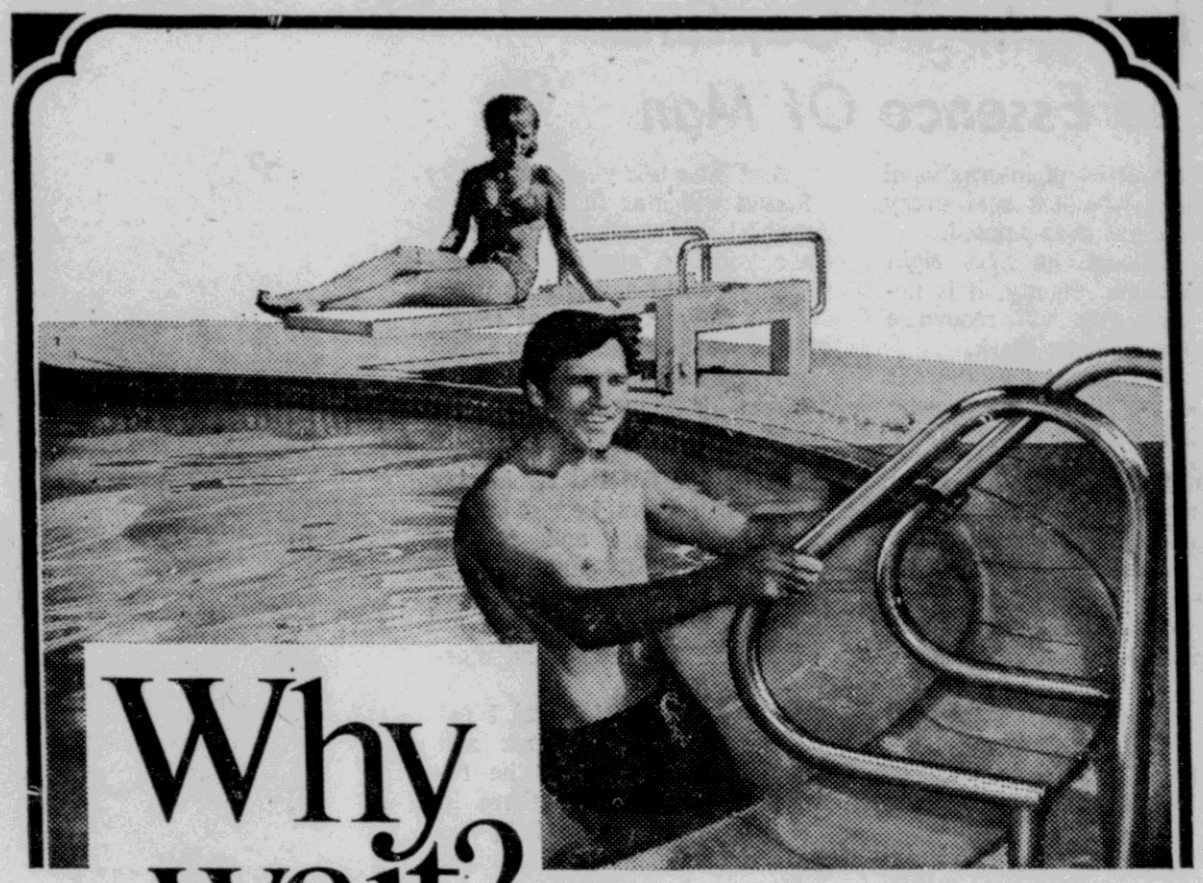
PERHAPS IT HAD caused me to be a bit less steely-eyed, less scornful in my encounters with the prisoners who after all, to quote Charley Mears, were men who "had lost — and lost in so many ways," but were still men. Still, I knew, one had to continue to show the strength these men understood and respected. Charley, most certainly, had made me see myself as others saw me.

And I wondered how any man with that kind of understanding and intelligence could have been so foolish as to have drunk a poison that he most certainly knew would prove fatal.

Man is an unpredictable creature. In the unnatural environment of the prison he is all the more so.

WAS IT the seemingly ceaseless and monotonous clang of cold steel on steel, above, or the cramped quarters of their dreary cells, below, that caused convicts to take foolish risks and drink poisonous substances? Or was it the innate reckless in their character? Or the burdens of guilt they carried?





Why wait?

Painter Debo Has His Own Ideas On Art

He Seeks To Capture The Essence Of Man

He's an artist of international reputation who has sold every canvas he has ever painted.

Yet, although he lives right here in Marin County, it is unlikely that you will recognize the name of Denny Clark.

But "Debo" brings a different reaction, for that is the way he signs his work.

AND PAINTINGS by Debo now hang in some of the world's most prestigious museums and private collections. Celebrities around the world regard their Debo acquisitions as among their proudest fine art possessions.

The celebrated automobile racing driver Stirling Moss, flying from New York back to his native England, made a detour by plane all the way to the San Francisco Bay Area so that he could purchase some Debo paintings from the Preston Gallery of Art in Sausalito's Village Fair.

Singer Lainie Kazan, shopping and strolling in downtown Sausalito, spotted some of Debo's work in a window and was fascinated.

SHE CONTACTED the artist and he painted her portrait during her three-week engagement in the Venetian Room of San Francisco's Fairmont Hotel.

That painting was reproduced to decorate the back of Miss Kazan's current hit recording "The Love Album."

And later this year when Miss Kazan will star in a television special, one segment will have her singing against a background of slides of Debo's work.

The interest in art of Denny Clark, or Debo, dates back into his childhood in the Midwest. "I started drawing birds and animals when I was 6."

BUT SOMEWHERE in his high school years, he lost his enthusiasb for art and decided upon a medical career. "For years I never picked up a drawing pencil."

Then he left school and married.

"My wife, Bonnie, and I got ourselves a pickup truck and started driving south," he relates. "And one day, there in the South, we chanced to see some artists at work. That night I drew my first picture in years. Until then, Bonnie didn't even know I had ever been interested in art."

But this time the interest was back to stay. He and Bonnie headed for California and Marin County, the haven of so many artists, and settled in Mill Valley where he began painting seriously.

DEBO—"The name is a combination of Denny and Bonnie" — has definite ideas of his own about art.

"I've developed my own approaches," he says. "I try not

MILL VALLEY artist Debo, born Denny Clark, works intently upon a current portrait, the massive likeness of the face of a middle-aged man. His canvas is six-foot high. The Marin painter does paintings of all sizes, but prefers portraits that enlarge the face, sometimes many times. "It gives the viewer a much closer feeling for the subject," he explains. "I try to paint the essence of the man, and I attempt to tell something about him in my work. I like to think that my paintings will have as much meaning for someone looking at them one thousand years from now as they do for someone who sees them today." Although he has been painting seriously only a relatively short time, Debo has enjoyed immense commercial success, and his works hang in some of the outstanding museums and private collections. Every canvas he has ever painted has sold. But he has also won the acclaim of some of the most demanding of the fine art critics. His "canvases transcend reality," said one.

to use too much color so that I will not detract from the essence of man."

"And in most art schools they will tell you to keep portraits intimate, about three-fourths of life-size, or else the face wlll appear somewhat grotesque. I go about it just the opposite. I like to enlarge the face, sometimes to three times life-size. It gives the viewer a much closer feeling for the subject."

DEBO IS unorthodox, too, in that he prefers to paint at night "when I can control the lighting."

And he develops many of his own painting materials such as the making of his varnish.

Even in the display of paintings, Debo has original ideas. He recently staged an exhibition in Sausalito that he called "Orogency" for which viewers sat in a dark room and were shown slowly, one at a time, Debo paintings, never more than six in any one sitting.

"In a museum, paintings are all over, and there is really no atmosphere created by the artist," he says. "With Orogency, I tried to give my paintings some added creative dimensions."

ALONG WITH controlling the lights, Debo was also able to coordinate the sound. He had worked for six months recording a wide variety of sounds ranging from crashing waves to human heartbeats that were played in conjunction with the showing.

"For the heartbeat, we used a stethoscope and a microphone, and as our subject, a girl clad in fur — that was to cut down the sound. And we taped her heartbeat for more than an hour."

Thus the Orogency viewer, seated in a dark room, looked upon a massive, lighted portrait of a man deep in reflection, and listened in the background to the steady, constant beat of a human heart.

"IT WAS A tremendous viewing experience," says Debo.

Debo and another Marin artist, John Steenberger, will be opening their own art gallery, the Fifth Level, in Sausalito this month.

"We won't go quite as far as with Orogency," Debo says, "but our gallery will show that it has been designed by artists.

"All paintings will have their own particular display. We'll control the lighting for each painting with dimmers. There will be two main display walls with thick carpeting, fitted exactly wall to wall, so as to absorb all the extra light."

THE NEW gallery will also feature background sound selected especially to compliment the type of work being shown. And there will be an attempt to "bring the outdoors inside" through such ideas as an interior post covered with vines.

Debo says the name Fifth Level was selected "because art viewing is accomplished on several levels. That is what it is all about."

Even the headhunter in the jungles of New Guinea can view a painting and react on at least one level, he says. Each person must find his own level of enjoyment to a canvas and react accordingly.

"BUT EVERYONE can relate to my paintings," Debo claims.

IN A BAY AREA art gallery, Debo and wife Bonnie examine critically some of his finished work. The artist is as exacting in his feeling for the display of canvases as he is in the execution of the work and plans a number of innovations in that regard at the new Fifth Level he and partner John Steenberger are opening this month in Sausalito.

"It is not a matter of age, background, financial position, etc. Viewers, for instance, can look at a painting of an old man and know what he is feeling. Indeed, they can feel as he does."

Debo and Bonnie still reside in Mill Valley with their three children, Kevin, 11, Ronnie, 10, and Lisa, 6 months.

The home is often filled with visiting artists who come from throughout the Bay Area and other points to meet and exchange ideas with the young Marin artist who has achieved a reputation for original thinking as well as successful painting.

ONE ART connoisseur writing of Debo's work recently said:

"The paintings are the reflections of the emotions of humanity transcribed with the touch of brilliance and an injection of compassion. His strong, penetrating style transcends reality. His subjects speak from the worlds of despair, alienation, loneliness and loveliness."

And that, believes Debo, is what painting is all about — or should be.

HUMAN HANDS when painted by Debo can be just as expressive as the human face. The immense amount of work and thought that has gone into this painting of a black hand and a white hand, clasped and clinging to each other, is immediately apparent, as is the symbolic meaning of the painting.

E INTIMACY with which Debo portrays the human face and his preoc- pation with light and its control are reflected in these completed nvases on display in a gallery.

DEBO PAINTS the faces of people of all ages, but the elderly with their lines left by life's experiences are a special interest. Again we see Debo's distinctive use of light and dark that marks all of his work as distinctively his.

Panama Restores Its Historic Portobelo

By J. J. LAMB

It is quiet in Panama's Portobelo . . . restless quiet that stirs the imagination to recreate an adventurous and exciting past.

Lazy bay waters lap against the foundations of long-abandoned fortifications and the silent jungle persists in a never-ending battle to reclaim a portion of its domain usurped by man.

IT WAS ANOTHER 95 years, though, before Portobelo became a town and grew to become the most important port of the Caribbean.

Previously, Nombre de Dios was the Atlantic outlet for shipments of gold brought from Peru and across the isthmus via the Chagres River and Las Cruces Trail. But repeated pirate attacks, the last by Sir Francis Drake in 1595, caused the Spanish to move to the natural protection afforded by the Bay of Portobelo.

Five forts were built to protect the city and royal treasure house — San Cristobal, San Fernando, Santiago de la Gloria, San Jeronimo and San Felipe. Today, the once proud guns lie ineffective on the ground at their gun ports, their wooden mounts long having succumbed to the tropical climate.

DRAKE PURSUED the Spanish to Portobelo, but fell ill in 1596 before he could attack and died beneath the shadows of the steep hills protecting the narrow mouth of the bay. Some say Drake was buried at sea, but others believe he was buried on a small island off the entrance to the Bay of Portobelo.

Regardless of its natural protection and fortifications, Portobelo suffered six invasions by buccaneers and the English navy.

In 1668, Henry Morgan captured the city during its annual 60-day fair, the largest and liveliest commercial event of the era. San Jeronimo, the last fort to stand against Morgan, was finally taken after the pirate forced nuns and priests to carry scaling ladders to the walls. Morgan held the city for a fortnight, eventually collecting an estimated quarter million pieces of eight in ransom and booty.

BUT IT WAS an attack by the English admiral Edward Vernon in 1739 that ended Portobelo's reign as queen of the New World ports.

After several hours of fighting, Vernon's guns silenced the batteries of Portobelo and the city suddendered. The forts were dismantled and the bronze cannons sent to England.

Portobelo's fortifications were rebuilt and re-armed, but the Spanish began using other ports and sailing around Cape Horn to safeguard their gold shipments from South America. Eventually, traffic through the port ceased and the great fair was held no more.

A CENTURY LATER, when the discovery of gold in California revived inter-ocean travel across the isthmus, there was some hope that Portobelo would again become an active, bustling port. Unfortunately, Colon was built as the Atlantic terminus for the Panama Railroad and Portobelo was relegated to little more than a name in the history books, except to the few isolated families that continued to make it their home.

A new road now connects Portobelo with Colon, and the government, with technical assistace from the Organization of American States, is restoring the 16th Century coastal fort city. Plans also call for the development of nearby beaches to turn the area into a major resort complex.

But during the interim, Portobelo is easily reachable via a pleasant hour and a half drive from Panama City. The ramparts are clear of jungle growth, the cannons lie aligned in their ports, and the small, almost decorative watchtowers provide the visitor with a historic view of the bay waters.

THE WALLS OF the huge stone treasure house still stand, and a few blocks away is a walled slave compound, now used as a cemetery. At the center of town is the old Spanish chuch, even larger than the treasure house.

The church houses an effigy of a Black Christ, which, according to legend, came to Portobelo on its way to Cartagena. Supposedly each time the ship attempted to continue its journey, a storm developed. Only when the statue was taken ashore did the skies clear.

Since then, the Black Christ Festival is held every year on Oct. 21. On that day a procession of 50 men escort the Black Christ through the small town, taking four hours at a rhythmic pace of three steps forward and two backwards.

HISTORIC OLD railroad stock such as mighty steam locomotives fascinate visitors, young and old, to Solano County's California Railway Museum.

Museum In Solano Offers Bonanza For Rail Buffs

Over in Solano County there is a place called the California Railway Museum that very few people know about, says the California State Automobile Association.

For the railroad buff it is a bonanza — a collection of interesting railroad cars and equipment gathered together along the Sacramento Northern's former interurban mainline halfway between Rio Vista and Fairfield.

There are old streetcars complete with cow-catchers that ran along San Francisco streets in 1895, interurban coaches that were in service on such lines as the Salt Lake and Utah Railroad and Western Pacific, a solarium lounge car that was in service between Oakland and Chicago.

MANY VISITORS will experience a twinge of nostalgia when they see some of the Key System trains that ran in the East Bay and across the Bay Bridge in the 1930s and '40s.

There is old No. 317, a Californit type streetcar that is one of San Francisco's original streetcars. It was built in 1895 and is designed much like a cable car.

One of the huge locomotives on display is No. 334, a steam freight locomotive built in 1929. It was one of a number of heavy Mikado-type freight locomotives for service on Western Pacific Railroad's main line between Oakland and Salt Lake City.

THE CALIFORNIA Railway Museum is the labor of love of a group of railroad enthusiasts who organized in 1945 and began gathering the old railroad cars. In 1946 they formed the Bay Area Electric Railroad Association. In the years that followed their collection of equipment grew and a place to store it and restore it was needed.

In 1960 some of the members of the association found the 22-acre site at Rio Vista Junction and knew it was an ideal site for the railway museum. The land was purchased and the job began of moving their precious railroad cars and equipment to the site. Some were brought by railroad flatcar or truck and some were brought in on their own wheels.

IN JANUARY, 1966, the Railway Museum achieved the actual operation of a trolley car under its own power at the museum. Limited operation for the public continues on a short track.

The museum charges no admission but gratefully accepts contributions to help defray its considerable expenses in operating the museum and restoring the precious old railroad cars. It is open on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, and rides on the various cars are available.

School groups and other groups can arrange to visit the museum during the week by contacting Mrs. Myron S. Pierce Jr., Star Route, Box 152, Suisun, Calif., 94585.

London Is Collector's Paradise With Its Museums And Societies

Just Browse Through The Phone Book To Find Those Who Share Your Hobby

Just name it and somebody in London has collected it.

Any tourist can have a wonderful time tracking down the speciality that attracts him. And you don't have to buy.

It is one of the city's great free attractions that collectors, or people who just happen to be interested, can see some of the greatest collections of almost anything in the world. For free — or, in some cases, for a few shillings.

Stamps and coins and medals are easy. The British Museum has some of the world's best, if not the best.

FOR THOSE who want to go shopping there is the famous firm of Spink of St. James's, coin and medal specialists; and for stamps, the world's largest dealers, Stanley Gibbons, in the Strand (just across the road from the Savoy Hotel).

Some find it more fun to shop around the smaller dealers — like the Coin and Stamp Market in St. Martin's Lane. For the adventurous coin collectors British Overseas Airways Corp. travel experts recommend the famous outdoor Cutler Street Market in the East End on Sunday mornings. The people picking over coins are just as interesting as the wares.

The full range of things to shop for, or see for free, runs from Adam chandeliers, through stuffed animals, armor, daggers, decanter labels, model ships, wine labels, woodcuts, and back down the alphabet. From valentines, posters and playbills, to cigarette cards.

IT IS WORTH remembering that there are also societies devoted to the collection and preservation of almost everything from old windmills, trains, ships, organs, pianos, railway relics, steam engines and dozens of other vanishing items.

A good browse through the telephone book under the name of your special interest (sometimes preceded by the word "British") will help you get in touch with the secretaries of these groups. They are usually delighted to talk about their interests, and perhaps you will be invited to one of their meetings or discussions.

If at first you don't succeed in finding what you want in the phone book don't despair. Try another alphabetic heading.

YOU WILL TURN up such delights as the Historic Organs Preservation Society (they hold meetings); the Association of Railway Preservation Societies (they will tell you about all the others); Society for Theater Research; the Oriental Ceramic Society; the College of Arms (heraldry, coats of arms, and the like); the Arms and Armour Society, and the International Society of Military Collectors.

But to see incredible collections of almost anything under one roof the British Museum is the quick answer. If the subject belongs in nature and the outdoors it will be in the Natural History Museum, or the Geological Museum.

There is also the Victoria and Albert Museum, and the London Museum, in Kensington Palace.

All free — you just need stamina. And bus or subway will get you to them all.

A Black Novelist Reflects On King

By DON KEOWN

Similarly, there exists a seemingly irresistible impulse to cut down our historic greats, after death, by impugning their motives and exposing their human weaknesses.

It's called "showing the warts" and generally much praised by literary critics, even though it involves the judgment of large men by much smaller ones.

John A. Williams, the black novelist, seems to have come precariously close to this kind of destruction in his "Reflections on the Life and Death of Martin Luther King Jr." that he has entitled "The King God Didn't Save."

To this reader Williams' well-written book bears the blemishes of nitpicking criticisms of King — the kind of sly digs one might expect from a talented man jealous of the greater stature of another he suspects to have been less gifted.

Williams, clearly, is sensitive to such suspicions. "I didn't sit down to do this book to reveal anything or to gossip," he claims. "Some will think so, and that is too bad, for my intent was very far removed from those purposes."

In his broader thesis — that Martin Luther King Jr. was largely a creation, and a victim, of white society — Williams appears on safer, less personal ground. White society, claims Williams, used King as long as he was useful to it in staving off a more threatening black militancy. But, Williams continues, when King himself began to become impatient and to harbor doubts about the feasibility of non-violence, white society turned upon him and eliminated him.

"King's life," argues Williams, "just can't be seen in any other way, and I wanted to do a book on him because his life and death were irrefutable proofs that no matter how high a black man may appear to rise above his prefixed station, he is still a nigger and shall be cut down when his usefulness is judged to be at an end.

"It is extremely important for black people to understand that. It is also important to realize that we as a people, as much as Martin King the man, were the target of James Earl Ray's hired bullet."

The headline-making aspects of "The King God Didn't Save" lie in Williams' unsubstantiated assertion that Ray was, indeed, hired by conspirators to assassinate King (although authorities hold otherwise), and in his contention that King in his last years was the victim of political blackmail utilizing "barnyard gossip" obtained through electronic devices.

Williams throws no new light upon the old controversy over whether Robert F. Kennedy or J. Edgar Hoover initiated the FBI wiretaps of King's telephones. Hoover, he says, hated King. But he also intimates that the Kennedys were more interested in using King politically than they were in boosting his movement. Indeed, and understandably, Williams is not a trusting man, but regards one and all with considerable cynicism.

Williams' version is that King finally decided to call the bluff of his blackmailers and did so by his involvement in the anti-Vietnam War movement. When he thus served notice he would not permit a cause to be jeopardized for his personal welfare, Williams reasons that Martin Luther King signed his own death warrant. This disagrees with the Time magazine version that has King yielding before Hoover.

With the murder of King — "the newest display of white cowardice" —, the black people of America came to a turning in their long, hard road, Williams continues. "His failures to achieve moral gains made others see that gains could only be political." Non-violence fell into disrepute in favor of a greater militancy, for "centuries of black patience and faith" had brought about only the slaying of that philosophy's best-known contemporary spokesman. Blacks gave up on the orderly democratic processes and the nation tottered on the brink of the abyss of revolution.

Williams can be pretty acidic in his own observations as when he says: "The American labor unions today, belying their radical liberalism of the '20s and '30s, are one of the most powerful hotbeds of bigotry in existence. Perhaps they always were."

And: "The state of Mississippi resumed its main business — the oppression of black people. I suppose that when you are the poorest state in the nation, you have to do something to feel important."

With all his basic disagreement with King's tactics and his barbs at and repeating of small libels against the Nobel Prize winner, Williams also accords him overall respect and some measure of credit for his accomplishments.

Thus on Page 145 he says that King in struggling for religious support of civil rights "tilted with windmills and he had to lose; there was just too much white power for him to contend with." But on Page 146 he comments: "Still, out of the chaos of the American church, crumbling down around him, in its total failure to be moved, there were signs that King, nevertheless, had planted seeds that would be tended by others (James Forman, for instance)."

Of course, those seeds could not have sprouted if King's tilling had been a total failure.

Williams is no doubt correct when he describes King as naive. He is right, too, when he says King was more attuned to the black middle class than to the ghetto, to the middle-aged than to the young, although, between ages if not classes, he bridged the gap better than most.

But when he seemingly endorses the opinion of Joanne Grant that Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth "was more honest, more intelligent, more courageous, a better organizer, a better grassroots leader than King was," his anti-King pique shows through. No one, of course, was more courageous than the fearless King. And it is doubtful if anyone was more honest.

And what King had to a remarkable degree that many of his colleagues lacked was vision, an idealism and the ability to inspire.

As Williams himself states: "Surely, Martin King, for all his weaknesses, was killed because behind those weaknesses lay profound strengths."

And this comment: "It seems to me that we already have a memorial, living and vigorous, to Martin King . . . a presence in the hearts of those who can no longer, must no longer dream of overcoming on the simple base of morality."

But how tragic have been the consequences of America's refusal to embrace the simple formula advanced by Martin Luther King that our social injustices be swept away by cleansing brooms built from the straws of Christian ethics.

"THROUGH THE Seasons With a Camera" (Doubleday, $3.95) by Paul Villiard is not a portfolio of scenic photographs for armchair enjoyment as the title might lead some to suspect. Rather it is down-to-earth instruction from an expert on camera techniques with emphasis upon nature photography that captures the sense of the season along with its more tangible subjects.

The book is for the not-too-expert and includes a generous black-and-white display of Villiard's own splendid photographs.

The text — on how to picture storms and storm clouds, on recording vacation experiences, on delineating foliage, on photographing snow flakes, on recording insects, animals and flowers, etc. — is detailed as to choice of equipment and film, its use, the framing of the subject, the angle of the picture-taking, the use of filters, etc.

And there is extensive, learned discussion of the various cameras, film and accessories suited to this kind of work.

It seems a most practical asset for the person who wants to add the satisfaction of superior camera work to the enjoyment of his outdoor outings.

Sleuths & Suspense

Here is an absolutely hilarious crime and comedy novel that is not to be missed.

The cast assembled by the author of "May You Die in Ireland" is international, but the place is Ireland. And, indeed, such shenanigans could happen nowhere else.

A criminal crew that outdoes the Lavender Hill Mob in character and ineptitude — but in turn are outdone themselves in that last respect by the forces of law and order — plots and executes the "kidnaping" of an Irish national and religious treasure. Around this unlikely heist revolves one of the merriest and most mixed-up plots to be conceived by a mystery writer in many years.

Kenyon performs a miracle of consistency, keeping things moving at a machine gun pace and never for a moment letting the humor wear thin.

Again: Read this one if you read no other crime novel this year. The missing of it would in itself be a crime against oneself.

Three Interesting Subjects—

Reviews Of New Reading

If you are not the best writer in the world, choose an interesting subject. In this case, Doris Lilly, one of journalism's lightweights, has chosen three interesting subjects: Aristotle Onassis, Stavros Livanos and Stavros Niarchos.

In her own inimitable style Doris gushes on and on, but in the process manages to relate much of interest about these two Greeks and one Argentinian. Yes, it seems that Onassis applied for and was granted Argentine citizenship during the days when he was an expatriate from his native Turkey. He was, however, given Greek citizenship by a blanket law which conferred this status on all Anatolian Greeks from Turkey. Still with me?

Miss Lilly seems to rely heavily on her own personal experiences and knowledge of Onassis and is at her best in writing of him. The other two multi-millionaires are covered from a variety of sources including previously published books, although since the lives of the three giants of the Greek shipping industry are interwoven, a study of the life of Onassis reveals much about the other two. One such example is the fact that Niarchos and Onassis each married a daughter of Livanos and but for the formidable personalities of each of the triumvirate might have formed a monopoly on the world shipping industry.

It's all there — the continuing saga of La Callas, the new tales of Jackie, along with the Congressional investigation. It's even timely.

A recent Wall Street Journal article spelled out the unhappy (for oil companies and motorists) news that shipping rates are at an all-time high because of the wave of Arab nationalism that limits oil production and changes shipping routes.

DORIS LILLY is the author of "Those Fabulous Greeks," the story of shipping multi-millionaires Aristotle Onassis, Stavros Livanos and Stavros Niarchos.

The Professor Pierces The Pipe Smoke

Harry Kemelman, a long-time professor now with Massachusetts State College at Boston, is a disarming critic of the American education system.

He is disarming because he is a part of that system, yet he sees it not through the scented smokescreen of a carefully puffed professorial pipe but through the clear eyes of an undeceived parent, who knows the inside that most parents don't know. He is disarming because he leads the reader through the maze so carefully erected by the university establishment, then brings its paper walls tumbling down — not with sweeping blasts, but with gentle jabs.

The thesis of "Common Sense in Education" is found in a chapter called "The Conspiracy" in an imaginary conversation between a college dean and a graduating senior who plans to go on for a higher degree.

"Dean: . . . Now listen carefully: It's all for us — the whole setup, the whole system — it's for us.

"Claude: I don't get it. What's all for us?

"Dean (impatiently): The whole college system. It's for us, for the faculty, not for the students . . ."

That, holds Kemelman, is at the heart of what is wrong with American education. The colleges and universities are set up, not to instruct the students, but to give the faculty opportunities for research (much of it useless and time-wasting), and to build them into "experts" who will be called on by government and industry.

The educators have built the college degree into a necessity for most worthwhile jobs. But what they offer the students at the undergraduate level has less and less to do with what they will need to know on those jobs. And so the students, misled into believing they will study under noted scholars only to find themselves herded from irrelevant class to irrelevant class by teaching assistants, rise in revolt.

They have striven hard, these students, to make the necessary grades to get into college — for the system has turned the elementary and high schools into vast competitions for grades and test scores. Their parents pay heavily to send them to college. And then they don't get their money's worth.

So they revolt. And the faculty and administration yield all sorts of things to them, abjectly, cravenly — but never anything that will disturb the system that keeps the college existing for the faculty.

Kemelman has some solutions. They require revamping the whole setup, and he is quite realistic in doubting whether that can come to pass. But he has suggestions that might at least start the education establishment looking at itself without that cloud of professorial pipe smoke.

Our Judicial System As It Is Seen From Death Row

There are scores of crime and trial stories written by lawyers, judges and law enforcement officials, wrought from their backgrounds and viewpoints.

This work brings a fresh perspective into an overworked field, for it was written by a man who has had experience on what is referred to as "the other side of the law," a man, convicted of murder, who has spent 13 years on Death Row in New Jersey State Prison.

In his story of the murder of a young girl in New Jersey and the subsequent trial, Smith displays an insight into the lives of those involved in crime that no lawyer, writer or probation officer has.

More surprising, he shows a grasp of what makes those involved in law enforcement and politics tick, but his viewpoint of their maneuvers is jaundiced.

Naturally his viewpoint of justice differs from that expressed in law journals, political speeches and newspaper editorials.

He rips into hypocrisy, sham and duplicity, but the story is fast-moving, gripping and powerful enough to stand on its own.

EDGAR SMITH
An insight into crime

The scope is wide, ranging into Mafia activities, smalltown life, sex parties and state politics, and makes for lively reading.

Smith understandably might have overstated his case against the judicial system, but there is a germ of truth that should give everyone pause to think.

A reader might even have a reasonable doubt about the system after reading this first novel.

A Skill To Learn And Hope You Never Have To Use It

NEW WAYS OF SELF DEFENSE by E.G. Bartlett; Hart, 125 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

It is one of the signs of an unfortunate aspect of our times, its violence, that a number of manuals on self-defense have been published of late, just as schools in karate, ju-jitsu, etc., have flourished.

This seems to be one of the best of the books, its author having combined the Oriental defenses and attacks with the rudiments of Western boxing and wrestling to devise a simple defense program that is practical for the woman or man with no special physical strength or ability.

The emphasis is always upon defense against an attacker, and the old Oriental approach of using your opponent's movements and momentum against him is ulilized extensively.

The text and the accompanying drawings are clear and easily comprehended.

"I have selected those movements that are most suitable for practice at home by ordinary people — persons who are not athletes nor gymnasts nor experts at any of the systems," writes Bartlett. "There are no falls to learn as in Judo or Aikido, so no mat nor any other equipment is required. All you need is a partner."

Needless to say, some moderation has to be used in the practicing.

If you feel the need for this kind of skill and your time to acquire it is limited, then this book is a good first step. Read it, practice it — and hope you never have to use it. If you do, hope, as well, that your opponent hasn't read it, too.

NEW COOKBOOKS FOR HOME CHEFS

By MAXINE KEOWN

Is there a cuisine more exotic to the westerner than that of the South Seas and Southeast Asia?

Well, possibly that of the Caribbean might qualify.

And you can enjoy them both in the pages of two new volumes in the dazzling Foods of the World series by Time-Life Books.

"Pacific and Southeast Asian Cooking" is the work of David Steinberg, a veteran correspondent and traveler in that area, while "The Cooking of the Caribbean Islands" was authored by Linda Wolfe who has written for Gourmet magazine and who wrote "The Literary Gourmet" in the early 1960s.

Both do a splendid job of describing not just the fare but also the foodstuffs and culinary traditions of their colorful regions. We would, however, have to give the nod to Mrs. Wolfe for a particularly outstanding job that makes the Caribbean book perhaps a bit the more impressive of the two.

The two sections of the globe have a great deal in common — a marvelous selection of tropical fruits; a bountiful supply of seafood; spicy condiments; a tradition of outdoor cookery, and the merging with their native delicacies of the ethnic dishes of many lands brought by immigrants.

In the Pacific book the recipes range from the toasted spiced coconut of Indonesia to oxtail stew of the Philippines, from the sweet and sour fish of Vietnam to the lemony shrimp soup of Thailand, from the shrimp and zucchini curry of Malaysia to the skewered chicken livers of Hawaii, from the fish fillets with macadamia nuts of Australia to a baked papaya dessert of Tahiti.

In the Caribbean book, the temptations to the palate are equally varied, from the Dominican Republic's fried yam cakes to Jamaica's baked papaya with meat filling, from Antigua's flambeed baked bananas to Jamaica's mango chutney, from the marinated fish of Martinique to the lobster salad of Barbados, from Trinidad ginger beer to Puerto Rican baby goat fricassee, and from crab stew in Haiti to fish chowder in the Virgin Islands.

Both books are strikingly illustrated, the pictures alone guaranteed to start the taste buds tingling. Both also include separate, handy spiral-bound booklets in which the recipes are repeated for kitchen use. And the $7.95 per book price remains one of publishing's big bargains.

Some other new books of interest to cooks:

"The Compleat Chicken Cookbook" (Simon and Schuster, $3.95) has strong local appeal in that its author, Anne M. (Mrs. James) Fletcher, is a San Rafael resident. But it has much more than that to recommend it. That all-American favorite, chicken, is presented in a diversity of ways — fried, stewed, roasted, stuffed, broiled, devilled, fricasseed, grilled, baked, braised, in soups, in sandwiches, in salads, in casseroles, in souffles, Spanish-style, German-style, English-style, Central American-style, Chinese-style, Italian-style, and what have you. With Mrs. Fletcher's imaginative guidance, you can turn an old reliable into a glamour dish and restore chicken to its former place of prominence as the thing to serve upon the special festive or guest occasion. Mrs. Fletcher has also included in her excellent book instruction on buying and preparing the bird.

"Let's Ask the Cook" (Cowles, $6.95) is by the syndi- $6.95) is by the syndicated food cated food columnist Nan Wiley and is especially noteworthy for its abundance of helpful tips scattered among the decipes. Indeed, the emphasis is upon how to cook rather than what to cook. For instance: "French fries, beets, and cabbage wedges are all improved with caraway seed." And: "Slice tomatoes for a tossed salad vertically instead of horizontically; somehow they retain their juices better." rMs. Wiley does, however, include a good many of her favorite recipes, and they are varied and appealing.

"How to Buy Food" (Cornerstone Library, $1) is not a cookbook at all, but a manual for the supermarket shopper. Valeria Moolman compiled the material under U.S. Department of Agriculture guidance. There's instruction on how to select your meats, produce, dairy goods, etc., plus tips on how to stretch your dollars. This paperback should be especially helpful to the newlywed inexperienced in food buying, but it includes material useful to all of us.

For those who like to take their history painlessly, Mervyn Jones has written an intriguing novel based on the life of Joseph Stalin. The story is very close to the truth, although Jones has taken the novelist's prerogative to add a character here, and to speculate a scene there.

To keep track of the large cast of characters the author has thrown out the long Russian names and substituted Anglicized given-names. So Vladimir Lenin becomes Victor and Leon Trotsky is Leonard. But one can't help but smile, when Klimenti Voroshilov is turned into just plain Clem, and Sergo Ordjonikidze is called Sam!

Luckily, Stalin is still named Joseph.

People who read the book hoping to get a new insight into this strange man's personality will be disappointed. He is just as inscrutable as ever. Although Mervyn Jones conjures up some degree of warmth and sympathy for the child Joseph, this is lost by the time he becomes a revolutionary. From then on, he is the taciturn, stoic leader who surveys the world through slitted eyes, puffs on his pipe and plots his Machiavellian maneuvers to grab all the power.

Where the author excels is his portrayal of the people whose lives are touched by Stalin.

The characterization of Stalin's wife, Diana (Nadia), and his son, Jacob, gives the book substance. Here one can understand the dedication and joyfulness of the early revolutionaries. But as one freedom after another is abolished with Stalin's rise in power, Diana becomes disillusioned and finally commits suicide. Jacob's disbelief in his father's tactics, as seen through the eyes of the second generation, is particularly compelling.

Jones' description of the times right after the revolution is interesting: "It was a time of marvelling human growth. Everyone did his job better — got more ideas, talked more eloquently, made new friends, lived more intensely . . . It was a time of freedom, so natural that it soon ceased to be strange."

Lenin was the man who instilled this feeling into the new revolutionaries. Compared to Stalin, he was a saint. His premature death triggered the power struggle that saw the rise of the quietest member of the Central Committee. How Stalin broke each man who stood in his way to absolute power provides an engrossing yet horrifying story.

It is tragic that with all the humane leaders who had come to the fore during the Revolution, Russia had to end up with Stalin. Mervyn Jones sums it up this way:

"The men who get power are the men who think of nothing else; who make it their supreme value; who are the most unfit to have it, if we think freedom matters and power should be limited; who are totally corrupt, if belief in power is a corruption. The men who are fit to have power, because they value freedom and tolerance and mercy, are the ones who won't get it. They don't care enough to struggle hard."

Plantings For The Patio And Pool Side

In fact, without plantings, a pool deck or a patio can be so sun-scorched and hot that its enjoyment becomes an impossibility. A selection of sun-loving plants growing in containers offers the needed relief from the sun.

CONTAINER gardening is also a challenging and rewarding experience for the gardener.

The key thing to remember when it comes to maintenance is that trees, shrubs or flowering plants growing in containers and sitting in the sun need more frequent waterings than do plantings rooted in the ground. And those waterings should be deep and thorough, so that the root zone is saturated. Don't be stingy with the water.

A tree planted in a large-size container, a box or barrel, can be just as effective as a shade-producer as a tree growing in the yard.

SOME ADAPTED to this kind of cultivation are the Southern Magnolia, especially in its smaller St. Mary's version; the camphor with its apple green foliage, the Evergreen Pear of pendulous growth, and the Purple Leaf Plum.

Such fruit trees as the pear and fig can also be grown successfully in large containers.

And don't overlook the Oleander in its tree form. In flower or not, it is a distinctive specimen. And so hardy that it laughs at neglect.

FOR POOL-SIDE containers, the evergreen trees are best, since deciducus trees may cause a problem when they shed their leaves. The slow-growing Mediterranean Fan Palm is an excellent choice for the pool. The Yuccas, Dracaena Palms and the many bamboos are worthy of consideration, too.

Yet another outstanding choice is the dwarf citrus. These are beautifully ornamental all the year around. And a harvest of their fruit may be an added bonanza.

As for shrubs, there are several outstanding landscape shrubs that adapt well to container culture and are things of beauty. The personable flax with its semi-arching, sword-like but not sharp leaves is one. It will take the heat and exposure, as will the hibiscus and the bottle brush.

HEAVENLY BAMBOO or Nandina is an ideal accent plant with its feathery foliage. The privet family is a hardy bunch, and the nursery may have the Wax Leaf Privet in large sizes already trimmed into interesting shapes. There's a pride of ownership that goes with these attention-winning specimens.

Nurseries will have xylosma, pittosporums and photinias that will flourish in the sunshine

Xylosma has soft green, arching foliage. Photinia is larger leafed, a darker shade of green and sports new growth that is a dazzling reddish-brown.

If you are unfamiliar with some of the plant materials that have been mentioned, visit your nurseryman and ask him to show you specimens. He should have all or nearly all. And he can advise you on plants and container sizes that fit your special situation.

AMONG THE trees and shrubs especially suited to container growing on the patio or beside the swimming pool are the dwarf citrus. And one of the best of the lot is the Dwarf Meyer Lemon shown at left. It will give you lush green foliage, fragrant blossoms and tasty fruits, and contribute greatly to your enjoyment of your outdoor living. (Drawing courtesy of California Association of Nurserymen)

For Roses That Bloom In Fall, Give Tender Care Now

Watering is all important this month for your roses.

Don't keep the plants standing in water, but never let them be dry around their feet, either. Deep, thorough waterings are in order.

Remember that roses bloom only on new wood and without proper irrigation there will be little new growth for blooms to form on this fall.

Overhead sprinkling can reduce fungus problems by flushing off disease spores. No sunburn will occur if done early in the day and if the water is brought to a full run on the foliage. The water should run long enough to provide deep irrigation for the plants.

Also important in rose care is spraying.

There are effective and safe plant protective chemicals to use and if you are in doubt, rely on your nurseryman's recommendations and advice on overcoming the insect pests that would sap the vigor and beauty from your roses.

Fertilizing is equally as important as watering and spraying, if you are to enjoy a quantity of quality blooms through the autumn months. Whether you feed your roses on a monthly basis or provide nutrition less frequently, following a planned program will assure you of the results you expect.

Consult your nurseryman for the type plant food to use and ask his advice on establishing a regular feeding program.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- If when you irrigate the water seems to be running off instead of sinking into the ground, add a little penetrant to the water. In late summer the earth in California is often sun-baked and hard-packed, so that your hose needs the help of a chemical in penetrating the crust.

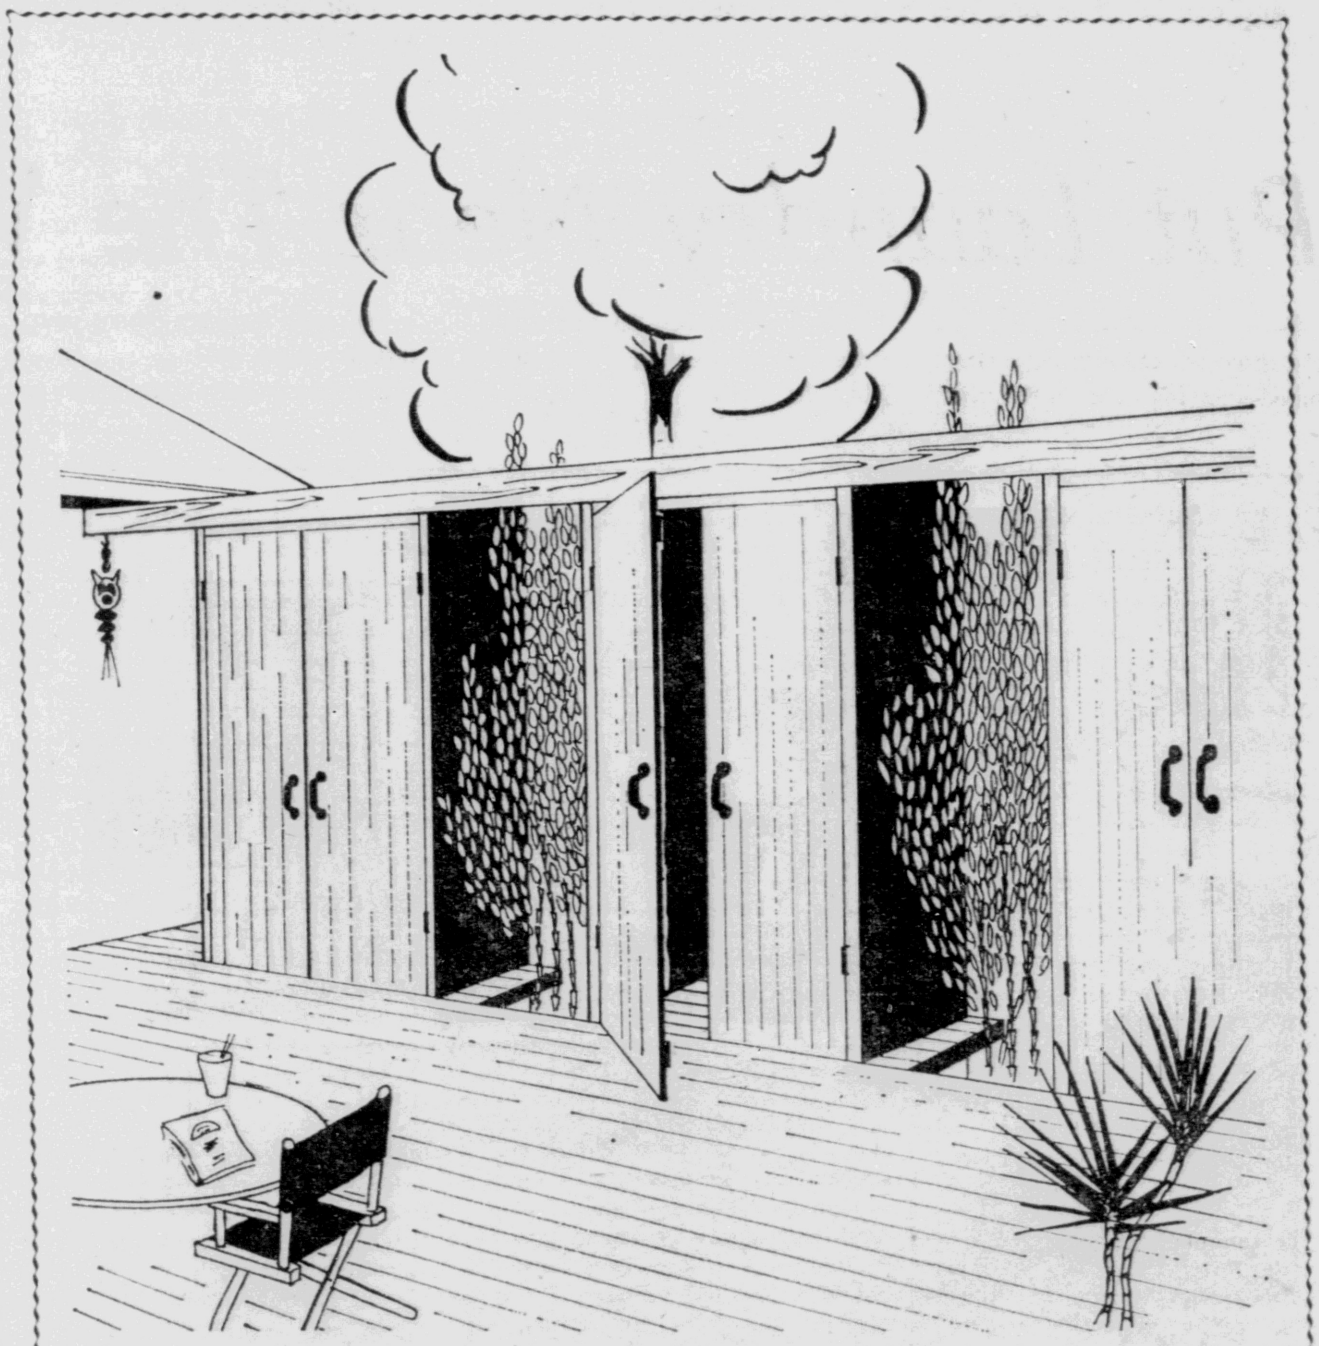
- Prune the leggy growth from your roses, water deeply and fertilize, all to promote a good fall bloom.

- To fill the bare spots in your garden along walls and fences, shop for plants already started on trellises. Among those to be found in the espalier form are the Pink Powder Puff or Calliandra, Star Jasmine, Pyracantha, Evergreen Pear, Bottle Brush and Loquat.

- Having a patio or pool party? Dress up the surroundings with a few pots of blooming petunias, marigolds and periwinkle, all of which can be found in the nurseries now.

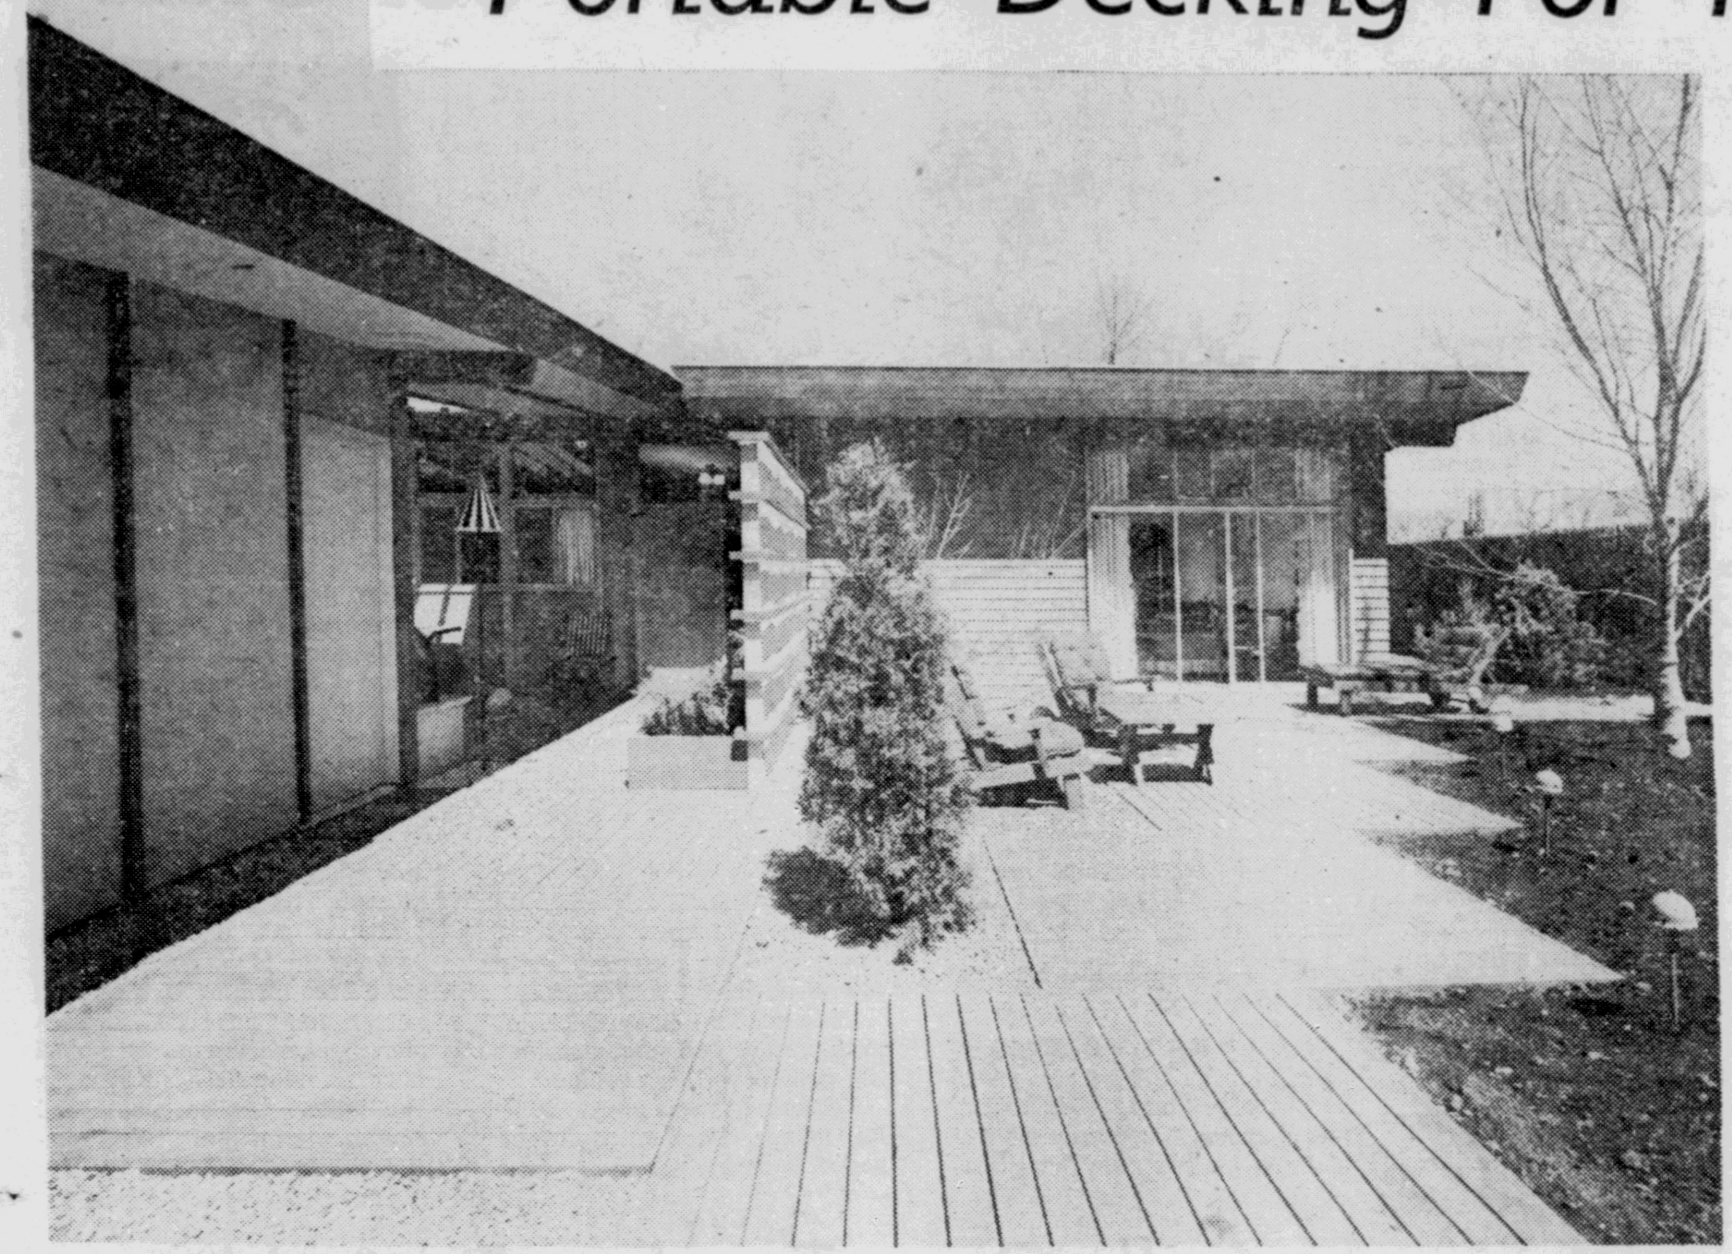
- The creative use of landscape rock in certain garden areas can add a handsome effect.

- Gladiolus plantings should be allowed to dry off only gradually after bloom, so continue to water them occasionally.



A SCREEN BUILT along one side of a deck was designed to provide storage as well as privacy with double-door closets built of vertical cedar siding to match the house. Two-foot-wide spaces between the closets, ideal for storing outdoor furniture and gardening equipment, give an open feeling and have been planted with bamboo.

Portable Decking For The Yard



THIS ENTRY and courtyard feature movable deck pads, each six-feet-square, that have been laid in a herringbone pattern and can be lifted and rearranged. The courtyard is shielded by a property line fence, and there is a screen for the entry. The raised planter box, shrubs and graveled areas assure easy maintenance. (Photo courtesy of Western Wood Products Association)

The goal of most home owners today is an attractive yard without a lot of maintenance work.

And the place to start is at ground level where, quite possibly, the answer might lie in decking that can be installed over either level or uneven ground with little grading.

It's important to insure that the groundcover beneath decking will be weed-free. This means treating the soil or, preferably, laying plastic and covering it with gravel, taking care that moisture runs away from the house. Both deck and gravel then drain freely.

MOVABLE DECK pads are particularly useful and easy to install, since they are built-in units.

Six-foot squares of decking can be laid in a herringbone pattern, interspersed with planting areas for shade trees and shrubs. A stepped or irregular arrangement is more interesting visually than a long straight edge.

Those who like change and variety can simply lift the pads and set them in a new design when the mood strikes.

Areas not decked can have one or a combination of several groundcovers like bark chips, screeds of larger rocks, and areas of thick weed-choking plantings, some of which have colorful blossoms.

Movable planters or raised boxes will provide a show of color with little effort. They can be set along a fence or around the edge of decking.

Western lumber is a fine choice for outdoor construction, and the wood can be finished with a color stain or treated with a clear preservative coating. It's advisable to stain or treat before assembly.

Put Laundry Near The Wash

Today's electrical servants are great at tubbing and drying soiled clothing and linens, but they don't march up and down the stairs collecting and returning the wash.

Put your facilities where your laundry loads are!

Even in modern one-story houses, the utility room is too often quite a hike from the bedrooms. Put a washer and dryer in a hallway built-in and save steps.

IN TWO-STORY houses, utilities tend to end up in the basement, daylight or otherwise, putting the housewife into training for alpine sports.

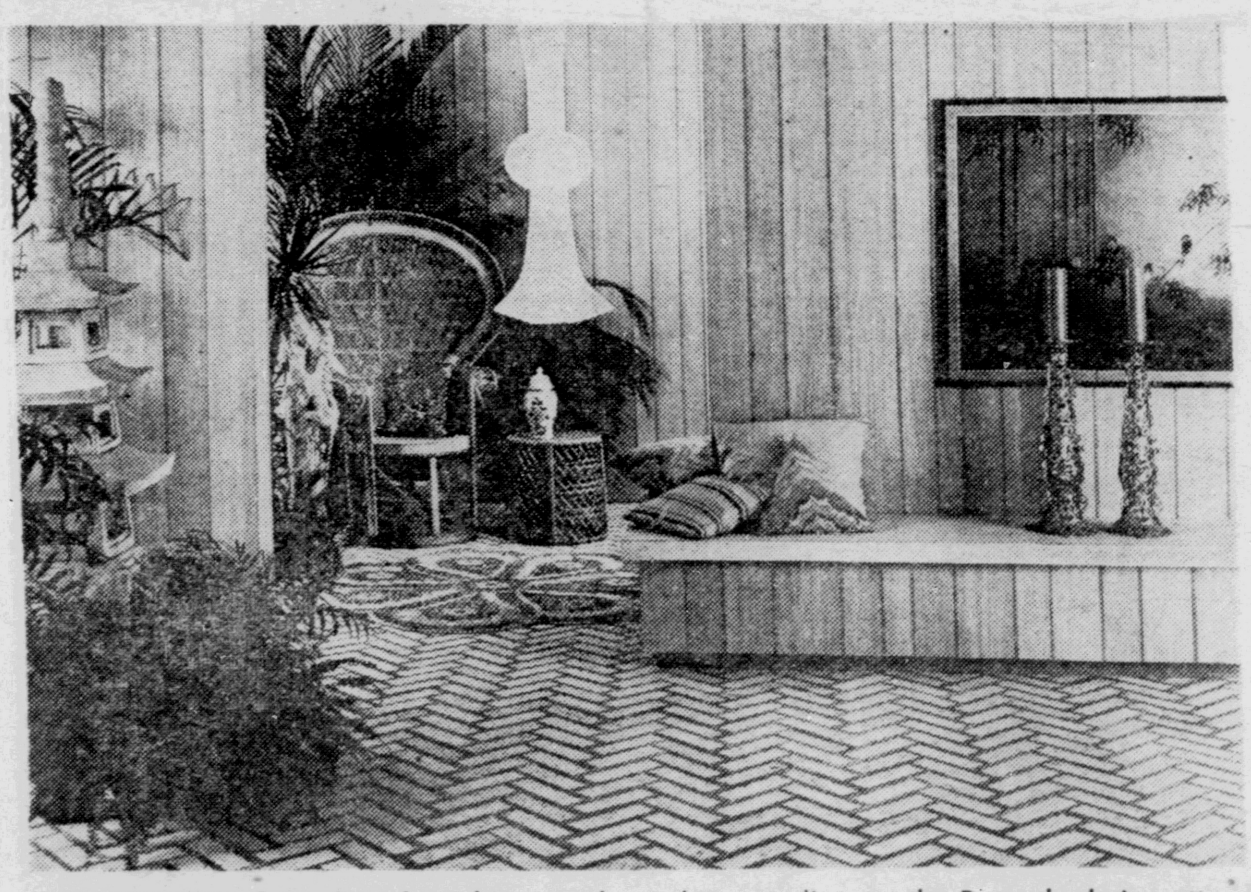
One of the nicest presents a thoughtful family can give her is a utility center upstairs, where the wash accumulates.

Most older homes contain an extra closet or corner big enough to house the appliances, often a useless corner under the eaves will suffice. The trick is to find a spot above or adjacent to existing plumbing.

AND IT CAN be a family secret. A built-in will hide the whole arrangement. Doors and side walls built with solid lumber will quarantine noise.

Fir or hemlock panel doors will make the area most attractive.

Add decorative moldings and make the doors a conversation piece.



THE RICHNESS of Far East furnishings and art have been combined cleverly in this family roon. with paneling, floor and lighting. The paneling is in an antique gold tone that compliments the Peacock chair, rattan circular table, Oriental ginger bar, altar candlesticks and pagoda-style garden lantern. An Oriental print, potted greens and rice paper lamp heighten the Oriental effect.

Economy Tip

When buying lumber, pick lowest-cost grade that will serve the use intended.

If Home Needs Quick Facelift, Install Shutters

Want a quick and easy facelift for your house? Try shutters.

Once a protective window covering used on Colonial homes, wood shutters have changed in purpose but not in popularity. Today, they are considered a "cosmetic" asset for almost any style window, and are appropriate for practically any architectural decor.

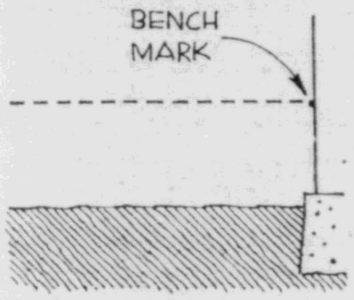
Shutters can do a number of things for a house exterior: give texture to a flat wall surface, provide color accents, and give horizontal emphasis to windows — and doors. Because they can be easily removed and repainted any time, they also provide a convenient color change for the house facade.

Another advantage of wood shutters is that they can be easily and economically installed by a do-it-yourselier.

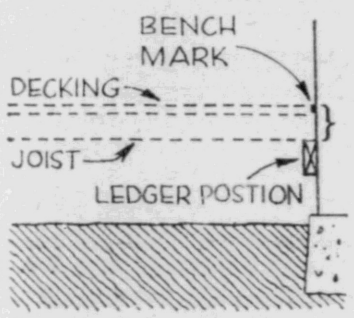
Some Tips On How To Build Your Own Redwood Deck

To construct a simple 10-by-10-foot low-level redwood deck under three feet high:

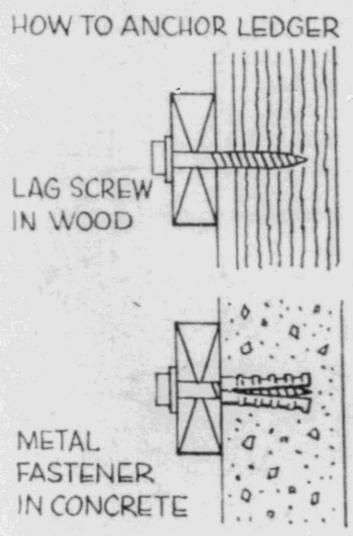
1. Decide the desired placement and height of the deck relative to the doorway it will serve. The planned deck should be nearly level with the floor of the house, or else one easy step down from the doorway. Therefore the deck should be either one inch below the doorway, or four to seven inches below it. With the desired deck surface height determined, a line should be drawn there as a "benchmark" or height reference.



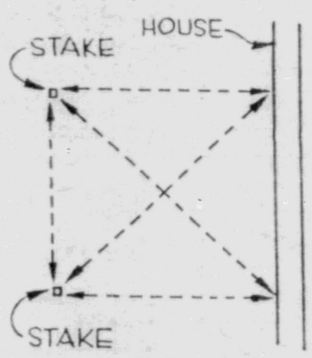
2. Now it's necessary to find the height of where the ledger is to be anchored. The ledger will support one end of the two-by-six joists. Therefore, actual dimensions (not nominal dimensions) of decking thickness and joist depth should be totaled to measure down the wall from the deck benchmark to ascertain where the top of the ledger will be placed.



3. Anchor the two-by-six ledger to the house studs or concrete foundation with the simplest anchoring system permitted by local building codes. Two such systems are illustrated at left.

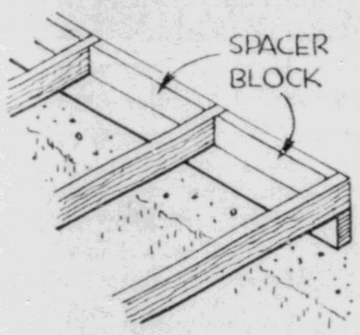


4. With the ledger attached, the deck's outlines can be projected from it by establishing a right angle from the house and measuring 10 feet outward to where one corner of the deck will extend. Mark this corner with a wooden stake. Establish the other outside corner and mark it with a Stake. Prove squareness of projections by measuring between stakes, and between stakes and the house, then measure diagonally between the farthest corners. If these latter measurements are equal, the corners of the deck are properly marked.



5. With corners and squareness predetermined, footings of pre-cast concrete should be firmly seated in their six positions where four-by-four posts and four-by-six beams can equally transmit deck weight to the ground. Outside edges of footings should be placed within the perimeter of the deck if future plans call for enclosing the sides for decorative effect.

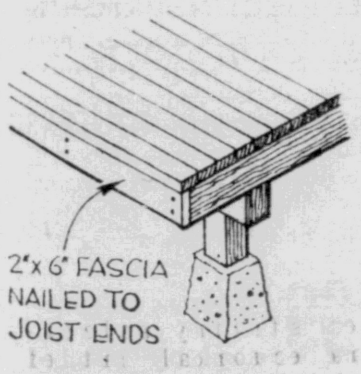
6. Post lengths will vary with the unevenness of the ground and seated footings. Accurate measurement of posts can be achieved by raising a joist (with one end resting on the ledger) to its proper level and elevation (determined with carpenter's level) and attaching it temporarily to a post resting on a footing. Subtract from the post the actual depth of a beam, and mark the post for sawing. The post must be plumb when measured and carefully trimmed to insure a good seat for the beam. When the post is sawn, toenail it to the footing. Repeat the process for each of the six posts, then toenail the beams to the tops of the posts.



7. With the two beams in place, joists may be set in place on 30-inch centers spanning the beams from the ledger. To prevent lateral movement of joists, two-by-six-inch blocks should be installed between joists where they rest on the ledger. Insert blocks between joists along the line of the center beam. At the end of the deck a 10-foot long two-by-six can be nailed to the end of the joists to serve as fascia.

8. With all the deck's structural elements in place, decking may be laid parallel with the wall of the house. With seasoned two-inch nominal clear all heart redwood decking material, allow about an eighth of an inch between boards for drainage.

To prevent staining of redwood by nails use only noncorroding nails: stainless steel, aluminum, or hot-dipping galvanized, size 16d for decking.

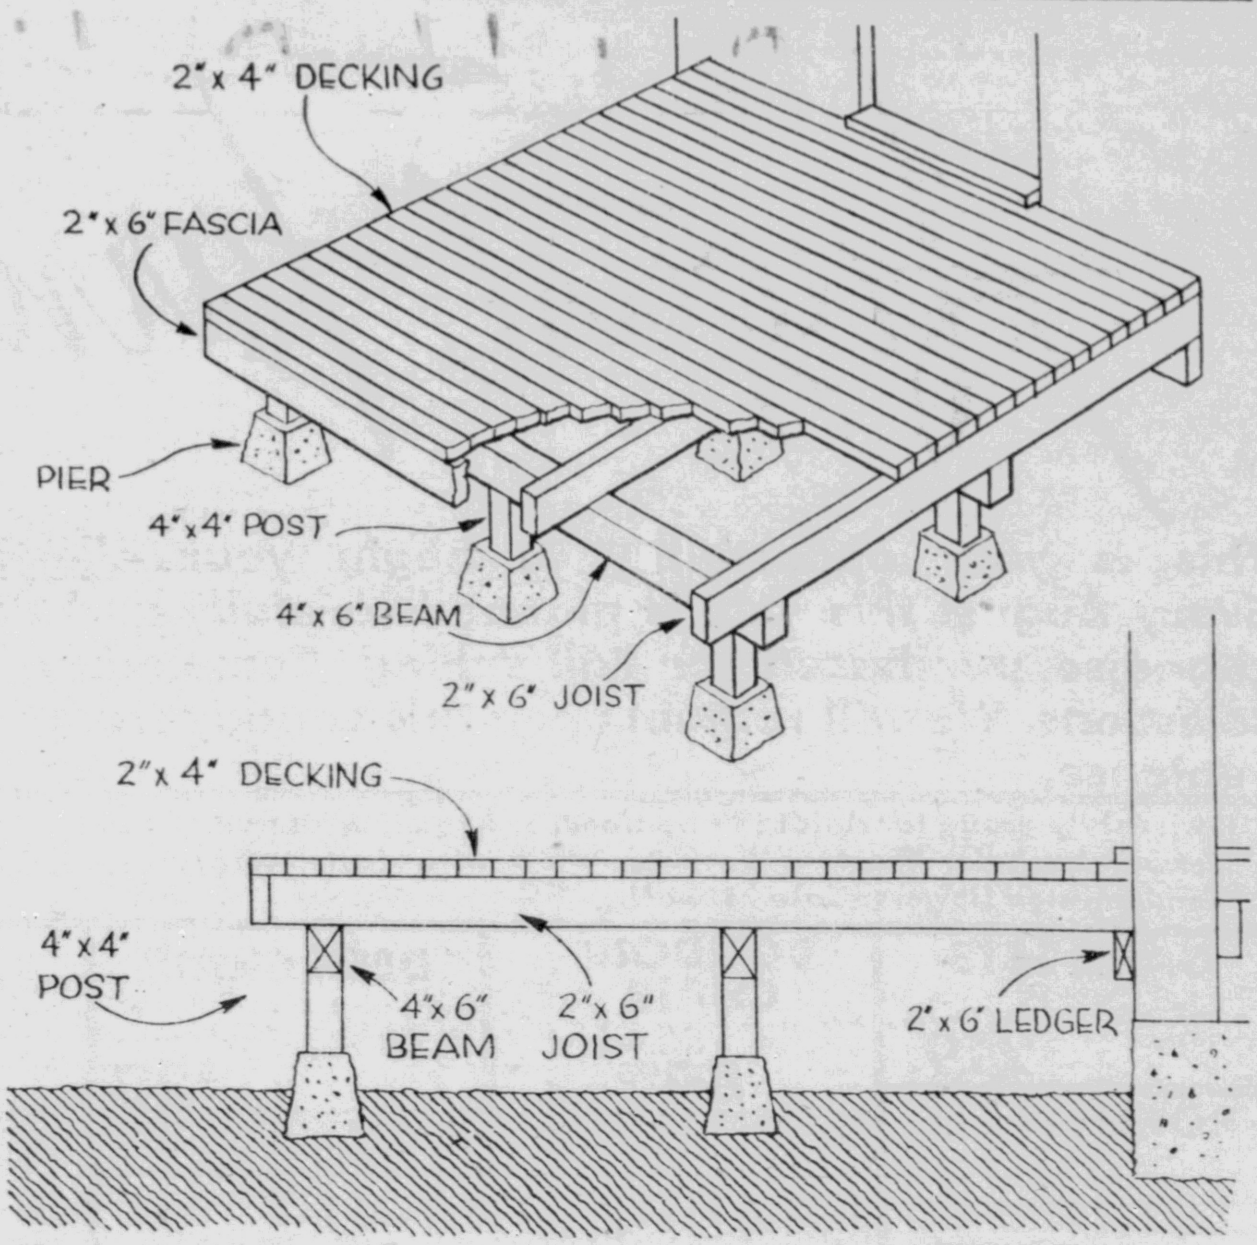


How To Give Furniture That Antiqued Look

If your furniture isn't naturally worn, you can simulate an antiqued distressed wood finish easily and quickly, according to the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association.

First, apply the undercoating and toner that come in the antiquing kit. Then, make scratches and scars by beating the surface with a heavy tool or a burlap bag filled with chains. Sand the scratches and apply artist's oil paint "raw umber" straight from the tube.

Rub off excess oil paint.



THE DECK STRUCTURE gathers the weight and load of the deck and transmits it downward to the ground. The top layer is the decking itself. If built of redwood, it should be "clear all-heart" redwood. The decking rests on joists that are primary structural element of the floor. The joists rest upon beams which gather the load and transmit it to the posts or a ledger fastened to the face of an existing building. These elements should be of at least "construction" grade redwood heartwood. The posts rest on concrete footings set on or in the ground. In extremely low level decks the beams may rest directly on footings. Builders should consult their local building and/or planning officials to make certain their projects conform to building and zoning codes.

12 MIDNIGHT

TV's Abby Dalton: A Busy Gal

BY VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Abby Dalton, a regular panelist on "The Hollywood Squares," is probably the most active female in the entertainment field.

In addition to her television chores for NBC, she plays tennis, swims, paints, raises three children, skis, and is mistress of a 6,000-square-foot home.

"Try vacuum cleaning a big four-bedroom house with five baths, and you'll know why I need domestic help," Abby says.

The wife of Jack D. Smith, who is in the electrical supply business, Abby has a full-time housekeeper who attends to keeping their comfortable, warm home in apple pie order.

Abby, on the other hand, does all the shopping and cooking herself.

Her schedule on "The Hollywood Squares" is ideal. Every other week she spends one evening — from 5-11 p.m. — taping five shows.

THE REST OF the time she is free to pursue her multiplicity of activities. In the wintertime — frequently during the week — she takes her family to their apartment at Mammoth where the ski slopes are fast and exciting.

When the snow disappears Abby is on the tennis court of a nearby park or splashing in the family swimming pool along with her youngsters, Matthew, 7, Kathleen, 5 and John, 4.

Rainy days provide no traumas for Abby.

Strictly an amateur painter with no formal training, Abby was pressed into entering her art work in a show at Lakeside Country Club, where her husband is president. Abby came away with two second-place prizes in portraiture and landscape. She was as surprised as anyone.

Abby bubbles with enthusiasm and humor. An unpretentious girl, she is also unambitious.

THE COMEDY panel shows allow her to continue her career with a maximum of time to devote to her home and family.

Her San Fernando Valley house is best described as a Williamsburg colonial without the pillars.

Abby has decorated the house with a mixture of modern and classical pieces of furniture. Only the dining room is completely colonial in decor, including a Queen Anne table.

THE LIVING ROOM is off-limits to the three young Smiths. Abby explains why: "It gives us one room where we can entertain guests without having to worry about them sitting down on a toy fire engine or something."

The youngsters have their own play room with plastic, unbreakable furniture and a multitude of toys and games.

Because her show beams during the daytime, Abby's offspring frequently tune in to watch their mother. When they were younger the confusion was great. They couldn't comprehend how their mother could be in two places at once.

The other day Kathleen ran into the kitchen to tell her mother, "Come quickly, Mommy, Abby Dalton is on television."

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

"LIGETI: "Lux Aeterna"; BEDFORD: "Two Poems for Chorus"; MELLNAS: "Succsim"; KOPELENT: "Matka"— Choir of North German Radio, Hamburg/Helmut Franz — Deutsche Grammophon 137 004:

DGG's new Avant Garde Series is impeccable in presentation, programming, notes, and most of all technical quality. The last item is all-important with modern music exploring ultra-wide dynamics.

The super-quiet surfaces of DGG discs have long been a satisfaction to record collectors. With the now nearly universal use of the Dolby system to reduce noises prior to cutting the disc, the presence of annoying scratch, ticks and pops on most American-made LPs has become if anything more noticeable than ever. The frequent triple-pianissimo passages in this music are never masked by such noises and the music comes through unpolluted.

The Legeti piece for a cappella choir will be remembered from the soundtrack of "2001," and even out of that context it conjures outer-space scenes. However, it is based on strict rules of ancient polyphony such as Palestrina employed.

The Bedford works are adapted from poems of Kenneth Patchen, one about the awakening of the rain-dampened countryside in early morning, and the other finding joy in the mood of the open sea.

One doesn't hear too much avant-garde choral music, but this collection demonstrates that some very exciting things are happening in this field. The human voices lend a much-needed feeling of humanity to often aseptic, machine-like contemporary music.

KAGEL: "Fantasy for Organ with Obbligati"; ALLENDE-BLIN: "Sonorites"; LIGETI: "Volumina, Etude No. 1" (Harmonies) — Gerd Zacher, pipe organ — DGG 137 003:

Most first-time listeners to this amazing LP will swear it is a creation of the electronic music studio or at least one of the synthesizers, Buchla or Moog.

In reality only a standard pipe organ is used, but with such techniques as holding down great handsfull of keys at one time and slowly creeping from one handfull to another, or turning the blowers off and on while holding down groups of notes. The latter results in a peculiar deflation effect that must be heard to be believed.

The obbligati in Kagel's composition are a kind of cantus firmus consisting of tape recordings illustrating the acoustic background of the organist's life. Mixed in to the music are sounds of falling rain, kettle boiling, an egg-timer and recordings from christenings and weddings held in the church.

The Ligeti works again strike this writer as the major interest on the LP: Changing clusters of notes form bands of sound in "Volumina," with the forearm and even the upper part of the body being used to depress the keys.

Superb stereo reproduction graces this unique album.

STOCKHAUSEN: "Gruppen" for three orchestras; "Carre" for four orchestras and four choirs — Symphony Orchestra and Choir of Northwest German Radio, Hamburg/Kagel/Stockhausen/Markowski/Gielen, conductors — DGG 137 002:

These Stockhausen explorations of his own individual sound-world play around with the spatial factor in music — something which really hasn't been used since the antiphonal works the Gabrielis wrote for Renaissance Venice.

The three small (36-member) orchestras in "Gruppen" are arranged like a three-channel stereo system in front of the concert audience. The instruments in each group are similar, but there are several layers of music at different tempi that one orchestra could not play alone. The use of sound motion and direction is similar to what Stockhausen did electronically in his most famous piece, "Song of the Youths."

"Carre" has the concert audience sitting in a circular arrangement, with the four orchestras and four choirs behind and against the walls of the auditorium. The work has a contemplative quality unusual in Stockhausen, with small changes taking place inside the tones as they slowly spin out. The "minimal art" approach has undoubtedly affected Germany's leading far-out composer.

It's unfortunate the four-channel original had to be reduced to two channels for the disc. Perhaps when Quadraphonic becomes more widespread we'll be able to hear this work the way live audiences did at its premiere in 1959.

HANS WERNER HENZE: "Doppio Concerto for Oboe, Harp and Strings" — Heinz Holliger, oboe/Ursula Holliger, "Sonata per Archi" — Collegium Musicum of Zurich, Paul Sacher — DGG 139 396:

The chamber music feeling of the "Doppio Concerto" is preserved by the major part in the musical development which is given to the 18 solo strings.

The second half of the "Sonata per Archi" features 32 variations on a simple violin statement. The variations explore imaginatively many different timbres and effects possible on string instruments short of the super-avant-garde techniques of banging one another over the head with them or submerging them in buckets of water.

Brown Act Is Clarified

The Attorney General of California has declared that notices of special meetings by public agencies must be received by news media 24 hours before the meeting. The attorney general ruled that mere mailing of notices 24 hours before a meeting is insufficient.

The opinion of Atty. Gen. Thomas C. Lynch contradicts an opinion of the Marin County district attorney's office which would pave the way for secret meetings of official bodies in Marin.

Lynch's interpretation of the Ralph M. Brown Act, which governs closed and special meetings, was delivered Thursday to Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael. Its conclusion is almost identical to opinions issued by the state legislative counsel and the Marin County counsel.

Eight of 14 county district attorneys — who replied to a poll of all 58 in the state by the Independent-Journal — also stated that mailing of notices 24 hours before a special meeting is not sufficient to meet the requirements of the Ralph M. Brown Act.

Lynch's opinion was requested by Bagley after notice of a special meeting of the Sausalito School District board on May 15 was mailed so late that it could not be received by the Independent-Journal until the meeting was over.

The notices were deposited at the Sausalito Post Office at 11 p.m. May 13 announcing the meeting at 7 a.m. May 15. Above the mail slot into which the notices were dropped was a placard which said that nothing mailed at that hour would move until 4 o'clock the next morning automatically making impossible — the post office later said — delivery of the notice to the I-J 24 hours before the meeting.

As it turned out, the notices did not arrive at the I-J until the morning of May 15 after the meeting was over.

In response to complaints that the board did not give 24-hour notice of its meeting, the county district attorney's office declared that a letter is considered received the moment it is dropped in a mailbox.

Lynch disagreed, saying flatly that "mere deposit of such notice in the mail is insufficient."

"The required notice to news media of special meetings of local public agencies including school boards must be actually delivered at least 24 hours before the time of such meeting to those media who have requested notice in writing," the attorney general's opinion said.

Although a general rule is that consent (to a proposal) is deemed to have been communicated between the parties with the deposit of an acceptance in the mail, the rule is not applicable in this case, Lynch said, because "the applicable statute (section 25956 of the California Government Code) requires that the notice to the news media be delivered whether personally or by mail, 24 hours before" the meeting.

Lynch's opinion underlined the words notice and delivered.

Angela Davis, Magee Face Murder Charges

Warrants Are Out For Duo

Warrants charging ousted teacher Angela Davis and wounded convict Ruchell Magee with murder and kidnapping were issued yesterday in Marin County.

Magee was wounded in the Aug. 7 shoot-out at Marin Civic Center in which Judge Harold J. Haley, of Marin Superior Court, two other convicts and an accomplice were killed, and Miss Davis has been linked to three of the guns used and possibly a fourth.

Dist. Atty. Bruce Bales said the warrants were issued by Judge Peter Allen Smith of Municipal Court after he said new information in the case came to light at 4 p.m. yesterday. Bales declined further comment.

The Los Angeles Herald-Examiner reported today that in addition to a pistol and two rifles, Miss Davis bought the shotgun which killed the judge two days before the shooting in San Francisco.

Shortly after the warrants were issued, San Francisco police raided a Potrero District home apparently looking for Miss Davis, but found her sister, Mrs. Fania Jackson of Los Angeles, instead.

She was released after questioning.

Bales refused to reveal whether Miss Davis's purchase of guns used in the daring escape attempt by James D. McLain, William Christmas and Magee — aided by Jonathan Jackson, 17, of Pasadena — was the decisive factor in the warrant.

However, sheriff's inspector Ronald Retana confirmed yesterday that a third gun purchased by the avowed Communist and Black Panther had cropped up in the case. This weapon, an M-1 carbine, was bought by her in Los Angeles July 25 at the same store where she bought a Plainfield semiautomatic rifle more than a year ago.

Retana refused to confirm reports that the third weapon had

A NEW CAREER LOOMS

Thomas Making Gallant Struggle

A week ago, Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas was struggling to survive a bullet wound that severed his spine and left him paralyzed from the waist down.

Today, he is exercising in his hospital bed by hoisting himself by his hands on suspended bars, and looking forward to a possible new career as a Marin Municipal Court judge, according to associates.

Thomas was one of five hostages seized by three San Quentin convicts and a young accomplice Aug. 7 in Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley's courtroom. Judge Haley, one of the hostages, was slain by a shotgun blast while the plotters' van loaded with nine persons was trying to get past roadblocks at Marin Civic Center. Two of the three convicts and the youth who smuggled weapons to them in the courtroom are dead.

Thomas, when the shooting started, grabbed a gun from one convict and shot at three of them, he told investigators at the scene.

His rapid recovery has led his doctors to predict he may be able to go home from Marin General hospital in two to three weeks, Thomas' associates in the district attorney's office said yesterday.

They said he would be able to assume normal work loads, considering his paralysis, in a matter of a few weeks to a few months.

The news gave added push to Marin County factions seeking his appointment to municipal court to fill the vacancy coming up when Municipal Judge Hadden W. Roth leaves the bench Sept. 1.

Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner and attorney William O. Weissich said a bipartisan group has asked Gov. Ronald Reagan to delay naming Roth's replacement until Thomas is recovered enough to take the job.

Thomas's wife, Maureen, told friends yesterday he was eagerly reading clippings about the possible judgeship, and was strongly interested in the opportunity.

Weissich stressed that Thomas's law practice has included both civil and criminal trial experience. When he joined the district attorney's office, deputies were still permitted to accept private civil cases.

His boss, Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales, said yesterday: "We expected him to return to his duties, but if he chooses to go on the bench we'll give our wholehearted support to his judgeship."

Thomas joined the district attorney's office in 1962, immediately after passing his bar examinations. He obtained his law degree from the University of San Francisco in 1961 after

Ferry System To Sausalito Returns

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

The beginning of a ferry system linking Sausalito and San Francisco was launched yesterday by the Golden Gate Bridge District in a well-oiled preinaugural cruise for more than 300 persons.

It was the success of the bridge that drove the old ferry system out of business in 1941, a success now so overwhelming that the bridge district got into the transit business to relieve some of its congestion.

Despite months of planning for a joint ferry and bus system, however, the only parts of a bus system in evidence were 50 used Greyhound tires used to cushion the ferryboat at its Pier 7 maintenance berth.

The district bought the yearold, 111-foot ferry in San Diego in May, and to date has invested more than $700,000 setting up the Sausalito system.

The regular service began today.

Yesterday afternoon's cruise proved the 159-ton vessel has the acceleration and maneuverability of a 28-footer as skipper James Gill of San Francisco scooted her away from the ferry building landing.

With her twin 727-

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Israel threatened a slowdown in Middle East peace contacts today and said New York was not a suitable site for negotiations. Lebanon charged an Israeli raiding force had thrust across the Lebanese border in a new cease-fire violation.

The Israelis made it clear today they would not proceed with Middle East peace talks until they got action on their charges that Egypt twice had violated the cease-fire by installing more Soviet missiles near the Suez Canal.

Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos and his staff yesterday came up with the first of a series of proposals to increase security at the Marin County Hall of Justice.

The ideas include additional manpower to guard prisoners being taken from jail to courtrooms and back, an alarm system throughout the courtrooms, and additional roving building patrols with walkie-talkie radios.

The suggestions have been handed to County Administrator Alan Bruce for staff review of merit and cost. Mountanos said his staff and Bruce probably will meet Monday or Tuesday to review the security plans.

Meanwhile, Marin's superior and municipal court judges also talked over ways to prevent a repetition of the bloodletting which killed Superior Judge Harold J. Haley and two San Quentin prison inmates and a young accomplice on Aug. 7.

All the judges except presiding Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Superior Court met yesterday noon to discuss solutions to the danger. Wilson, who is ill, will be sent a copy of the judges' proposals. If he concurs, the ideas will probably be discussed next week with Mountanos and the administrator, according to Judge E. Warren McGuire, acting presiding judge of superior court.

TV Council Proposed

The creation of an American Television Council — modeled along the lines of Britain's Press Council — to receive legitimate complaints of TV viewers hasbeen urged by TV Guide magazine.

The British council has 20 per cent lay members and 80 per cent nominees of the publishers' association and newspaper unions under an independent chairman. Complaints are reviewed by the commission and newspapers publish the findings.

The magazine, in an editorial said:

"A television council would give the viewer someplace to go with his complaints. Since most of the members would be selected by broadcasters, their interests would be safeguarded."

The magazine pointed out that currently complaints about television go to the Federal Communications Commission, which has not assumed authority for programming, or the Television Information Office, a unit of the National Association of Broadcasters.

NET To Show British Series

National Educational Television outlets in the fall will broadcast a British-made series, "Civilization," thanks to a Xerox Corporation grant.

The 13-hour-long programs deal with the history of the western world through paintings, architecture and music over a 1,600-year span.

Presentation begins in October, and the series will be repeated in 1971.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Kidnapper Talks

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (UPI)—An arrested terrorist leader said today two kidnaped foreign diplomats will be freed unharmed if the government restores constitutional guaranties and agreed to civi trials for captured leftist militants, a top police source said.

It was unknown whether the government of President Jorge Pacheco Areco would accept the conditions for release of Brazilian Consul Aloysio Dias Gomide, 41, and U.S. Farm expert Claude L. Fly, 65, of Fort Collins, Colo.

Pacheco has said that he will not bargain with terrorist akidnapers who on Aug. 10 murdered Daniel A. Mitrione, 50, of Richmond.

Pacheco has said that he will not bargain with terrorist kidnapers who on Aug. 10 murdered Daniel A. Mitrione, 50, of Richmond, Ind. Mitrione and Gomide were kidnaped separately July 31 and Fly was abducted one week later.

Sniper Roundup

CHICAGO (UPI) — Twenty persons who police say are street-gang members were held today as police sought the snipers who wounded two policemen, one critically, on the South Side Thursday night.

Detective James A. Alfano Jr. remained in critical condition today at Billings Hospital and was to have transfusions through the day, spokesmen said.

Hospital officials said Alfano, wounded in the liver, had received 92 pints of blood in transfusions by midnight Friday.

Police said the incident began when shots were fired at an unmarked gang-intelligence unit squad car. Dozens of shots followed in a half-mile square area as police ducked bullets from snipers.

Patrolman Gregory R. Courchene was wounded by a shotgun pellet in his arm, police said, and was treated and released from a hospital.

Police commander John T. Cartan said the incidents may have been part of a planned street ambush on police.

Missiles Plane

SAIGON (UPI)—North Vietnam fired missiles at a U.S. photo plane but they missed, the U.S. Command said today. A dozen Americans were wounded in fighting that erupted when Communist troops fired on U.S. troops trying to rescue four wounded GIs.

The U.S. Command said a Navy RF8 photo reconnaissance jet was fired on by North Vietnamese missile crews Friday six miles south of the North Vietnamese port of Vinh. The jet and two armed escort jets evaded the missiles and did not fire back, the spokesman said.

Vinh is 145 miles northnorthwest of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) separating the two Vietnams and 170 miles south of Hanoi. A similar incident occurred near Vinh Aug. 3.

Aircraft Call

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (UPI) —Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said today the decrease in the number of America's overseas land bases increases the need for aircraft carriers to serve as airbases afloat.

Laird spoke at the keel laying of the nuclear attack carrier USS Eisenhower.

"The attack carrier has been the backbone of our sea power during the past three turbulent decades," Laird said. "For the foreseeable future, the attack carrier will remain an indispensable element of American sea power."

The new ship, third of America's nuclear-powered attack carriers, was named in honor of the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower who began the development of nuclear-powered vessels to operate both on the surface and below the surface of the ocean, Laird said.

He said Eisenhower's grandson, David, also present for the keel-laying ceremony, was a doubly fitting participant in the program because "he is about to begin his service in the United States Navy."

In a speech prepared for the ceremony, Laird said the United States naval forces in the Mediterranean today are "reassuring our NATO allies as well as all who seek to restore peace and stability in the Mideast."

Slight Injury

Timothy J. Hale, 20, of 92 Woodside Drive, San Anselmo, was injured slightly at 3:30 a.m. today when the car he was driving missed a curve and crashed into a tree near his home. Hale told police he would seek treatment from his personal physician.

Fifth Day Of Fast For Chavez

SALINAS, Calif. (UPI)—Cesar Chavez entered his fifth day of fasting today despite an order by his physician to end it.

Fearing for his health, Dr. Jerome Lackner told UPI he had told the director of the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee (UFWOC) to end the fast Friday night.

Dr. Lackner said Chavez, who ended a 25-day fast in 1968, "is so weak that he is confined to bed" and that he "is much sicker now than he was after two or three weeks of his previous fast." Lackner said if the fast is not ended soon Chavez may suffer "irreparable damage."

Chavez continued fasting in the wake of five major victories for the UFWOC Friday. But a union spokesman said Chavez, who has already dropped 14 pounds, may soon end his fast.

The union announced settlement in the Salinas and Santa Maria Valleys, the signing of a major grower in the Fresno area and the dropping of two suits against the union Friday night.

Sixty-two Santa Maria valley growers agreed to rehire employes dismissed when the growers signed agreements with the Teamsters union. Some 2,000 workers struck the growers after they signed contracts requiring the dismissal of all workers who refused to join the Teamsters within 10 days.

In another development, the Frank Coit Ranch west of Fresno became the first major Fresno area ranch to sign with the UFWOC when the union accepted a pact calling for a $2.50 minimum hourly wage and a 53 cent per box incentive pay.

The union had struck Coit's 9,000 acre melon, tomato and cotton ranch which employes 500 workers during the peak season. The spokesman said, however, that workers will be paid far above the minimum scale during the melon season.

He said workers averaged $5 an hour last year but that they will receive $6 an hour this year under the new contract.

Britain Guarding Nausea Gas Plant

GUILDFORD, England (London Express Service) — British police and special branch officers are guarding the largest nausea gas producing factory in Europe — believed to be the chief target for a team of I.R.A. saboteurs.

The plant itself was closed with all the employees away on vacation.

But around the factory, surrounded by thick woods in the middle of the Surrey countryside, plainclothes police officers were on watch.

Missile Curbs For SALT Talks

VIENNA (UPI) —The United States has offered to limit its Safeguard antiballistic missile (ABM) System in exchange for Soviet curbs on the giant SS9 missiles, diplomatic sources said Saturday.

The sources said this was one of the key proposals energing from four months of negotiations at the Vienna round of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT), which ended Friday. An agreement is possible, they said, but all points will be under intense study in Washington and Moscow before negotiations resume in Helsinki Nov. 2.

Other major points, according to the sources, include:

—An American proposal for a numerical ceiling on strategic delivery systems—both long-range missiles and heavy bombers. Under this plan, bombers and missiles would count equally. Since the United States has more delivery systems than Russia, such a ceiling would freeze the number of American arms and allow the Soviets to catch up.

— A low-level limit on ABMs. Single defensive rings around Moscow and Washington are most likely to be the method adopted. This would mean that Russia could keep its ABM ring around Moscow, but America must tear down its ABM installations in North Dakota and Montana.

One of the two powers is expected to present a draft treaty soon after the Helsinki round opens, the sources said. Although many political, geographical and military details remain to be worked out, they said the treaty might be finished when SALT recesses before Christmas. A Spring session in Vienna is expected.

The sources said the exchange involving the American ABM and the Soviet SS9 was an "apples and oranges" deal necessitated by the fact that the two nations, having different security requiremtns, place a different value on weapons systems.

In addition, they said, there is considerable doubt in America whether the Safeguard ABM System will ever work properly —and these doubts are matched by the suspicion that the Soviet SS9 is too big and unwieldly to be efficient strike weapons.

Because of this, the sources said, the two weapons systems made excellent bargaining tools.

The most likely agreement, they said, would allow both nations to install single rings of ABMs and to build a few giant missiles. In both cases, the numbers would be low enough to keep either system from reinvigorating the arms race.

The institute for strategic studies, a highly-regarded London research organization, said the United States had a total of 2,160 land-based Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles (ICBM), submarine-launched missiles and long-range heavy bombers at the end of 1969. At the same time, it said, the Soviet total was only 1,410.

The Soviet Union has narrowed that gap since then, but is still believed to be behind. Since any acceptable arms limitation must be based on parity, a ceiling rather than a freeze on strategic delivery systems is expected to be negotiated in Helsinki, to give Russia a chance to catch up.

California Is Now The Top State

WASHINGTON (UPI) - For the first time since 1960, New York is not the most populous state in the nation. That title went to California in the 1970 census.

Preliminary figures from the 1970 count showed the population of California to be 19,696,840 on April 1. This was an increase of almost 4 million since the last census in 1960.

While the exact figures for New York have not yet been calculated, the state's estimated 1969 population was 18.3 million, and census officials said it was unlikely New York had gained in one year the 1.4 million persons needed to match California.

Congressional leaders have estimated California will gain four seats in the House of Representatives as a result of its rapid increase in population. Census officials refused to comment on the predictions, but Friday's preliminary count indicated they were accurate.

Virginia was the most populous state in the country during the late 18th and early 19th centuries. But in 1810, New York took the title and held it during every census count until now.

The Census Bureau must complete its count by Dec. 1, when the results will be presented to President Nixon.

Hirohito Prays For Peace On Anniversary

TOKYO (UPI)—Emperor Hirohito prayed for peace today at a ceremony for war victims on the 25th anniversary of Japan's defeat in World War II.

Clad in Western striped pants and swallow-tailed morning coat, Hirohito joined 5,000 persons at memorial rites in Budokan Hall for an estimated three million Japanese military and civilian victims who died in the war.

The stooped monarch, 69, walked slowly to the specially built dais and silently prayed for one minute at noon. It was the precise time that the emperor, who was regarded as a living god until his country lost the war, went on the air for the first time 25 years ago to tell his country of unconditional surrender to the allied powers.

Following the silent prayer, Hirohito, who was accompanied by Empress Nagako in a blue Western dress, read briefly from a sheet of paper in his high-pitched voice.

"I am still at pain when I think of those who lost their lives in the war," Hirohito said. "I pray for peace at home and abroad."

Prime Minister Eisaku Sato, whose conservative government sponsored the memorial service, said "Japan has achieved prosperity surpassing that of the prewar years as a result of the hard efforts of the entire people."

The country, he said, "should look back to the lesson we learned from the previous conflict. We should make further efforts for the maintenance of peace in the world and the development of our nation."

The rites held at Budokan, a structure built for the 1964 Olympic games in the former palace ground across the street from the moated palace, was one of many similar services held across the country.

BALLAD FOR THE END OF THINGS

Time out of mind a wind will come
Blowing across wet grass —
Wind that mats green stalks with scum
Of ash and lethal gas.

Earth will warp and buckle, dead
Beyond all sun's denying.
And fish will damn seabirds who spread
Wet wings of charcoal crying.

Woe to the wind, when newborn deer
Shall wither before they run.
Die if you can before that year
Of judgment. When, one by one,

Petals and fingers will clench from thirst
As bulls run mad with dying.
O Mothers — curse Wright's gull who first
Cast death's own shape with flying.

Marin Total Valuation Of Property Up

Total assessed valuation of all property in Marin this fiscal year is $635,074,736, up 8.5 per cent over last year's $585,388,558, county auditor-controller Michael Mitchell announced yesterday.

Mitchell said the amount is close to earlier estimates, meaning that the basic county tax rate will be close to the $2.50 per $100 assessed valuation figured in June. Last year's tax rate was $2.395. This year's official tax rate will be set by the board of supervisors on Sept. 1.

A breakdown of total assessed valuation is:

Local secured roll (all land and improvements locally assessed) — $543,003,414; unsecured roll (including personal property and inventories of business establishments, livestock and boats) — $26,501,970; public utilities (assessed by the state) — $34,646,220; hmeowners exemptions — $27,070,245; and business inventory exemptions — $3,852,887.

Both homeowner and business inventory exemptions represent tax relief to county property owners, but the county's taxing agencies get that revenue back in state reimbursements.

Mitchell said he would have a breakdown of assessed value by schools and other special districts next week.

UC Medical School Nears Minority Goal

With relatively little fuss or fanfare, the medical school at the University of California San Francisco Medical Center has recruited more minority students than any other predominately white medical school in the country.

The medical center set a goal that 25 per cent of the entering class of each of its schools mould be minority students.

Last fall, in an entering class of 136, the medical school had 22 Negroes, eight Mexican-Americans, and one American Indian. This year, with the admissions process almost complete, the school expects 33 minority-group freshmen in a class of 134.

horsepower diesels running well below maximum power, the Golden Gate made it to Sausalito in just over 25 minutes.

Seating for the 588 passengers is arranged on three decks, with the two lower decks enclosed except for their aft sections. The top deck is open, and was almost warm under the clear sky.

The Golden Gate carries a crew of six, plus two to handle coffee in the morning and martinis at night.

Bridge officials proudly displayed the vessel, each making a special point of his specialty. The district's security chief, Dale Norton, pointed out that the fare boxes were like vaults, and should be burglar-proof.

The highlight of the departure was the arrival of former Mayor Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley, who rolled down the gangplank and right up to the bar on his bicycle. Like Gen. Douglas MacArtur's landing in the Philippines, the scene was photographed repeatedly so it would be just right.

Meyer, 43, said he had ridden from his North Beach office, and uses the bicycle regularly to make business calls in San Francisco. He predicted that other commuters will want to take their bicycles on the ferry insead of using buses at either end of the ride.

Bicycle racks are planned on the ferry, but none is installed yet.

Despite a fairly heavy chop on the bay, the ride was smooth and quiet, with very little vibration from the engines — except on the lowest deck just above the engine room.

Ingredients for the libations were provided by the operator of the concession on the ferry, and a copious spread of food was bought with district funds as part of the $1,500 appropriated to kick off the service.

The hoopla today was to include the Guckenheimer Sour Kraut Band and a parade of vintage automobiles from San Francisco to Sausalito. Also to be on hand was the Santa Rosa chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America.

The renaming of the vessel was declared official with the busting of a bottle of water on her prow while picking up more persons in Sausalito.

Mrs. William Moskovitz of San Francisco, wife of the president of the bridge board, managed to break the bottle after about a half dozen hefty wacks. The bottle was filled with water from all the rivers flowing into the bay.

The ferry landing in Sausalito, shocking blue in color, even was decorated with colorful flower planters — filled with flowers only minutes before the ferry arrived.

Hundreds lined the Sausalito shoreline as the ferry made its first passenger trip from San Francisco.

Among the passengers was former Marin Supervisor Thomas T. Storer, who long ago championed the need to return ferries to the bay. "I've always believed this day would come, although my sanity was questioned a number of times," he said.

The only unanswered question — the answer to be found only in the hard test of experience — was whether the average commuter will be able to consume two martinis in 25 minutes.

Also in conflict with the Marin district attorney's opinion was a memorandum from Marin County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney to all Marin school and special districts boards.

Maloney recommended that "mail should not be used if there is any likelihood that the paper will not actually receive the notice 24 hours in advance of the meeting."

He suggested notices be delivered personally, but if the mail must be used the letter should be registered or certified.

If the mail is used, Maloney said, the newspaper should also be notified by telephone in order to avoid any misunderstandings.

Eight of 14 county district attorneys responding to the I-J survey agreed that notice of special meetings must actually be delivered 24 hours prior to the meeting.

Five others agreed with the Marin district attorney's office that mailing the notice 24 hours before the meeting was sufficient to meet the legal requirements: the district attorneys of Tehama, Monterey, Inyo and Napa counties, as well as the Sacramento County counsel.

The district attorney of Madera County answered that he considered mailing of notice sufficient "assuming that newspaper in normal course of post office deliveries will receive mail before actual meeting."

District attorneys in Ventura, San Diego, Humboldt, Shasta, Sierra , San Mateo, Lake and Santa Cruz counties said the notice must be actually received by the newspaper 24 hours before a meeting.

Cycle Crash Hurts San Franciscan

A 19-year-old San Francisco man was treated at Novato General Hospital for scrapes suffered in a motorcycle accident yesterday.

The California Highway Patrol reported that Robert P. Lanzara ran off Highway 101 near the Pacheco Creek overpass.

Minor Injuries

David E. Hayden, 31, of 432 Cortez Drive, Petaluma, was treated at Hillcrest Hospital for minor injuries received when he apparently fell asleep at the wheel and his vehicle crashed into a guard rail on Highway 101 at the south end of Petaluma bridge, according to the California Highway Patrol. The accident occurred at 5:15 a.m. today.

Bales had indicated yesterday his office was not considering conspiracy charges against the 26-year-old Miss Davis on the basis of reports in a Los Angeles newspaper that she presided over a Watts gathering that "tried" judges and lawmen and sentenced them to be "revolutioned to death."

Bales refused to comment on rumors that Miss Davis had obtained a passport and fled to Canada, bound elsewhere, or that he was seen in Bakersfield last night.

An all points bulletin was issued after last night's raid failed to turn up Miss Davis.

Bales also indicated he had no information linking anyone else to the case and declined to say whether undercover men were to attend the funeral of Jackson today at St. Augustine Episcopal Church in Oakland.

Rumors have circulated that, in addition to Black Panther leader Huey Newton, Miss Davis would attend the funeral for the brother of George L. Jackson, one of the three-so-called Soledad Brothers.

The black convicts are accused of murdering a white guard at Soledad State Prison last January. They are at San Quentin State Prison awaiting trial.

Miss Davis helped organize the Soledad Brothers Defense Committee in June and had been denied permission to serve as an investigator for the trio and to talk with them at the prison.

In addition to the carbine and the rifle, authorities said Miss Davis bought a Browning automatic pistol in January 1968 that Jackson used in the escape try.

Jackson entered Judge Haley's courtroom, where McClain was being tried for knifing a prison guard, and attempted to free them. The armed group used Haley, three women jurors and Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas as hostages.

After loading the hostages into the rented truck, gunfire broke out with San Quentin guards outside the Hall of Justice. In addition to Haley, Christmas, 27; McLain, 37, and Jackson were killed.

Thomas was paralyzed from the waist down by bullet wounds and a woman juror was shot in the arm in the gun battle.

Thomas was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital and Magee, transferred from the recovery room to a regular hospital room at the San Quentin hospital, was reported in satisfactory condition.

Miss Davis is scheduled to speak at a Black Panther rally in San Francisco Civic Center next week in behalf of the Soledad Brothers.

Ministry, referring to the peace mission of United Nations special envoy Gunnar V. Jaring, said:

Gazit said Israel wanted the talks held at the foreign minister level and somewhere else than New York. He did not specify the site but political sources said the Israelis were pushing for Cyprus.

"It is inconceivable that such complicated negotiations should be held at only ambassadorial level," Gazit said in an interview on the state radio. "Israel also considers New York as the least suitable of all the proposed venues because of the publicity that would attend the talks there."

Hearing Set In Assault Case

Ricardo Martinez, 40, of San Francisco, was ordered yesterday to face prelminary hearing Sept. 24 on charges that he robbed and attempted to rape a San Rafael housewife.

Martinez was arrested July 16 in San Francisco, after the woman told police he had given her a ride from a Fourth Street cocktail lounge in San Rafael, then attacked her in a parking lot.

Peacock Gap Area Fence Angers Group

Members of the Marin Conservation League have challenged placement of a fence around private property in the Peacock Gap area contending the land has been used by hikers and cyclists for many years.

He said marijuana parties, beer busts and stolen car stripping abounded on company land, forcing barbed wire fences and no trespassing signs. The property is opposite Rat Rock.

Company guards patrolling the land have been instructed not to interfere with legal activities, Wallace said, so there is no interference with recreation.

The fence and signs are necessary because "they (the sheriff's office) claim that unless there is a sign, they are not allowed to make an arrest," Wallace said.

Nevertheless, the fence, although allowing public access through a truck entrance, has drawn fire from members of the Marin Conservation League as illegal.

Joseph A. Forest, deputy county counsel, indicated the arguments may be valid in view of a decision by the Supreme Court in April against a fence blocking access to a beach.

Forest said if the public has had use of the Peacock Gap land for more than five years, has also used the access area, and has encountered no opposition from the owners, then "it is certainly possible that there is an implied dedication for public use."

Harold Gregg, executive director of the Marin Conservation League, said the group had not studied the matter and there was no indication whether the league planned to file suit against the fence.

DISPUTED FENCE — A Peacock Gap land owner says he needs this fence to protect his property from illegal activities, but some conservationists say it blocks a long-established public use. (Independent-Journal photo)

UC Professor To Fly Plane On Latin Trip

Dr. Robert N. Hamburger, Professor of Pediatrics and Chief of the Pediatric Immunology and Allergy Division of UC School of Medicine, at San Diego, left recently on a 7,500-mile odyssey through Central and South America to alert pediatricians in these areas to the possible dangers of the drug chloramphenicol and also to lecture on the "Development of the Immunoglobulins."

Dr. Hamburger, a licensed pilot since 1941, will hedge-hop across Central and South America for a month with his wife, Sonia, as co-pilot in a single engine Comanche.

Word 'Tyranny' Used By Defense In Rivas Trial

A family doctor, who used the word "tyranny" to describe Fidel I. Rivas' control over his wife and 11 children, was the first witness for the defense yesterday in the trial of Ronald Rivas, 21, on murder charges.

Young Rivas is accused of gunning down his father in their Novato home on the night of July 17, 1969.

Dr. Morris Katkoff of Greenbrae testified he had treated the Rivas parents and children on several occasions. He said the father had come to him with complaints of ulcer trouble, stomach pains and other illnesses. The doctor testified he felt most of the elder Rivas' troubles were feigned.

Katkoff also said he treated young Rivas' sister, Jeanette, for extreme nervous conditions, which he blamed in the "tyranny" of the father toward his wife and children.

The doctor recalled a 1968 discussion with Mrs. Marjorie Rivas over her husband's repeated acts of violence toward her and the impact of his actions on the children.

Yvonne Rivas Slager, another sister, followed on the stand yesterday to testify that young Rivas repeatedly tried to be close with his father, but was rebuffed with foul language and taunts as to his masculinity.

The nonjury trial, before Superior Court Judge Thomas F. Keating, was recessed until Tuesday morning.

There is no danger of nitrate soil pollution when citrus growers follow recommended rates of fertilizer applications.

This is the overall conclusion of two University of California scientists at Riverside. Drs. Parker F. Pratt and Winston W. Jones studied more than a thousand samples of soil excavated from as deep as 100 feet.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Why Must A Man Wait Until 21 To Marry Without Parents' Consent?

DEAR HELEN:

The killing age is 18, the voting age will be 18 unless they challenge it so how come a guy must wait, in most states, until he's 21 before he can get married without parents' consent? And how come he can't sign a legal contract unless some adult co-signs? Or buy booze or be in a bar or gambling club?

I think they should make things simple by voting the age of majority in at 19 instead of 21 — and that means you're a total adult at 19, not just a half-way one. I say 19 because by that time most young people are out of high school and either in college or on their own. Age 18 seems too young, but if you aren't mature by 19, you aren't going to be much better by 21. — PERRY

DEAR PERRY:

Would you settle for age 20? There's already an organization dedicated to lowering the age of majority by one year. It urges those in favor to write their Congressmen. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

A reader asked what young people can do to help make our country something to be proud of again.

Well, there's an election coming up. If even 10 per cent of the students would get interested in politics and go out and work for their candidates — and inspire those candidates to keep up the good fight — we'd see a big change.

Also, it's up to the young to keep people interested in fighting pollution, poverty and bringing about peace. They can do it with a mass education program, fanning out into the community and talking to adults — the voters.

If our generation is interested in doing more than just screaming and complaining, they should unite and see how powerful they are. And they'd better not make their big push for peace because that scares the Establishment. Instead, I'm for joining the "environment party" and getting things done. We don't need the vote to influence others, as we have found out in the past. — JOHN

DEAR JOHN:

Hear, hear! But how many will? — H.

(P.S. Which reminds me of a Pat Paulsen "lecture." He said the 18-year-old vote won't change things much "because the drinking age is still 21 and you have to be smashed out of your gourd to vote for any of their candidates." — H.

DEAR HELEN:

The other day at the beach I overheard two middle-aged women discussing a couple of long-haired boys. One said, "Look at that creep." The other answered, "Repulsive!"

Then I looked at these ladies. Their hair was bleached and frizzy. A cigarette hung from one's lips, and the other was drinking a can of beer. Their combined weight was about 300, and they had on bikinis. Talk about bulges!

Fitting Problems Of Skirts

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I recently made a scooter skirt but am unhappy with the way it bunches up between my legs when I walk. How can I avoid this annoying fault? I would love this type of skirt if I could correct the fit.

MRS. R. G.

DEAR MRS. R. G.:

Unfortunately, a skooter skirt must be fitted as carefully as slacks and can't be cut out the way you would cut a skirt. Your problem could be any one of several fitting problems; you might check them all. First, the crotch seam might be too long. Secondly, if your legs are slightly heavy, there is a chance you need more room in the leg width. Carefully check your measurements against your pattern to see where the variation appears.

Another point to remember is that they can't be fitted too loosely or they will also have a tendency to bunch up. Once you have worked the bugs out of your pattern, you will love making these skirts.

MRS. HAROLD D. Schmelling, Jamesville, N.Y., is this week's Tailor Trix winner for her sewing suggestion.

"When a hem has to be faced on a washable garment such as little girls' dresses, (and now suddenly mothers' dresses), I use gauze bandages. This lightweight material is pre-shrunk and comes in many different widths so you can use the one that fits your needs best."

DEAR EUNICE,

Please share via your column some instructions for fitting a pattern to a figure with a very slim derriere (in spite of a hip measurement of 36 inches). I am very flat below the waist in back. My skirts seem to want to "cup" in back.

MRS. P.T.M.

DEAR MRS. P.T.M.,

This can be solved to a large extent by your darts. As I have explained many times before, darts are an aid to fitting. The more shape you have in any one area, the deeper the darts must be. In your case, if you took a deep dart, it would naturally release too much fabric at the end of your dart for a flat measurement.

If two darts are used in your dress, you can possibly eliminate one altogether, if there is only one dart, reduce the width of it to about ¼-inch tapering to nothing at the hipline. You will probably now have excess fabric at the back of the skirt in the width and will have to take more of a seam allowance from the skirt back than the skirt front.

DEAR EUNICE,

I have been using a size 12 pattern, but now it seems to be too small in the bust and shoulder area. I haven't changed in weight so am at a loss as to what has happened. I did write to the pattern company, and they said they are substantially reducing the ease allowance in the bust and shoulder area and have increased the waist and hip allowance. I am about ready to try to learn to design my own clothes since the patterns are so little help.

MRS. W.A.

DEAR MRS. W.A.,

From your measurements, it seems to me that a size 14 would fit you much better in all areas. I think it is wise to carefully check the construction or style lines of a dress and then choose which of the two sizes would fit best for that particular pattern.

In recent years, the designers have created garments that fit much closer to the body and the bustline was greatly reduced. In fact, the first clue to this type of garment would be the amount of bustline darting. Some patterns actually eliminated any sign of a bust dart. You would naturally need more ease in this type of dress and perhpas would be better off in a larger size.

On the other hand with the return of the shirt type dress, which means much more looseness in the bodice area, you might be able to comfortably wear the smaller size pattern. This really isn't such a big, huge problem if you will just spend a little time trying to understand the amount of ease the designer intended for that particular garment.

Eunice Farmer discusses what size pattern to buy in her helpful booklet "Your Pattern and You." To obtain your booklet send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Sew Simple in care of the Independent-Journal.

Hair Style Showing Set

California Cosmetologists will attend a hair fashion show at the Hilton Hotel in San Francisco over Labor Day weekend.

The new hair fashions, designed by the Hair Fashion Committee of the California Cosmetologist Association, following the styling trends demonstrated by the national association, have a look of gentle elegance.

"California women like to display more freedom in their hair styles," according to Sallie Ponce Hantz, styles director. "Therefore we try to develop more flexible styles, that can express their individuality,".

A small head look will be empasized this fall, she said. Hair will not rise as high as in former years. And it will be softer, with pouf curls, providing a billowing effect. Poufs are also used instead of tight curls in front of the ears.

Falls are still in for evening wear, according to Miss Hantz.

The cosmetologists will also compete for honors in the creation of styles based on the current trend.

Nerve Gas Dump Delayed By Weather

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Atlantic storm has forced a 24-hour postponement in the Army's plans to dump 418 vaults of obsolete nerve gas off the Florida coast and the U.S. Court of Appeals has scheduled a hearing for Monday that could change the plans entirely.

The court agreed late Friday to hear the appeal of Florida Gov. Claude Kirk and the Environmental Defense Fund that the Army be prevented from sinking a World War II liberty ship hulk containing the gas 282 miles east of Cape Kennedy in 16,000 feet of water.

In accepting the appeal of Judge Green's decision, however, the court of appeals did not order the Army to cease preparations for the dump.

A spokesman said immediately the Army would proceed with its original plan, which called for the gas laden ship to be towed out of the Sunny Point, N.C., military terminal Sunday, arriving at the dump site at about dawn Tuesday.

But the operation was postponed 24 hours when the Navy decided Friday night that a big storm heading for the lower Bahama Islands could move into the dumping site by Tuesday.

"It's considered a big storm and it's moving fast and it poses a definite threat to the scuttling," said Lt. Cmdr. Jay Standiford, weather forecasters in Miami said the storm might develop into a full-blown hurricane.

The Florida governor and the environmentalists asked that the gas be dumped in shallower water, perhaps off the New Jersey coast where other such vaults have been sunk. They feared the crushing pressures of three miles of ocean water would crack the concrete and steel vaults and release their contents all at once.

Although the Army said sea water would neutralize the gas before it could do any harm to humans, Judge Green suggested to Army lawyers they pick a shallower spot just to be sure. She said it would be better for the gas to escape gradually so it would pose less of a danger to marine life.

Experts testified that sea water is one of the best agents for neutralizing the gas, but they conceded there would be more damage to marine life if the vaults broke open at once.

The Army admitted it made a mistake in encasing the rockets in concrete, but said there was no way now to detoxify them on land and it was becoming more dangerous to leave the deteriorating rockets on the surface.

A team of British experts sent to investigate the U.S. plans said Friday it was satisfied the disposal would cause no serious harm. They flew to the United States when England expressed to the U.S. embassy the concern of the governments of the Bahamas and Bermuda. The dumping spot is about 160 miles northeast of the Bahamas.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

The Unlicensed Can't Use Court

Some day a court may need your testimony in order to arrive at a just verdict in some trial.

There are three ways of giving testimony:

(1) By affidavit — a sworn statement;

(2) By deposition — a sworn statement including cross-examination by the other side; and

(3) At the trial itself by spoken questions and answers and cross-examination.

Many persons called to testify are afraid of taking an oath and testifying before an "audience," or of being tricked under cross-examination as in a movie or television "trial."

Anoyne, however, can be a good witness by following simple guidelines:

1. Tell the truth. You may have talked to others about the case, for example, the lawyer for the side you are with. Say so.

2. Testify in your own words. Do not memorize what you are to say. That is almost certain to sound rehearsed and possibly false.

3. Listen carefully to the lawyer's questions and answer directly.

4. If you make a mistake (who doesn't?), correct yourself at once. If you forget some detail, say so. Don't bluff or hedge.

5. Stop talking when the judge or attorney breaks in. Don't try to sneak in any answers. If you do, this could cause a mistrial.

Tell only what you actually saw, heard, or felt.

An "expert witness" such as a doctor or engineer may give his opinion. But as a rule, you cannot offer your opinion as evidence; you can only report facts you witnessed.

Most cases turn upon a question of fact, which only a witness can answer. Because of his importance, the witness is subject to the law of perjury.

A false witness harms not just a single case, but he can also undermine the public's confidence in our courts as well.

Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.

The patrol said Mrs. Lee was taken to Marin General Hospital with a head cut.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

U.S. Has Eliminated Smallpox But Vaccines Must Continue

Not one proven case of smallpox has been seen in the United States for the last 15 years. This was accomplished thru extensive and routine use of smallpox vaccine. It has now been suggested that we stop vaccinations because there is no smallpox. Furthermore, too many people are developing reactions to the vaccine and deaths have occurred.

Between 1920 and 1930, more than 530,000 cases of smallpox with 4,790 deaths occurred in this country. A good vaccine was available but not enough people were immunized. Another 25 years elapsed before the incidence fell to zero and this took place only because our health authorities waged a persistent campaign for universal vaccination. Estimates show that 90 per cent of the population of the United States has been immunized.

TO STOP VACCINATING our children at this time would mean that, in a few years, a large segment of our population would be susceptible to the disease. This might not present a problem if we built a wall around our country and excluded all outsiders. In 1924, two men and a boy infected with smallpox in Winnipeg, Canada, traveled to Duluth, Detroit, and New Britain, Conn. They left in their wake 74,000 cases of smallpox with 1,270 deaths.

But jet air travel is not conducive to isolation and travelers from infected areas get into our country with ease. Our present vaccination policy is all that stands between us and smallpox.

IT IS TRUE that there are eight or nine deaths per year among the 14,000,000 people vaccinated annually. Some of these fatalities could have been prevented by following well known indications and contraindications for the use of the vaccine. Reactions are less likely to occur in children than in adolescents and adults, instead of stopping the procedure, we should use our know-how to develop a safer vaccine

SUSCEPTIBLE TO CYSTITIS

Mrs. T. K. R. writes: I've had three babies and each time, just before I'm due to go home, I develop a urinary infection and have to stay in the hospital for treatment. What do you suppose is wrong with me?

REPLY

Apparently your bladder is susceptible to infection. With each confinement, the infection is reactivated by catheterization and other procudures incident to delivery. Our leaflet on cystitis can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

TETANUA FROM CUT

L. D. Writes: How soon after getting a cut does lockjaw develop?

REPLY

If the wound is contaminated by the bacilli, tetanus develops within three days to four weeks. The sooner it occures, the more serious the disease, and vice versa.

COLD MILK

P. R. writes: Is it harmful to drink a glass of cold milk on top of a hot supper?

REPLY

No. The heat of the stomach will warm the milk in time. Some individuals develop abdominal cramps after drinking cold liquids but the discomfort usually in momentary.

Summer Fog Rolls Into Bay

The first banks of fog roll through the Golden Gate and, more slowly, over the Marin headlands on an early summer afternoon. The view from Vista Point on the Marin side of the Golden Gate Bridge changes with the fog and within hours will be obliterated by the gray dampness. In the distance the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge enters downtown San Francisco where skyscrapers appear above the fog. On the Marin side of the Golden Gate Bridge, disappearing in the fog, Horseshoe Cove and Fort Baker bask in the sunshine a while longer. Portions of the fort, which was established in 1866 as part of the Lime Point Military Reservation, may become part of a Golden Gate National Recreation Area if legislation introduced by Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District, passes. The fort was renamed in 1897 in honor of orator Edward Dickinson Baker, close friend of Abraham Lincoln, who was killed at the Battle of Ball's Bluff during the Civil War. Portions of the fort have already been acquired by the state as part of a projected Marin Headlands State Park. Above Horsehoe Cove and the military barracks, Highway 101 winds its way off the bridge and cuts across Fort Baker propertybefore disappearing into a hill.

It's enough that Shakespeare wrote these plays. But to see and hear them in the green of Forest Meadows Theatre (where even a stream flows past the stage) is a play itself on your imagination.

There will be 37 performances during the summer, plus six of the delightful, musical, BRIGADOON. This is rich fare and the dates will fit your plans if you simply plan to attend.

But be careful. DON'T let the days go by. Don't keep Shakespeare waiting - after 350 years! Decide that you must see him. Line up the family, your friends, even a theatre party. Then call the Festival Box Office, 456-1490 - certainly a magic number in entertainment.

POPE GREETS GUEST — West German Chancellor Willy Brandt is received by Pope Paul VI during the Bonn leader's recent visit to Rome. Brandt presented the Holy See a check for $8,000 to be used for encyclical work. In a recent speech the Pontiff pointed out that the Vatican is running into a serious shortage of cash. It is not likely Brandt's gift will swell the coffers, but the Pope praised the gift in the spirit of giving.

LACK OF CASH

Vatican In Financial Strain

VATICAN CITY (UPI) —The Vatican is seen by most persons as one of the richest institutions in the world, but according to Pope Paul VI it is hard up for ready cash.

"How easy it would be to demonstrate that the fabulous riches which from time to time public opinion attributes to the church, are often insufficient for the modest and legitimate needs of ordinary life," the Pope said in a recent speech.

In fact, some Vatican sources said the Pope may have been putting it mildly. They said the Vatican probably is undergoing a serious financial crisis.

The view of the Vatican as an enormously rich institution is not a mistaken one. But how is it possible to put a cash value on so much of its wealth? For example, take Michelangelo's sculpture of the Pieta or his paintings in the Sistine Chapel. Art dealers would balk at quoting even a rough estimate of their value.

The art treasures provide a source of income in that millions of visitors pay 500 lire (80 cents) a head to see them. But officials said most of this money is spent on upkeep of the museums. Another steady source of income—and like all Vatican earnings, never disclosed—is the sale of stamps.

The Vatican's chief financial interest is its stock holdings, worldwide and immense, but again secret. When the Vatican signed a concordat (treaty) with the Benito Mussolini regime in 1929, it received $40 million in compensation for the loss of papal territories and an even larger sum in Italian state bonds. This was the foundation for its stock portfolio, boosted by heavy investment in land and real estate.

But Vatican sources said the Roman Catholic Church has suffered along with most other investors in the general decline of stock values and they reported the Pope's financial advisers are planning to remove much invested capital to banks and other traditional forms of saving.

Another reason for this, the sources said, is that the Pope wants to avoid criticism frequently voiced here that by owning stocks in a certain company, the Vatican also controls the policies of that company.

As the Pope said, and Vatican sources back up, the church often is hard pressed to meet its everyday needs.

"We give with one hand what we receive with the other," Pope Pius XI once said.

The Vatican pays the wages of more than 1,000 employees and about 500 clerics who work for the Roman Curia, the church's central government. It recently sold stocks and real estate in Rome to give a 10 per cent increase to the employees. This church's rise from 500 million did not affect cardinals who, with a monthly salary of $900, are among the church's highest-paid servants.

The Vatican also helps finance the work of its missionary department, whose expenses increase with the expansion of the church in lands where the Sunday collection pickings are slim. The members to more than 600 million in the past decade is partly due to expansion in missionary areas.

But even diocesan areas which support themselves, such as the United States, are not providing the funds they used to, Vatican sources said. American bishops now tend to use their cash surpluses, if they have any, for helping social and urban problems in their own dioceses rather than send them to the Vatican, the sources said.

The Vatican maintains diplomatic representation in more than 60 countries, an expense which is questioned by many Catholics. Less in dispute is the Vatican's support of church charities, such as Caritas, and its attempts to alleviate suffering or promote development through such programs as the $1 million development plan it sponsored in Latin America last year. This was paid for by the sale of the former apostolic nunciature (embassy) in Paris.

Vatican sources said future large expenditures would have to be met by the sale of property or stocks, which would decrease the church's capital investment.

But the Pope said the church should be poor and also should be seen to be poor.

PRIEST SHORTAGE

Parish System In France Is Doomed

PARIS (Toronto News Service) — The Catholic Church in France is running very short of priests. One consequence is total reorganization of clergy, decided upon by a congress of French bishops and priests.

The traditional parish and the traditional parish priest are destined to disappear, together with the parish as the unit of church organization.

One member of the bishop-priest assembly said: "Most of our churches may very well become historical monuments".

Monseigneur Matagrin, bishop of Grenoble, did not hesitate to describe the decisions taken by the assembly as a revolution."

What is aimed at is a form of organization in which there will be a body of priests living together a communal life, each charged with one specific section or class of the faithful. The parish priest will lose much of his powers and will no longer be appointed to a parish for life.

One priest, for example, will deal with the working-class members of his region, another with the white-collar workers, another with executives, and so on.

The parish will be replaced by a larger area tended by a body of priests who will decide in common with the senior priest how their work is best to be undertaken.

In other words, Catholic priests will follow the modern trend in specialization. How this will affect the feeling of ordinary Catholics of belonging to one religious community remains to be seen.

This "away with old parishes" decision was accompanied by a decision to insist even more than in the past on the vow of celibacy. Some church observers had been hoping for a trend in the opposite direction.

During a mass in Lourdes, the famous miracle pilgrimage centre, Monseigneur Buyot, chairman of the episcopal commission of the Catholic clergy, exclaimed: "We say yes to celibacy freely consented". Some took this as meaning a liberalization of the celibacy condition. But he explained afterwards that he meant the exact opposite.

He explained that the French Catholic Church would in future only accept men as priests who not only submitted themselves to celibacy by discipline, but who wanted celibacy absolutely, as monks and other religious do.

France regards herself as a Catholic country, in which 95 per cent of adults declare themselves Catholic and baptized. But then comes the but. The great majority admit that they do not practice their religion regularly.

Most — 80 per cent of adults — still get married in church, but only 20 to 25 per cent go to mass every Sunday.

The decline in the number of priests has been going on steadily since the turn of the century. Seventy years ago there were 54,800 priests, or one for every 752 inhabitants. Today there are less than 40,000 priests, or one for every 1,200 inhabitants.

The priest shortage problem is not entirely new. Saint Augustune, bishop of Hippo (North Africa) was already complaining about the same thing around the year 400 A.D.

A public opinion poll taken last year indicated that 73 per cent of French adults believe in the existence of God, but a higher percentage does not believe in the existence of the devil or of hell.

A similar question showed that in the United States 60 per cent of the adult population believes the devil exists.

A Tough Question: How To Tell Child About God

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religious Writer

"How do you tell a seven-year-old child what God is like?" asked a man who has one.

That's a tough question, as many conscientious parents have learned from experience. Children won't settle for dogmatic definitions, and abstract concepts such as "ground of being" or "first cause" have little meaning for them.

On the other hand, it's a grave mistake to offer them "childish" anthropomorphic concepts of God. Many people have become atheists because they never outgrew an early image of God as a bearded old man or an all-seeing and vindictive judge seated on a throne in a cloudland named Heaven.

Of course, all concepts of God are inadequate and therefore to some degree misleading. The best educated adult is no more capable than a young child of devising an image of God that will encompass His total reality.

So the problem boils down to choosing the images and analogies which are the least likely to mislead or confuse a child.

The New Testament offers two solutions.

One, suggested by I John 4:8, is to tell a child that "God is like your mother's love for you." You can't see it, or weigh it, or measure it, or assign it a shape or a location. But you know it's real, because you have experienced its effects.

In the same way, we cannot see God, or assign Him a particular shape or location, but we know He's real because we can see the effects of His activity as creator of the universe, author of its natural laws, and ultimate source of all love, truth and beauty.

Another analogy, often used by Jesus, depicts God as being like a good human father, only more so.

This concept of "Our Father in Heaven" must be very carefully presented to make sure a young child doesn't get the idea that God LOOKS like a man. The point, which Jesus' parables make wonderfully clear, is that God ACTS in his dealings with us in a father-like way.

Of course, if a child has never known a human father, or has been exposed only to a father who is harsh, indifferent, weak, wishy-washy or indulgent, this concept of God as father will mislead and dismay him.

The antidote is to explain that God is the kind of father that human fathers ought to be, if only they were good enough, wise enough and unselfish enough. And this explanation can be buttressed by using some of Jesus' own picture-stories, particularly the Parable of the Prodigal Son, which vividly reveal the loving, forgiving, accepting, caring character of the heavenly Father.

If a parent is lucky, his inquiring child will demand to know, at some point, "Where is God?" That's a door-opening question. It enables the parent to say that God is everywhere, like sunlight, but you are most likely to encounter His presence in your own heart where He makes Himself known as the Spirit of Love.

TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE

Dirk Gansloser of San Rafael slides home safely on a wild pitch, but his Holiday Magic team lost to Active 20-30 Club of Eureka, 3-2, yesterday in Joe DiMaggio Tournament at San Rafael's Albert Park. Holiday Magic later dropped its second game, 3-1, to Drake and was eliminated from further competition. Eureka pitcher covering play above is Eric Kahoalii.

Gamble Pays Off, A's Gain Ground

By JOE SARGIS

OAKLAND (UPI) —At first Chuck Dobson was a little upset.

The talented and streaking Oakland righthander was pitching a four-hit shutout Friday night when Manager John McNamara decided it was time to make a change.

The fact the maneuver paid off in a 4-0 victory for the A's over the Baltimore Orioles and put Oakland only four games behind Minnesota satisfied in order Dobson, McNamara and Jim Grant.

"I like to finish anything I start," said Dobson, who with Grant's help, picked up his eighth straight victory and 15th of the year overall. "I didn't want to come out, but after Mudcat got out of the inning, I figured it was the right thing to do."

Dobson, who equalled his major league season high for victories, walked pinch-hitter Chico Salmon and gave up a sinlge to Don Buford. That put two men on with Paul Blair and Boog Powell the next scheduled batters and the A's ahead 3-0.

McNamara said he just had to take Dobson out.

"In that situation you have to think in terms of winning the game and not worry about any one individual," said McNamara. "Dobson pitched well enough and I figured he had come to the end of the line. Maybe I have to make that move today and it might backfire, but I can't think that way."

ONE THOUGHT

Grant said he had only one thought in mind when he came in and that "was to throw strikes and forget about the men on base. You have to think positive in a situation like that."

Grant, who gained credit for his 21st save, retired Blair on a soft fly to right and Powell on a roller to first.

Powell almost tied the score at 3-3 in the fifth when he also came up with two men on. He lined an inside fast ball 400 feet to right but the blow was foul by about five feet.

"I figured he (Powell) must have been upset he didn't get the homer," Dobson said, "So I threw him the very same pitch. Psychologically, a pitcher has the upper hand in that situation."

It worked, as Powell popped weakly to third. Those were the only serious threats the Orioles made.

HITTING HEROES

Rick Monday and Bert Campaneris were the hitting heroes as the A's made up their sixth game this week on the slumping Twins.

Monday drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly in the third and his ninth homer in the eighth. Campaneris had three singles, scored two runs and drove in one. Sal Bando drove in the other Oakland run.

Owner Charlie Finley finally let his emotions catch up with him. When the final out was made he jumped from his seat and raised his arm in a victory gesture.

"Things are starting to get a little warm," he said, and then made his way to the A's dressing room for a round of handshakes.

The A's have two tough games left with the Orioles, who are comfortably in front in the American League East race. Today, they faced Mike Cuellar (16-7) and on Sunday they go against Dave McNally (17-7). Oakland counters with Jim Hunter (15-9) and Diego Segui (7-8).

But things seem to be going Oakland's way of late and most of the A's now feel they can beat anyone. They got only three hits off Sam McDowell, Cleveland's talented flame thrower, Thursday and lost by only a run, 4-3.

"When you are going good a lot of things you couldn't do before suddenly become almost routine," said captain Sal Bando. "Maybe we won't beat Cueller and McNally but we'll give them a good run."

Wide Open PGA Scramble

By JOHN G. GRIFFIN.
UPI Sports Editor

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Dark horses Larry Hinson and Dave Stockton lead the field back into the pressure cooker for the third round of the PGA championship today, but Jack Nicklaus sounded the warning about what might happen at the steaming Southern Hills Country Club:

Nicklaus took a spectacular fall from grace Friday as Hinson and Stockton, both playing in the relative cool of the morning, marched to identical 36-hole scores of even-par 140 to set the pace at the midway mark. Nicklaus, co-first-round leader, staggered through the afternoon steam-bath to a 77 and a 144 total.

Hinson, of Douglas, Ga., and Stockton, of Westlake, Calif., had a one-stroke lead over a trio of golfers at 141—Mason Rudolph, Hale Irwin, and Mike Hill, brother of controversial Dave Hill.

FORMIDABLE GROUP

But an even more formidable group at 142, only two strokes off the pace, included Masters champion Billy Casper, Dick Lotz, Arnold Palmer, and South Africa's Gary Player, who tied for the best score of the day on Friday with a 68 that included a string of four birdies.

Nine more golfers came at 143, including Julius Boros, wht won under identical hot conditions at San Antonio, Texas,

PGA ON TELEVISION

The PGA was to be televised nationally today at 3 p.m. and again tomorrow at 2 p.m. by ABC.

1968, and then came Nicklaus, defending champion Ray Floyd and five others at 144—the four strokes off the pace that Nicklaus mentioned in his warning.

Forecasts were for another day of blazing heat at Southern Hills, possibly matching the 100-degree high of Friday. And the heat continued to be a dominant factor in the play.

Hinson, starting in the morning, added a 71 to his first-round 69 for his 140 and Stockton tacked on his second straight 70. Then those two sat back and waited while first one and then another "big name" of the game tried to match that total and failed.

MILLER FADES

John Miller, young San Franciscan who shared the first-round lead with Nicklaus, faded first, eventually drifting back to 145. Nicklaus stumbled through an opening nine 39 and Palmer moved into a two-stroke lead.

Then Palmer took a double-bogey six on the 12th hole, being forced to stand knee deep in water to play one shot from the edge of the water hazard. Player made a big charge with a five-under-par 31 on the front nine as he birdied the second through fifth holes. And then Player faded in the heat of the afternoon to a back-nine 37.

But now the field has been cut to the low 70 and ties—and, with first teeoff at 10 a.m. CDT, there will be less disparity in the heat conditions faced by the contestants.

While many of the players constantly mopped their faces with water-soaked towels to beat the heat, Mike Hill said he found it tougher to stand around in the heat and wait than to actually play.

DIFFERENT MACHINE

"I don't know where the jam up was, why it took five hours to play a round," said Hill. "But those fellows who don't mind being out there that long have a different kind of machine than I have."

Gary Player, one of golf's original thinkers, didn't think the heat was too bad and didn't think it was responsible for his back nine woes.

"Heat shouldn't bother anyone of my age, 34, if they're in good condition, and I'm in good condition," said Player.

The South African star, who proved his point by toddling off for another long practice session after finishing his round, also had a word of dihagreement about the rough—it's too easy.

"They have rough on these courses and what happens the day before a tournament starts?" asked Player.

"They cut it. Never on the pro tour do we play a tough rough. That's wrong. If you make a bad putt, you are penalized. Then you should also be penalized if you make a bad drive."

No-No In DiMag Tourney

Drake of San Anselmo and Rohnert Park stayed alive, Holiday Magic of San Rafael lost some of its magic and a San Francisco lad pitched a no-hitter yesterday to highlight the Northern California Joe DiMaggio Baseball League's Northern California Regional Tournament at Albert Park, San Rafael.

Drake, playing with its back to the wall in this double elimination tournament after losing to Rohnert Park Thursday, came back to eliminate Holiday Magic, 3-1 last night.

Earlier in the day Holiday Magic lost its first game to the Active 20-30 Club of Eureka, 3-2, as Eureka's Eric Kahoali pitched a one-hitter.

Rohnert Park returned last night with a 6-4 victory over Meyers Safety Switch of the San Francisco Bay League. Earlier in the day the Rohnert Parkers were victims of a no-hitter pitched by Dave Weidinger of the San Francisco Beach League's Allied Cleaners in an 8-0 romp. Weidinger gave up a first inning walk that was erased on a double play, then retired the next 19 consecutive batters while striking out a dozen.

Today's schedule was to open at 3:45 p.m. with a battle of the unbeatens — Allied Cleaners vs. Active 20-30.

Then at 6 p.m. it will be Drake vs. Rohnert Park, the winner of which will return at 8:15 to oppose the loser of this afternoon's first game.

FINALS TOMORROW

The championship game will be played at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Wildness on the part of Holiday Magic pitcher Marty Moroski helped Drake win their All-Marin battle last night. Drake's two first inning runs came on walks to Damian Casalnuevo and Clifford Hall, two wild pitches scoring Casalnuevo and a triple by Mike Bauman scoring Hall. Drake made it 3-0 in the second inning when Steve Hale doubled home Cap Purcell who had walked.

Drake's John Moresco went the distance on the mound, striking out eight and walking one. Moroski struck out nine but walked four.

In last night's final game Rohnert Park was led to its 6-4 win over Meyers Safety Switch by Steve Temple who had three singles and a walk and one run batted in. The Sonoma County team had only five hits but capitalized on five Meyers errors, eight walks and two hit batters.

Sohner Blanks Defending Champs In State Softball

Morey Swarm pitched a one-hitter and Sohner Tree Service of San Anselmo scored twice in the bottom of the sixth inning to beat defending champion Stornetta's Dairy of Napa, 2-0, in the California State Softball Tournament before an overflow crowd in Napa last night.

The Treemen return to action at 9 o'clock tonight to battle Wilson and Russell Ford of Vallejo, a 6-1 conqueror of Petaluma's Greyview Farms' Thursday.

All games in the 16-team double elimination tourney are played at Napa's Kennedy Park.

Swarm was the complete master last night as the talented righthander limited the Napa club to one infield single while fanning five. Only one ball was handled by a Sohner outfielder.

Ron Blum popped out but Jess Munyon singled infield to send McCamish to third from where he scored on John Brookman's infield hopper.

A Midsummer's Nightmare As Colts Clobber Chiefs

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)— Tom Maxwell broke up a midsummer quarterbacks' nightmare Friday night with a 28-yard return of a pass interception for a touchdown, pushing the Baltimore Colts to a 17-3 exhibition football victory over the Kansas City Chiefs.

Maxwell's interception, with 12:01 to play, was one of eight in the game, five by the Colts and three by the Chiefs.

Kansas City's No. 2 signal-caller, Mike Livingston, was the victim, trying to lob a throw into the hands of Gloster Richardson in the flat.

The play, said Maxwell, a second-year pro from Texas A&M, "is always in the back of your mind. And they'd used it a few times, too."

The 195-pounder raced into the end zone untouched after picking off the pass.

"It was one of those kind that you have a good feeling about when you make it," Maxwell said when asked if he thought he would score.

Attempting to explain the rash of interceptions, he said, "It's still pre-season and sometimes the timing between the quarterbacks and receivers isn't perfect. Both defenses were playing fine, heads-up ball."

Veteran running back Tom Matte increased the score with two seconds to play when he crossed the goal line on a 28-yard sweep, eluding several tacklers.

Lou Michaels kicked a 17-yard field goal in the first quarter and the Chiefs' Jan Stenerud booted a 26-yarder in the second period to set the stage for Maxwell's decisive play.

Baltimore quarterback John Unitas played the first quarter, Jim Ward the second and third and Earl Morrall the fourth. The Chiefs used Len Dawson, Livingston, Jackie Lee and John Huarte. Dawson played the first 2½ quarters.

Said Baltimore coach Don McCafferty, "We got a chance to see the people we wanted to see and still beat an excellent football team."

Added Kansas City's Hank Stram, "We made too many mistakes. It's as simple as that. Defensively, I thought we played well enough to beat a team like Baltimore."

Detroit Batters Buffalo

It was an almost too-familiar scene for Rauch, Wilson and the Bills. The disappointments of the old season were spilling into the new. The Detroit Lions had just vanquished Buffalo, 22-6 in a game that was too similar to the New York Jets' 33-10 romp a week earlier.

"We are not ready in a lot of posts," Rauch told newsmen. "We have to put combinations together. We have put the pieces together."

Running back O.J. Simpson agreed: "We made too many little mistakes."

Mann booted five field goals —from 24, 34, 19, 29 and 31 yards out—and Mel Farr scored on a four-yard run as the Lions chipped out a 22-0 lead against a floundering Buffalo offense and a spotty Buffalo deefnse.

Two Marin Kids Win In Tennis

Diane DeMartini of Greenbrae and Dan Tierney of Tiburon won titles yesterday in the San Francisco Junior Tennis Tournament at Golden Gate Park.

Miss De Martini won the girls' 12 division, defeating Nancy Miller of San Francisco, 6-1, 6-1. The Greenbrae girl lost her bid for the age 14 division when she bowed to Valerie Mendosa of Sunnyvale.

Tienery won the boys' 14 crown over Eric Lee of San Francisco, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Andy Moffat of Mill Valley, Cary Stansbury of San Rafael and Charles Bolcom of Belvedere all lost in finals of the 18, 12 and 10 age groups, respectively.

Raiders Get Nocturnal Tuneup Drill

Madden said he planned to split quarterbacking duties between Ken Stabler and Daryle Lamonica, as he did in the Raiders' opening exhibition loss to Baltimore, 33-21.

"We don't plan to play George Blanda," Madden said. "Pre-season is for game experience, and that's one thing George doesn't need."

Stabler, a left-handed passer, threw three TD passes in the Baltimore game. Stabler was 17 for 27 for 211 yards and was intercepted three times after Lamonica had functioned for the opening quarter.

Monday's game will be the first pro night game ever played at Philadelphia's Franklin Field, where Madden's Raiders will hold a light workout Sunday night immediately after stepping off their flight from Oakland.

A's Purchase Cincy Pitcher

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Oakland A's have purchased former New York Yankee relief pitcher Dooley Womack from the Cincinnati Reds to beef up the A's pitching staff for the stretch drive of the pennant race. Womack was to join the A's as quickly as he could get to Oakland from Indianapolis, where he has spent this season playing in the American Association.

MISS WALSH IN NATIONAL FINAL TODAY

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Top-seeded Sharon Walsh, the defending title holder, and fourth-seeded Eliza Pande Friday entered the final round of the U.S. girls' 18-and-under grass court tennis championships.

Miss Walsh, of San Rafael, Calif., defeated sixth-seeded Marcelyn Louie of San Francisco, 6-4, 6-0.

Miss Pande, of Palo Alto, Calif., won her semifinal by 6-3, 7-5 over second-seeded Janet Newberry of LaJolla, Calif.

23 Innings And Giants Get Nowhere

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—It took the San Francisco Giants 23 innings to go nowhere.

After splitting a doubleheader with the St. Louis Cards Friday night—losing the 13-inning opener 2-1 and recouping the nightcap 5-4—the Giants are still three games under the elusive .500 mark.

Now 20 1-2 games off Cincinnati's pace in the National League West, the Giants must reach for humbler goals. But even balancing the season's wins and losses is an elusive target for the Giants, as something always seems to go wrong.

In Friday's nightcap, however, the Giants pulled things back together and edged past the Cards on Bobby Bonds' 10th inning Texas-leaguer which eluded the groping gloves of three Cards and scored Frank Johnson from first base.

Bonds also knocked in the Giants' first run of the nightcap with a double and drove home his team's only run in the opener with a single.

Don McMahon, who was tagged with the loss in the opener, won the second game to boost his record to 8-4.

The Giants battled back in the nightcap to tie the score at 4-4 in the eighth when pinch-hitter Dietz walked and pinch-hitter Ron Hunt clobbered his sixth homer of the year. Ken Henderson had connected for his 14th homer in the seventh to bring the Giants to within striking distance.

In the opener, Julian Javier scored the winning run from third after Dietz fielded Joe Hague's sacrifice bunt and fired the ball low and wide of third baseman Jim Hart.

Marin's Ray Leach Eyes The Masters

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Not one to set his goals too low, golfer Ray Leach, home in Novato between semesters at Brigham Young University, has his sights set on the Masters, golf's premier tournament.

But first things first.

There's the qualifying round for the National Amateur tournament Aug. 17 at Silverado Country Club in Napa, and if he qualifies, the national tourney itself at Portland, Sept. 1.

Top eight winners in the national amateur earn spots in the Masters, and in the golf world, baby, that's where it's at.

Leach, now older (20) and wiser since blazing through a high school career of fantastic golf in the Marin County Athletic League, will be a junior when he returns to the BYU campus at Salt Lake City.

In his freshman year at BYU he was named a third team All-American golfer and moved up to second team All-American his sophomore year. He expects nothing less than first team All-American honors his junior and senior years.

RAY LEACH
Has high hopes

HONORARY MEMBER

A scratch golfer since the age of 14, Leach is playing his golf these days at Olympic Club in San Francisco where he has had an honorary junior membership since age 16. His early golfing was at Indian Valley Golf Club in Novato, where his father, Al, is manager and part owner.

If you could use that old expression — walk on the course softly and use a big club, or something like that — that would fit Leach. He doesn't get rattled easily. He's got a perfect temperament for the professional golf tour, which he will most likely join after college days are over.

NOW'S TIME

In his freshman year at the Utah college, Leach tied for second in the NCAA tournament and this past season finished third. It's now time for him to win it all, he feels.

Among his accomplishments when in the junior ranks were championships in the Northern California Juniors, California State titles in 1966 and '67, and runner-up honors in the 1966 national juniors.

He's the first to admit to showing no emotions on the golf course. While the 18 handicappers are throwing clubs and kicking trees, Leach methodically takes his swing and marches up for his next shot.

MECHANICAL THING

"As long as I'm playing well, nothing will rattle me," he said. "Golf is a mechanical thing with me. I learned early in the game that you have to have the right mental attitude, then it's just a matter of putting what you have to work."

A communications major, taking courses in advertising and public relations, Leach readily admits playing on the university's golf team has an adverse effect on his grades.

"During November through March there's no golf, just snow," he said. "But in the spring and summer my grades definitely drop. We have tourneys almost every week and some last three and four days. It really gets tough keeping up the grades."

When Leach was 14 he tied the Indian Valley course record with a 64 and then at 18 he broke it with a sizzling nine under par 62. At 17 he became the youngest golfer to ever win the San Francisco City Golf Championship. Ray's birthday is 28 days sooner than Ken Venturi, who was also 17 when he won the city crown in 1950.

And you know how far Venturi has gone in the game of golf.

Injury Riddled 49ers Get Baptism Of Fire Tonight

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers hope to start on the long road back tonight when they open their National Football League exhibition season here against Cleveland.

The Prospectors suffered through a dismal exhibition campaign in 1969 and then were a disastrous 4-8-2 in the regular season. This year coach Dick Nolan admits he will be trying a little harder for victories in the pre-season play to give his charges a winning feeling.

To prove it, he has announced that regulars John Brodie and Steve Spurrier will share quarterback duties and has named a mostly-veteran lineup to open. First-round rookies Cedrick Hardman and Bruce Taylor should see plenty of action on defense, however.

The 49er defense is injury-riddled for a team that has yet to face an opponent. Stan Hindman has not received clearance following a 1969 knee operation, while Tom Hart, Bill Belk and Dave Wilcox all have injuries that could keep them out of action, too. Linebacker Skip Vanderbundt is off for two weeks of service duty.

A crowd of 40,000 is expected to sit in on the contest.

The Browns have announced they will give Don Gault a long look at quarterback in this one. He was on the taxi squad last season but looked sharp in Cleveland's 30-17 loss to Los Angeles.

TV COVERAGE

Tonight's game will be seen on delayed video tape at 8 o'clock over television channels 2 and 13.

Pro Gridder Fails Physical, Leaves Oilers

HOUSTON (UPI) — George Rice, a former Louisiana State star, has refused to sign a letter relieving the Houston Oilers of any further responsibilities for his injuries and he will try to play for another professional football team.

Rice said he was angry with owner Bud Adams and vice president John Collins for trying to persuade him to sign the injury waiver clause.

Rice, 26, joined the Oilers in 1967 and became a starter the next year. He suffered a knee injury in November of that year and underwent two operations and missed last season.

Rice is now a free agent but the Oilers can call him back at any time before Oct. 15 for another physical even if he joins another team.

Sports Driver Badly Injured

Knight's car, traveling close to 100 mph, shot off the winding 2.3 mile track past a fast curve Friday and slammed into a dirt bank.

A Frantic Week For Twins As Huge Lead Evaporates

By VITO STELLINO
UPI Sports Writer

This has been a lost week for the Minnesota Twins.

Just last Saturday the Twins beat Oakland for the second straight game to move nine games ahead of the California Angels and 10 ahead of the A's in the Western Division race.

It was starting to look like a runaway until the Twins lost a doubleheader to Oakland on Sunday and were beaten by the A's again on Monday. Three straight losses to the Washington Senators on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday stretched the losing streak to six.

The streak was extended to seven straight Friday night when the Twins took an 8-1 lambasting at the hands of the Boston Red Sox. The Twins have a day-night doubleheader set with the Red Sox today and have a shot at the unenviable feat of losing nine straight games in a week.

DOWN TO FOUR

Meanwhile, in just six days, the nine game lead is down to four. Oakland beat Baltimore 4-0 to move within four games of the Twins while California downed Detroit 7-3 to get within 4½ of the staggering leaders.

In the other games, New York nipped Kansas City 3-2 in 10 innings, Washington beat Chicago 6-5 in 10 innings and Milwaukee downed Cleveland 4-3 in 11 innings.

Minnesota couldn't get Carl Yastrzemski out while losing to the Red Sox. He walked three times, hit a two-run homer and a run-scoring single to boost his league-leading average to .331. Rico Petrocelli added a solo homer. Ray Culp pitched a nine-hitter to get the win as he stranded 10 Twins.

A three-run homer by winning pitcher Clyde Wright and a two-run homer by Tommie Reynolds carried California past Detroit. Wright gained his 16th victory although he was lifted in the seventh. Mickey Lolich took the loss.

BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG

I've frequently seen a bowler tick off what she thought was a one-pin spare only to find another stick standing. That's something that will hurt you and your teammates. Make it a habit to check for hidden pins when you go to the ball return.

St. Louis Cardinals Purchase Bertaina

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals today bought Frank Bertaina from Rochester of the Baltimore Orioles farm system, it was announced by club officials.

Bertaina, 26, compiled a 12-3 record with Rochester this season. The lefthander will replace Al Hrabosky, who was optioned to the Cards' Arkansas farm team.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Aug. 15, the 227th day of 1970 with 138 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter.

On this date in history:

In 1914 the American vessel Ancon passed from the Atlantic to the Pacific, officially opening the Panama Canal.

In 1935 Will Rogers and Wiley Post were killed when their plane crashed in Alaska.

In 1945 the United States ended wartime gasoline rationing.

In 1966 the New York Herald-Tribune went out of business after 131 years.

A thought for the day: British novelist George Meridith said, "Who rises from prayer a better man, his prayer is answered."

Bonn Plans New Type Chain Of Radio Stations

FRANKFURT, GERMANY (GF) — West Germany's radio stations are planning to set up a chain of ultra short wave transmitters to broadcast special programs for automobile passengers.

The network will cover all of West Germany. When travelers leave one area of reception they need only to adjust their receivers slightly and they can continue to hear the program on the same wave length.

The program will offer music, news and traffic reports. (68 words)

WORD-A-DAY

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Adopt Simplest Assumption: Opponent Is Acting Normally

It pays to assume that your opponents are acting normally unless your contract depends on the assumption that they are doing something unusual. I could probably clarify that complicated idea with six or seven hundred words, but it's easier to do so with a single bridge hand.

NORMAL ACTION

In one of the qualifying matches between Taiwan and Norway at the world championship a few weeks ago, the Chinese West led the eight of clubs. Like most experts the Chinese avoided leading the top of a three-card suit. If West was acting normally, this eight of clubs was almost surely the top of a doubleton.

Nevertheless, South cashed two high clubs to discard a spade from dummy, and then tried to cash a third high club. This maneuver met with the success it deserved.

West ruffed with the seven of hearts, and dummy had to overruff with the jack. Now declarer led the ten of spades from dummy. East played low, and South had to guess what to do. He guessed wrong, and lost the trick to the queen of spades.

NO RECOVERY

There was no recovery from this unfortunate guess: West led a spade to the ace, and East returned the ten of clubs to make dummy ruff. Now West was sure to get a trick with the king of trumps, and East had to get his ace of diamonds.

LEAD DIAMOND

After winning the first trick with the king of clubs, South should lend a diamond at once. If East wins and returns a spade, South may make his contract even if he guesses wrong: he may lose only two spades and one diamond.

In short, South could make his contract if he assumed West's opening lead was an ordinary doubleton. There was no need to play the hand in an upside-down style, creating a way for the defenders to beat him.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ — J 10 6
♥ — A J 6
♦ — K Q 9 7 4 2
♣ — 4.

ANSWER: Pass.

The hand is not quite good enough for an opening bid. If your diamonds were headed by K-Q-J and you didn't have the jack of spades, you might open because then your jack would have real value. In the actual hand, the jack of spades is of doubtful value.

UC Research: Insects Don't React To Radio

University of California engineers have at least partly laid to rest an old and enduring belief among a number of entomologists — that insects communicate by a form of radio.

Charles Susskind, professor of engineering science at Berkeley and an authority on radio waves, and graduate student Henry S. Hsiao report after two years of research that while insects are equipped for infrared reception they do not respond to it.

Haley's Tragic Death Stirs Memories Of Another Break

THE TRAGIC KIDNAPPING and murder of Judge Harold Haley by San Quentin convicts bent on escape stirred the memories of certain old-timers among us.

Momentarily they were whisked backward in time to Jan. 16, 1935.

The State Prison Board was having lunch at the home of San Quentin Warden James B. Holohan. Mrs. Holohan and her sister were present.

Suddenly, two armed convicts came in a back door and "covered" the group with their guns. The warden darted out another doorway to give the alarm. In the hallway he ran into two more armed convicts who beat him unmercifully, fracturing his skull. He nearly died.

After arguing among themselves briefly over whom to take as hostages, the four convicts paused to exchange clothes with prison board members. Then they marched four prison board members — president Frank Sykes, former president Warren Atherton, secretary Mark Noon and member Joseph Stephens — out the front door and into the warden's car. Two prison guards were forced to join the party, one as driver.

OUT THE PRISON gates they drove, with a car load of prison guards in pursuit. No one fired a shot — yet.

Into San Rafael and onto Highway 101 they went, heading north to the Black Point Cutoff.

Prison officials, the California Highway patrol and then-sheriff Walter Sellmer all had called the Black Point draw bridge (over Petaluma River) to make sure it was raised, cutting off the fleeing car's escape.

When the speeding convicts and their hostages reached the bridge and perceived the trap, they stopped and ordered prison board secretary Mark Noon out of the car. He was directed to hike back and flag down the carload of armed officers following and warn them to allow the fleeing convicts to double back — or the hostages would be killed.

Noon did as he was told; the pursuers held their fire as the warden's car carrying escapees and hostages passed in the opposite direction.

The lawmen took up the chase again and pursued the fleeing convicts to Novato and then onto the Novato-Hicks Valley Road ultimately to Tomales.

ON JANUARY 16, 1935, Dist. Atty. Albert E. Bagshaw had been in office only nine days. He was in Tomales to prosecute a case in Justice Court there. He had driven out with Undersheriff Edmund (Bud) Blum; and their car had suffered a broken axle and they were temporarily stranded in Tomales after court adjourned.

A telephone call from San Rafael informed them of the prison break and indicated the escape car was apparently headed for Tomales.

Soon the car bearing escapees and hostages arrived. Bagshaw ordered firing confined to the tires only so as not to endanger the hostages.

At least one tire was flattened and the getaway car continued toward Valley Ford.

Not far behind was a car carrying Sonoma County Undersheriff Mike Flohr and an armed posse from Santa Rosa. Bagshaw and Blum climbed aboard to pursue the escapers whom they rapidly overtook.

THE ESCAPE CAR turned off a side road to the Valley Ford creamery. The would-be escapees jumped from the car and ran into the creamery buildings.

Blum and Bagshaw ran around the side of a creamery building.

"Look out, Al," shouted the undersheriff.

Gun at the ready, Bagshaw whirled and fired.

The leader of the escape, convict Rudolph B. Straight, 34, fell dead. He had been described as hating everybody. He had a record of previous escape attempts while serving time for a Berkeley bank robbery.

The other three surrendered meekly.

PRISON BOARD MEMBERS Sykes and Stephens were wounded by gunfire but recovered, as did Warden Holohan, who was treated by Dr. Leo L. Stanley, then prison surgeon.

Harold Haley was a deputy district attorney under Al Bagshaw then. Clinton Duffy, later to become San Quentin's most famous warden, was secretary to Warden Holohan.

State Sen. Charles Reindollar, San Rafael, headed a legislative inquiry into the break. Gov. Frank F. Merriam called for an overhaul of the parole system. (A parolee had smuggled the gun into the prison for the escapers.)

San Rafael Police Chief Sabin Kane spoke before the 20-30 Club to declare that steps should be taken to provide better protection against prison breaks.

The San Rafael Independent enjoyed a two-hour news beat bringing the whole story to its readers.

Dist. Atty. Bagshaw, assisted by his deputy, Harold Haley, prosecuted the would-be escapers under the "Little Lindbergh Law" of California.

One convict pleaded guilty to a lesser charge. He subsequently was paroled. But he lived to violate parole, go back to prison and die in a later escape attempt from Folsom.

The other two pleaded innocent, were tried and convicted. After appeals were denied, they were hanged — the last two persons executed by hanging before the gas chamber was installed at San Quentin.

Wonder what will happen to the lone survivor of this most recent tragic escape attempt?

—Jack Craemer

Nostalgic Floral Note

Amaryllis lilies are blooming all over Marin and Sonoma counties each August. This South African native has blossoms which resemble regal lilies, but are a bright pink in color.

Before the days of much public nudity, it was considered vaguely naughty to call them 'naked ladies.' Their fleshy color and the fact that the flowers are borne on bare stems months after the leaves have turned brown and withered, lends credibility to the naked part. Ladies — well — those old-timers had romantic notions, too.

Bouquets And Brickbats

A BOUQUET of deep gratitude and appreciation to Paul Zensius on the occasion of his retirement from the California Highway Patrol after 28 years of service to all of us. We will be fortunate if the new crop of highway patrolmen produces even a few of his rare, dedicated kind. May his retirement be long and enjoyable.

A BRICKBAT to Larkspur City Mgr. Kent Bathurst who told the I-J one week that his city was NOT working on a ferry terminal plan but then presented one to the Golden Gate Bridge board the following week. An explanation is called for, obviously.

BOUQUETS to the organization known as Friends of Sonoma State who are seeking to raise funds to support the athletic program at Sonoma State College, in dire straits after the Associated Students voted to disband, thereby ending student body financial support for sports. May the Friends' efforts succeed.

A BOUQUET with best wishes for success to Earl W. Jones, just appointed acting president of Sonoma State College. He apparently will need everybody's best wishes and then some; even before he officially took over, a group of former student body officers met to pledge resistance to his administration.

Midst Turmoil And Frustration

Reader Hits High Tax Rate In Hub

The San Anselmo tax rate has been set at $2.59 — Corte Madera's is 99 cents, Novato's is 75 cents, Fairfax's is $1.74, Belvedere's is $1.70.

Those San Anselmo citizens who have loudly acclaimed they hope the County will reduce its tax rate but don't care if San Anselmo raises theirs may have been the very ones instrumental in helping to keep our rate the second highest in the County!

Only three miles of our streets have been paved in the last 5 years while our Public Works Department accumulated our gas tax funds and blew the whole wad on the Hub. (Does it really cost a quarter of a million dollars to signalize an intersection?)

Now, with no backlog of gas tax funds the property owners of San Anselmo are having to put up over $200,000 to pave 5 miles of streets in this next year. Did these streets SUDDENLY deteriorate or have they been neglected all along because our Engineer and certain city councilmen were selfishly pushing through their pet scheme?

And three of our councilmen have insisted that $57,000 remain in the budget for a "master plan" supposed to cost $114,000 although the Federal government has just turned the plan down. But, as Mr. Reed said at one budget session, it ($57,000) will stay in the budget "because it would be too difficult to explain this to the people all over again."

How naive and apathetic are San Anselmans supposed to be?

Key Club Offers New Paper Drive

Our society is concerned about our environment, and justifiably so. Yes, there is a lot of talk going around about improving our environment, but very few people do anything about it. That's why it's so very important to become involved and contribute to local conservation projects. Paper drives are types of projects available to everyone. The papers collected are recycled, thus saving our trees.

There are a few paper drives in operation around our county but a relatively new and unknown paper drive has recently been started for the residents who live in or around the San Rafael area. This new paper drive is being sponsored by the San Rafael High Key club, a Kiwanis sponsored youth organization. Drop-offs may be made at the San Rafael Corporation Yard, on Lincoln just south of 2nd, any day between 8 and 4. Thanks very much.

Brothers Protest Island Development

My brother, 9, and I, 11, wish to protest against overdevelopment of the Santa Venetia Island. We want you to realize that there are many kinds of wild life living there. There are owls, gopher snages, caccoons, rabbits, egrets and other sea birds. If you allow too much building, all these creatures will be homeless.

There are already too few areas where wild life can live and multiply.

Marin's Tragedy Points To Burger's Courtroom Plea

The weird gun battle that took the lives of a California judge, two convicts and a man seeking to free them has provided terrifying validation of the condemnation which, by bizarre coincidence, Chief Justice Burger was delivering that same day of "unseemly, outrageous episodes" in courtrooms.

Even in retrospect, it seems inconceivable that a confederate could invade a courtroom while two prisoners were on trial, pull weapons out of a flight bag and cow all the assembled forces of the law. But the self-identification of the three as "revolutionaries" makes it impossible to divorce their action from the incidents the Chief Justice was deploring — incidents in which defendants who have abandoned all respect for the judicial process do everything in their power to discredit and destroy it.

It is nonsense to imply, as did one critic of the Burger remarks at the American Bar Association convention in St. Louis, that those who insist on decorum in the courtroom are endeavoring to set the stage for "a declaration of martial law" that would stifle the rights of accused persons. This is a classic case of shifting the fault from the offender to the offended.

The surest way to turn courthouses into garrisons, replete with all the trappings of a police state, lies in systematic efforts by militant foes of the Established order to upset it by outbreaks in the courtroom, whether in the form of mass demonstrations or other contemptuous behavior.

The horrible armed invasion that shattered San Rafael's Superior Court is eloquent evidence that Justice Burger's concern is abundantly warranted. The American court system requires civilized conduct on the part of everyone —prosecutors, defendants, lawyers, court personnel and spectators — if it is to fulfill its essential mission of protecting the rights of all Americans, including those who want to make America over in a new image. — New York Times

Berkeley's Calm Now, But Peace Candidates Lose! What Then?

BERKELEY—This is the advance post for the student revolution that has swept the country. The turmoil at Berkeley and at others of the nine campuses of the university of California is embedded in the politics of the state and the nation.

The revolution is producing a deeply rooted counter-revolution on the fight. This is the reason, in the view of most politicians of whatever persuasion, that Gov. Ronald Reagan will be reelected in November by a majority at least as large as that of four years ago when he was unknown except as a movie and television performer.

IT SEEMS TO matter little that the governor has failed to carry out the two principal promises he made in the 1966 campaign. One was to keep taxes down. He is engaged in a prolonged hassle with the Legislature over passage of his tax program after having added a billion dollars onto the state's tax bill.

His second promise was to clean up the mess in Berkeley. Bricked-up bank windows, plywood covering shattered glass in ships, university buildings badly damaged—the evidence is overwhelming that the mess is still a mess. In the process of trying to clean it up the university has become a political football with the struggle going on in the board of regents.

CONSERVATIVE regents — and perhaps Reagan, an ex-officio member — would like to remove Chancellor Roger Heyns who presides over the vast structure with its 106,000 students. They say he is too permissive and they would like to replace him with a tough administrator who would crack down on all forms of dissent.

The regents' sessions have come to resemble not so much football as the outlawed sport of bear baiting. The liberals bait Reagan and Reagan baits them back.

Berkeley's probelem is complicated by the non-students, the hippies who came here from all over the country, attracted by the climate and the subculture of drugs and sex. In this off-season with summer school ended, University officials estimate that 4,500 are holed up in the warrens along Telegraph Avenue. In the fall with the opening of the new term the number will grow to 6,000 or 7,000.

RECENTLY the Berkeley police rounded up 580 juvenile runaways, some only 13 or 14, and returned them to their homes in a dozen states, chiefly in the Midwest. The student newspaper, The Daily Californian, published an indignant editorial calling this a violation of civil liberties which would further increase polarization and precede disorders that "will make previous riots lok like debutante balls."

There is a suspicion here that the President's Commission on Campus Unrest with William W. Scranton as its chairman, is out to discredit the university and pin a label of destroyer on Reagan. William French Smith, chairman of the board of regents, was indignant when he was given only 24 hours notice to appear before the Scranton commission in Los Angeles. One witness to appear was the university chief of police, William Beal. He submitted a list of 68 disorders over eight years, ranging from demonstrations to repeated fire bombings of town and university property.

PREDICTIONS of what will happen in September are hard to come by. While the university is not granting students time off to work in the congressional elections, there will be a lot of activity.

When peace candidates fail of elections, as seems likely, the test would come. Then the revolutionists will say: "You see the system doesn't work, and so we must destroy it."

Parent Says, 'Because I Said So!' So, No Generation Gap In Tahiti

TAHITI — At first glance Tahiti and the surrounding islands live up to their reputation as being an earthlike paradise. But after a week you notice many things wrong.

It's sad to report but Tahiti lacks many of the refinements that Americans are used to.

For example, during the 10 days we spent in Polynesia there was not one smog alert. I kept inquiring about smog, but only got blank stares from the natives. The simple souls didn't even know what smog was, which shows you how far behind the times the Polynesians still are.

ANOTHER THING that struck me was the fact that none of the dancers out here are topless. The Tahitian dancers prefer to wear bras to going bare, and an Americna tourist can make a fortune selling photos of Los Angeles go-go dancers to the natives, who are shocked that we allow our women to dance with nothing on.

It takes a few days for an American to get used to dancers wearing bras, but after awhile you stop staring and it doesn't bother you at all.

One of the things that strikes you about Tahiti is the noise, which is deafening. The wind blowing through the palm trees, the surf crashing against the coral and the constant flapping of the sails in the breeze is more than a person can stand. It's no wonder after a few days of this that a person longs for the quiet and solitude of New York City or Cleveland.

ANOTHER THING that hits you is the lack of formality in clothing. The women out here are not even conscious that the midi is now in fashion and they are still wearing their sarongs above the knees. They also insist on wearing flowers in their hair.

One is amazed to see men without coats and ties in restaurants and bars. A tourist can't help wondering what on earth the missionaries have been doing all these years.

I am sorry to report that when you leave the main island of Papeete, there is no television. The only entertainment available on Bora Bora and Moorea and Raitaea is provided by the natives who sing and dance until early hours of the morning.

IT'S HARD TO believe that any civilization can survive without Johnny Carson or Laugh In, but somehow the Tahitians manage to do it.

At the same time, you can see the effects the lack of television has had on the natives. They have no idea which detergent contains the most active ingredients: they don't know which shampoo will add luster to their hair. They have no clue as to what works faster than aspirin, and they don't even know what mouth wash to use when someone accuses them of bad breath.

The only thing the Tahitians have going for them, as far as we could tell, is that there is no generation gap.

A YOUNG MAN does not argue with his father when he's told he can't borrow the outrigger canoe. A young girl must be in her hut by 10 o'clock at night.

How do Tahitian parents manage to wield this control over their children? They attribute it to a secret Tahitian phrase that has been passed down through the generations. When a child asks why he cannot do a certain thing, a Tahitian parent always replies, "No te mea ua parau vau mi tera." Translated in English, it means "Because I said so."

Interest Rising In Mass Transit

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Mass transit, long ago jilted by the automobile-loving public, may be on the verge of a nationwide comeback.

On a downhill curve since World War II, the bus, the subway, and the commuter train now are being touted as the answer to such critical urban problems as smog and traffic jams.

This revival of interest in mass transit comes none to soon. Since 1945, transit fares have tripled, but the number of passengers has dropped by one-third. Over 235 bus and subway firms have gone out of business.

Two things combined to give mass transit a second chance. One is growing government support for mass transit projects. The other is a spate of innovative ideas on how to move commuters with speed and comfort.

At the top of the idea list is the tracked air cushion vehicle. Propelled by an electric motor, this train-like vehicle rides over a guideway on a thin cushion of air and is capable of speeds up to 300 miles an hour.

Futuristic? Not at all. France already has tested a working model. The Federal Railroad Administration begins its own tests next year at Pueblo, Colo.

By late 1972, a 150-mile-an-hour version of the air cushion vehicle may be in operation between the Los Angeles International Airport and the San Fernando Valley.

Ever hear of a gravity train? The Transportation Department is investigating the prospect of using these so-called tube trains for mass transit and city-to-city travel. Operating as much as 1,500 feet underground, the trains would roll downhill to stations, and then use a combination of acquired momentum and vacuum pressure to climb uphill.

Then there is the "SkyBus" system being used for Pittsburgh commuters. Rolling on overhead tracks, the SkyBus cars tie downtown Pittsburgh to an outlying suburb. SkyBus is designed to be fully automated and controlled by a computer.

Other cities are using so-called "people-movers" to keep traffic moving from point to point in downtown areas and around massive airport terminals. The "Dashaveyor," for example, consists of small, electric-powered units capable of carrying six to 24 passengers over a track at speeds of 80 miles an hour. It is being considered for use at a new Dallas airport.

Braniff Airlines already is using its own people-mover in Dallas. Called the "Jetrail," it is a monorail system which carries passengers from parking lot to plane gate. Suspended from an overhead rail, Jetrail cars can carry 2,000 persons an hour in each direction. It is equipped with passenger-operated destination buttons like those used in an elevator.

A passenger arriving at Dallas stops in a special lounge and telephones for his car, left in the parking lot when he departed. By the time he arrives at the parking lot in his Jetrail car, his own car is waiting for him.

In fast-growing San Jose, Calif., officials are considering a Goodyear-developed transit system called "Carveyor." Each Carveyor mini-car can seat from two to 10 persons. The cars ride on a constantly moving belt, and the system operates on an escalator-like principle —Carveyors are always available at loading stations just as escalator steps are always ready.

While such exotic forms of transportation may be more eye-catching, for all but the largest cities in the United States, rapid transit usually means bus transportation.

But like the car, the bus is the victim of traffic jams.

One solution to this is the reserved highway lane for buses. For example, under a federal-state project, one lane of Interstate 95 leading into Washington, D.C., from suburban Virginia is now used exclusively by commuter buses during rush hours.

Carrying tie same idea one step farther, the Transportation Department is studying the possibility of funding a test project that would let car pools share the reserved bus lane.

One of the most revolutionary ideas for buses is the "Dial-a-Bus" system. Scheduled to begin next year in the town of Haddonfield, N.J., it responds to demands from customers who will use a telephone or a push-button sidewalk call box. A computer center will direct the buses over new routes to pick up waiting passengers.

In Washington, D.C., another computerized system is being installed which will allow a bus driver to "call for a green light" to speed his way through traffic. New York and Dallas already have computerized systems which gear traffic lights to the changing flow of traffic.

Even the commuter himself is leaving his mark on bus transportation. In Reston, Va., a Washington, D.C., suburb, commuters charter their own buses and run an express service downtown, complete with drinks for homeward bound commuters.

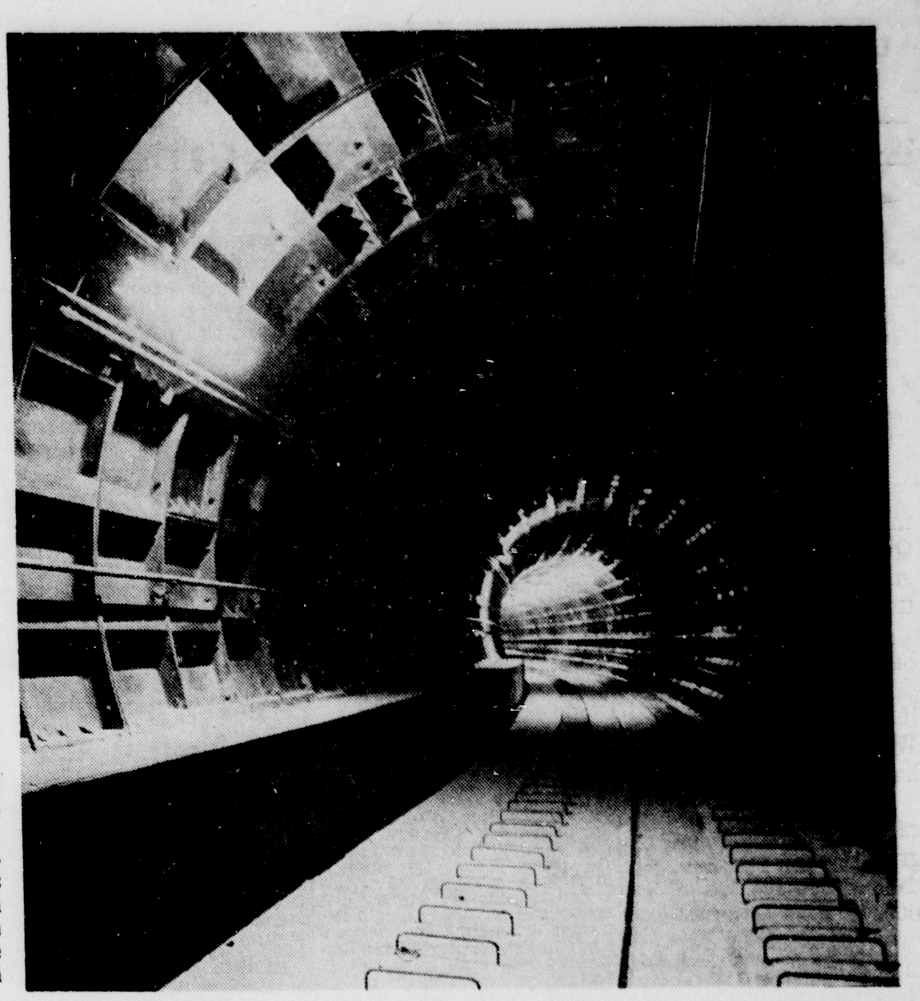
The subway, however, still is the only practical way to move large numbers of people rapidly through congested metropolitan areas. Washington is building a new subway system. In San Francisco, the 75-mile Bay Area Rapid Transit, scheduled for operation in 1972, will provide modern cars with automated fare collection systems based on distance traveled. Chicago is making plans to replace its famed Loop elevated system with a subway.

The fuel for the drive to overhaul the nation's mass transit system is coming from the federal government. Nixon has asked Congress to approve a $10 billion, 12-year program to revive mass transit.

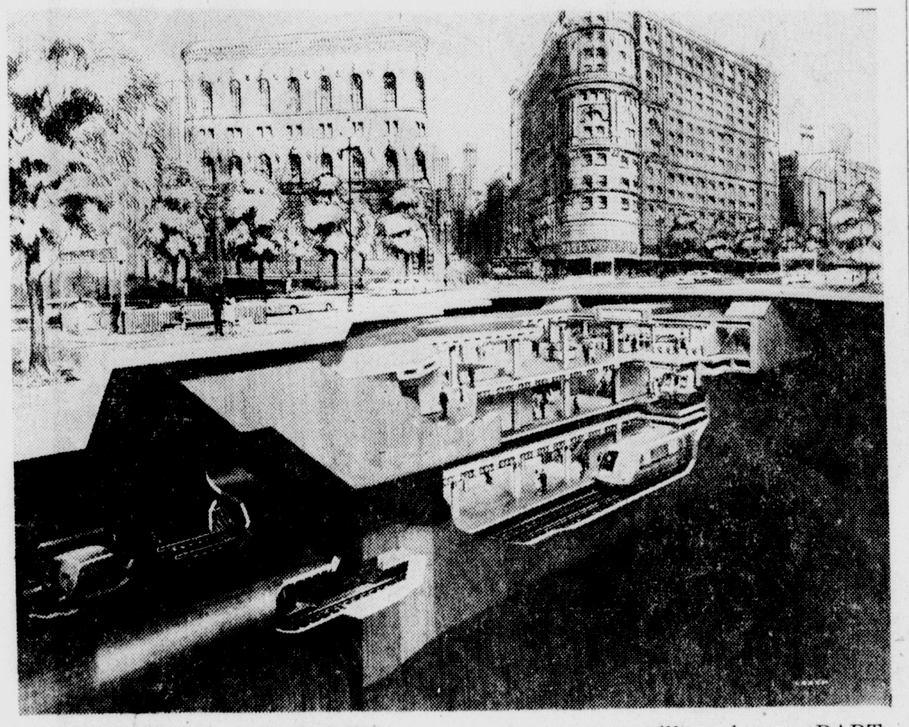
But critics say this sum is not nearly enough to do the job needed. Others fear the powerful highway lobby may block any congressional attempt to inject massive amounts of money into transit programs.

Most observers agree that the most serious problem facing mass transit reform is public apathy. For every city with a new transit program, there's another that has rejected a bond issue to finance such a program.

But transit backers feel time is on their side. Their argument is simply this: Mass transit must succeed because there is no alternative.



BIG, LONG HOLE — A completed half-mile section of the Bay Area Rapid Transit (BART) curves toward Ninth Street and southern Alameda County from this point beneath Broadway in downtown Oakland. The tunnel contains emergency walkway, handrail, and permanent lighting. Similar sections have been excavated in other parts of downtown Oakland, in Berkeley, and in San Francisco and the 75-mile subway system will be completed by 1972.



CHANGING UP AND DOWN — San Francisco's skyline erupts with steel and concrete while more structures burrow underground. An artist's sketch shows how the routine subway stops will work once BART is completed in 1972. The upper level is a passenger mezzanine, the middle level accommodates Municipal Railway lines, and the lower level carries BART trains.

Behind The News

BART Already Nears Completion

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — While many cities have modern rapid transit systems on the drawing board, the San Francisco Bay Area has one on the ground, nearly ready to go.

The first 80-mile-an-hour computer-controlled trains for BART — the Bay Area Rapid Transit district — are due from the manufacturer shortly.

All but four miles of the 75-mile track is under construction. A year from now the $1.3 billion BART system will be preparing inaugural ceremonies for its first paying passengers.

If it proves anything, BART will prove that vast projects can still be planned and carried out despite massive roadblocks of bureaucracy, dissension, and urban congestion.

BART is one-third subway, one-third ground-level, and one-third aerial track. It has three arms on the east side of San Francisco Bay, stretching north through Berkeley to Richmond, south through Hayward to Fremont, and east through the Oakland hills to the warm bedroom towns of Contra Costa County.

The subway reaches far out into the San Francisco residential neighborhoods, where the tracks then spring up from the ground aboard an aerial skyway stretched along a single file of concrete piers to the city limits.

By 1975 Bart expects to be carrying 200,000 passengers per day, which it figures will cut down rush hour freeway traffic by as much as 50 per cent.

BART has been many years in the womb. The talk stage began at the end of World War II. A state legislative commission was established in 1951 and it presented a plan in 1957 for a 385-mile rapid transit system covering nine counties around San Francisco Bay.

Six counties wrote themselves out of the system. Their argument was that they would be paying for costly subways and stations in the city. But on Nov. 6, 1962, San Francisco, Alameda and Contra Costa counties approved a $792 million bond issue to build BART.

Since then BART has moved ahead, defying massive obstacles and subduing harsh critics. Taxpayers lawsuits were fought. Rivalry between Oakland and San Francisco was overcome. To get more money to buy its trains, BART had a two-year fight that resulted in a 1-2 cent local sales tax increase.

To pay for the $180 million bay tube, BART persuaded the state to keep collecting tolls on the Bay Bridge after the span paid itself off.

Numerous federal grants were won because BART was trying out new schemes.

The City of Berkeley voted millions of dollars in extra taxes on itself to have a subway instead of an aerial line that would slice the city in half.

BART got together with state highway builders to run its track down the middle of a freeway, thus saving a lot of valuable city land.

Each part in the new system, from the fasteners that tie down the track, to the complex control center built by Westinghouse, involved developing, evaluating and testing new technology.

To mesh everything satisfactorily in an orderly way was a monumental challenge itself, even for the computers. Completion of the system is two years behind schedule and is costing several hundred millions more than expected.

However, as the day draws near and thousands of visitors are shown through the unfinished tunnels and stations, the critics are seldom heard. Many commuters are planning a BART credit card instead of a new car in 1971.

Future Pressure Expected To Expand BART System

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It will be two years before the Bay Area Rapid Transit system is completed, but pressure is already building to extend BART's tracks in several directions.

Requests have already been made to study extension to the San Francisco and Oakland airports, the Livermore area of the East Bay, even all the way to Sacramento.

"We expect many requests for extension — demands for extension — when people see what BART has to offer," said George L. McDonald, spokesman for the district. "And we are gearing up to meet the demands.

BART had always been planned as the nucleus of a much larger regional transit network. It will, with its "feeder" services, take care of a broad area on the east side of the bay. But on the west side, San Mateo County, a major "bedroom" area for city workers, is not included. Nor is Marin County to the north across the Golden Gate Bridge, nor burgeoning Santa Clara County at the southern end of the bay.

San Mateo County, on the Peninsula south of San Francisco, would have been BART's easiest commuter run, with no bridges to cross and population centers strung out along an existing rail right-of-way. But the county board of supervisors declined to put BART to a vote of the people.

Some years later pressure brought formation of a separate transit district, but it went out of business this year after conducting a million dollar survey. The survey found a link-up with BART advisable, but the county government instead put to a vote an alternative proposal for a subsidized bus system that would eventually serve rapid transit. It was rejected.

Serious negotiations are now under way between BART, San Francisco and San Mateo County to extend the rapid transit line from the city limits to San Francisco International Airport, which is half way down the San Mateo County coastline.

San Jose, on the south end of the bay, has more population that Oakland and is one of the fastest growing centers in the nation. The local bus system last year had to get an emergency subsidy from the city to stay in business. The voters later rejected a proposal to buy out the bus company and expand its service.

A new proposal is to go on the San Jose ballot next November. It will include an interim subsidized bus system but will emphasize planning for a more effective modern transit system.

Unlike San Francisco where the general direction of traffic to the center of the city and the location of BART lines is narrowed by many factors, San Jose is sprawling in all directions. Its transit problem is much like that of Los Angeles.

James Lyon, chairman of the Santa Clara County Transit Committee's subcommittee on hardware and technology, says his group is looking for a lightweight transit car that need not carry many passengers but should be cheap enough to be strung all over the area, possibly suspended over existing streets.

The regional transit picture also includes a BART line linking San Francisco to Oakland by the long land route around the bottom of the bay through San Jose.

For Marin County to the north, the transit problem centers on crossing the Golden Gate. The majestic red bridge is now crowded to capacity with commuter autos and buses.

Engineering studies made at the time BART was being proposed left some doubt as to whether the bridge could carry a transit line which was to run below the auto deck. Since that time, most transit schemes for the county involved ferries.

Recently the directors of the Golden Gate Bridge District decided to go into transit themselves. Only last week the district heard a proposal by the Philip F. Spaulding Associates of Seattle to set up a $14.2 million ferry service.

A few days earlier another company, Hydrodyne Marine of San Francisco, called the press to the unveiling of a 300-passenger hydrofoil ferry for Marin commuter service, but the vessel was unable to get started.

Numerous other schemes have been tried. The Bay Area had the first U.S. experiment with air-cushioned ferries, with little success.

This Week In The World

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Peace was the byword as the guns were silenced at the Suez Canal and bitter words between the Soviet Union and West Germany were quieted with a treaty. But the ironic catchword was war as the material for its conduct — missiles and nerve gas — shared the headlines.

Israel and the United Arab Republic lifted their fingers from the explosive Mideast trigger at the start of an American-inspired 90-day ceasefire aimed at getting the two belligerents plus Jordan to sit down at a peace parley.

Diplomacy on all fronts characterized the undercover efforts designed to achieve a lasting Middle Eastern peace, but public charges by Israel that Egypt, with the help of the Soviet Union, had moved missiles closer to the Suez Canal threatened to jeopardize the peace initiatives.

To the north, months of negotiations between the Soviet Union and West Germany were finalized in Moscow with the signing of a treaty pledging to observe the sanctity of existing European borders.

With their signatures, West German Chancellor Willy Brandt and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin opened the way to closer ties between West Germany and the Communist-dominated nations of Eastern Europe.

In Washington, the Nixon administration achieved victory in its fight to expand the Safeguard antimissile system when the Senate by a five vote margin defeated an amendment designed to block the system from spreading.

The vote was 52-47, but the subject still is faced with possible modification next week in another balloting while senators opposed to Safeguard grumble about the last minute administration move which may have caused its victory.

The spark which may have ignited some 11th hour vote switching was a telegram by Gerald C. Smith, chief arms control negotiator at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) with the Soviet Union in Vienna, urging the Senate to vote for Safeguard to prevent an American "static" position on deployment.

In the south, two trains weighted with 66 tons of World War II nerve gas crawled at a snail's pace to the Sunny Point Army Terminal at Southport, N.C., to be loaded on a rusting ship for sinking in the Atlantic 282 miles east of Cape Kennedy.

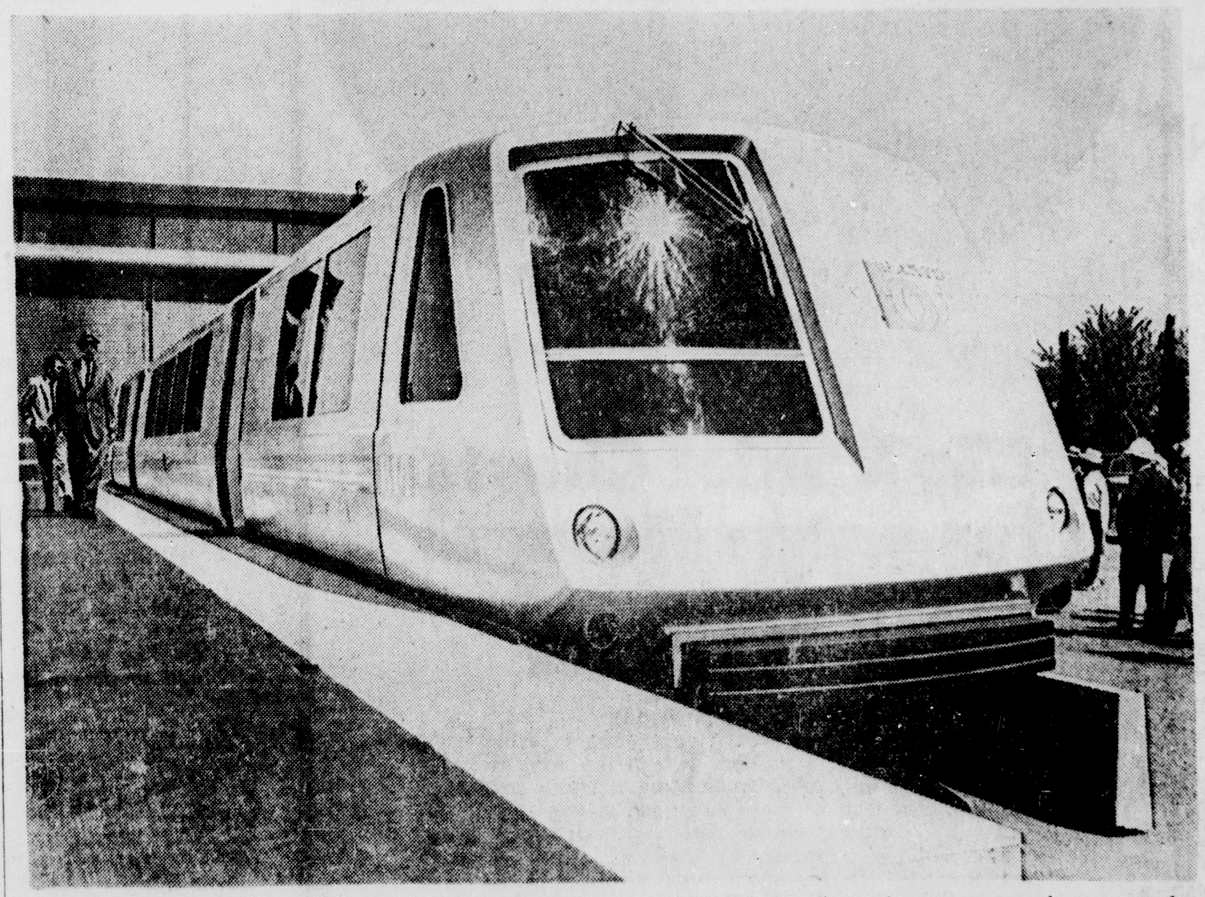
Around The World, Around The Clock

WASHINGTON — President Nixon signed legislation replacing the 181-year-old Post Office Department with an independent postal agency. The bill, which ends congressional authority over the postal service also gives postal workers an 8 per cent retroactive pay hike.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay — The body of Dan Mitrione, the chief U.S. police adviser to Uruguay, was found in a car on a Montevideo street 11 days after he was kidnaped by guerrillas.

CUZCO, Peru — A Peruvian national airlines plane crashed moments after takeoff on a flight to Lima, killing all but one of the 91 passengers and nine crew members. Fifty-four passengers were Americans, most of them teen-agers.

WASHINGTON — President Nixon vetoed two bills totaling $22 billion, some $1 billion more than he requested, but the House later overrode his veto on the $4.4 billion education measure.



SMOG SOLUTION — Modern cars like this one offer hopes of curbing air pollution in the Bay Area when the BART system opens in 1972. The system will link San Francisco with East Bay communities and leads the way in mass transit systems which are becoming more popular as people realize the subway is the most practical way to move large numbers of people through large metropolitan areas.

Watch Those Golden Gate Span Pieces

Well, at least pieces of the bridge.

It seems that original rivets from the bridge are being sold commercially by a San Francisco store for a staggering $50 apiece. That's complete with rust, and encased in clear plastic.

Several district directors reacted indignantly last week when a newspaper carried advertisements about the sale, and the district's attorney, Thomas M. Jenkins, immediately investigated.

He reported yesterday that he had advised both the store, Roos-Atkins, and the firm distributing the rivets, Designs Unlimited of San Francisco, that their commercial use of the bridge's name was unauthorized, that the rivets were district property, and that they must be returned.

Jenkins told newsmen that he had not yet received a response from the distributor. He noted that the store, contrary to its advertising claim that it had 1,000 to sell, told him it had only six.

Jenkins said he did not know how the distributor got hold of the rivets, but an Independent-Journal check of a similar sale last year found that they were taken by a bridge employee.

At least that was the explanation of a spokesman at Designs Unlimited at the time. He said he had a friend who worked on the bridge who gave the rivets to him.

The rivets are replaced by bolts as they rust. Most of them fall into the water, but a few are caught as they pop when their heads are chiseled off.

Cancer Donation

Member stations of the Marin Independent Service Station Association plan to donate two cents from every gallon of gasoline sold Sept. 4 to the Marin Branch of the American Cancer Society for its home care program.

Tentative Nod To Span Jump Barriers

Erection of suicide barriers on the Golden Gate Bridge won tentative support yesterday from district directors.

Under consideration off and on during the past 22 years, the proposal traditionally draws objections that it would block views, mar the bridge's beauty and cause new structural pressure on the span.

But strong recommendations for a barrier from experts in suicide prevention yesterday convinced the board to have the staff seek an engineering and architectural firm to submit proposals. The firm also is to estimate the cost of installing a barrier, both a small section for testing and a full-scale one.

Directors also approved recommendations by their special suicide prevention committee to increase to round-the-clock duty the roving patrol of bridge crews, buy a special television monitoring system and provide bridge crews with a suicide prevention training program.

According to the California Highway Patrol, 391 persons have been confirmed suicides from the bridge since the span opened in 1937.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring noted that bridge crews save 10 persons for each one who jumps.

The special television, to cost $28,000, works at night and in light fog. The existing cameras are ineffective at such times.

The Golden Gate District Directors Also:

BID — Received a low bid of $72,750 from Johnson and Higgins of San Francisco to provide comprehensive personal injury and property damage insurance for three years, up from a three-year premium of $7,100 under the expiring insurance. A spokesman for the firm said the former premium was "ridiculous" in light of the potential insurance risk from some 30 million vehicles crossing the bridge a year.

LIGHTS — Received a report from Dist. Engineer Robert E. Shields that new bridge lights are being tested that use one-third as much electricity but provide improved illumination.

PLAN — Received a report from Shields that the long-range transportation plan being drawn for the district by Kaiser Engineers will be ready on Oct. 22 instead of Oct. 1. He said there had been delays in forecasting patronage and because of additional work evaluating alternative transit plans.

FERRY — Received a report from Shields that plans will be prepared shortly to beautify the area around the downtown Sausalito ferry landing.

DEBRIS — Ratified payment of $3,000 to Marshal M. Mirza Inc. to clear debris from the North Sausalito parking lot for ferry commuters.

MEETINGS — Set a meeting of the joint transportation and finance-auditing committee at 10:30 a.m. Aug. 27 in toll plaza offices to review financing of the proposed joint ferry and bus system. The committee also will meet at 8 p.m. that day in San Francisco to get a progress report on Kaiser Engineering's long-range transit plan.

BUSES — Learned that the streets and transportation committee of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors will meet at 2 p.m. Aug. 27 in city hall to consider final approval of stops and routes for the district's commuter bus system.

HALEY — Adjourned in memory of Marin Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley, killed in last week's escape attempt at the Hall of Justice.

Abbernathy Again

ATLANTA (UPI)—The Southern Christian Leadership Conference re-elected the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy its president at its 13th annual convention's closing session Friday. It also attacked the FBI.

The Friday business session also passed 10 resolutions, one of them venting the civil rights organization's anger over a recent Time Magazine article which implied that its founder, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., had a "vigorous" extramarital sex life.

Another resolution called for complete withdrawal of all American troops from Vietnam by the end of the year.

Abernathy, who Thursday night called for SCLC to sponsor another nonviolent mass march on Washington to "put this country on trial," was re-elected along with all other incumbent officers.

Sets Marin Visit

McNears Beach Could Be Enlarged By Tract

One of two owners of property to the north of McNears has agreed to sell the land for expansion of the adjoining county park.

Pierre W. Joske, director of county parks and recreation, said the property, to the north of the park, comprises 31 acres, of which is underwater.

The county last month filed a condemnation suit against the two owners.

One, Ronald C. Titus of Sausalito, has agreed to sell his half interest for $80,000, Joske reported. Joske will ask the board of supervisors Tuesday to accept the settlement.

The other half interest is owned by Linday Bailey Graham, minor daughter of John D. Graham of Peacock Gap. Negotiations will continue while the suit is pending against this half interest, said Joske.

Purchase of the 31-acre Titus-Graham parcel would extend the 24-acre park and beach frontage to the China Camp property.

Words Of Hope From A Bed Of Pain

'Until That Time, I've Much To Give'

That Is The Gutsy Philosophy Of Stephan Binion, Sclerosis Patient

By GIL PEARSON

"Until that time, I've much to give;
"Until that time, I want to live."

This gripping couplet rounds out a poem which so lightened the heart of a hospital patient that his wife wrote the poet, Stephan Binion, that "your rhyme has done more for my stricken husband than all the medical attention he has received."

Seasoned writers can complete careers filled with successful publishings without ever achieving so magnificent a nod of esteem.

THE FACT THAT the tribute stemmed from Stephan Binion's very first literary effort to be published suggests that Marin County is not only home to a talent of considerable potential, but also to a courageous spirit. For Stephan Binion is a three-year, pain-wracked, bed-ridden victim of multiple sclerosis.

His determined record of having penned, within the year that he has practiced writing as an avocation, 38 other poems, 55 short stories, a novel, two one-act plays and a 168-page movie script must stand as inspiration for any other patients confronted by disheartenment.

It was Elizabeth St. Davids, bouncy, vivacious British-born viscountess, who set up our interview with Binion in his Tiburon bachelor digs at 5 Benton Court the other day. She served us tea in the grand English manner with all the appropriate flourishes.

"ELIZABETH OFTEN pops in with crumpets and cheery words," Stephan volunteered. "But we do fight like cats and dogs over writing — but on the highest plane, of course."

Elizabeth who lives next door with her husband, Gerald Schiffam, five barking dogs and a coiffured Angora cat, has written for the slicks in England and the United States and currently for confessions. Her well-known column, "Both Sides of Paradise," is must reading for subscribers to the Mill Valley Record.

Never in a lifetime of interviewing have we encountered such hilarious repartee as transpires between nimble-minded Elizabeth and rapier-witted Stephan. Both are intellectuals, each, a person unto his own. Never to back down. Nor to give an inch. To top one another to the very very end. Always seeking and finding thrusts to provoke amusement in each other and their listeners.

STEPHAN MIMICS magnificently throughout his endless array of stories. And you don't progress far into any given subject without sparking his interruption with jabbing fun-asides of side-splitting caliber.

His merry flashing dark eyes, gyrating eyebrows, and facial imitations grab you. You get hooked on the man. You begin to love this gutsy fellow so astonishingly capable of hoisting the spirits of friends around his bedside, while he lies there in constant pain.

"Until that time, I've much to give; Until that time, I want to live."

MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS is characterized by muscular weakness and tremor. It is defined as a persistent disease in which there is sclerosis in various parts of the nervous system. The medical use of the Greek "scleros" translates as many hardenings of body tissues or parts, as by excessive growth of fibrous connective tissues.

"It is of unknown origin," Binion says. "There is no known cure, treatment, or medication. Its effect varies.

"In my case the hurt is mainly from the pelvic cavity extending downwards, and, the use of my hands fails progressively. Some organs don't function. I've worn a catheter for years." You peruse his poems and you find:

"I DON'T DESPAIR the passing years. Nor tremble faced by truth. The bygone days will wrench no tears; I don't despair the passing years. I face each age sans misspent fears of lost or fading youth; I don't despair

the passing years, Nor tremble faced by truth."

Stephan Binion, of German parentage, was born 45 years ago in a doctor's office on Sullivan Street in Greenwich Village, New York. His formal schooling included courses at the universities of Maryland and Heidelberg.

The piano has been his prime interest from childhood. He served all over Europe for the U. S. Army as a cryptographic security officer, qualifying principally because of fluent German and an analytical mind.

NOTWITHSTANDING his extraordinarily long fingers (he needs but four to span the keyboard octave), his interest shifted from the playing of the piano to its mechanical functioning.

"I became fascinated with the instrument's design and construction," Binion recalls. "I brain picked experts in the art of fine manufacturing. I studied German texts on piano restoration techniques. And, I learned many of the principles of piano mechanics from the musically inclined during many hours of sipping wretched-coffee at sidewalk cafes in Frankfurt, Mannheim, Stuttgart, Heidelberg and elsewhere.

"I wound up as a partner in the J-B Co., 1570 California Street, San Francisco, with Leonard W. Jared.

"We take misused pianos and re-create great instruments by completely dismantling, rebuilding, re-stringing and refinishing. And, as well, we sell the prestigious Schiedmayer piano, made in Stuttgart, for which we hold the exclusive U.S. franchise.

"FOR 13 YEARS my long, strong fingers served me well in drawing taut thousands of fortified wire piano strings. After much struggle we were reaching the fruits for our labors when I began to feel numbness in my finger tips."

That was five years ago.

On his 40th birthday doctors correctly diagnosed Binion's problem as diabetes and cured him within six months. But numbness in hands, feet, and legs continued for another year at which time the diagnosis of multiple sclerosis was determined.

Today Stephan spends 18 hours a day in bed and six hours in a wheelchair. A year ago he propped an electric typewriter up on his bed tray and began writing with all the enthusiasm he had demonstrated during his piano revitalizing days.

"IN THE BEGINNING I tooled out 15 to 25 pages a day using the hunt-peck formula," he reports, "but now I'm down to two or three."

His alert eyes flash excitedly and he roars with laughter when recalling neighbor Elizabeth's teasing encouragement when she shouts, "You can't write worth a darn!" and, his bellowed reply, "I thank you from the heart of my bottom!"

Stephan Binion has not permitted his helpless state and gradually-increasing loss of finger dexterity to bring on any psychological brooding. He looks for the positive aspects of life, however limited they might be for him.

"You know a million jokes,"

"What Is This New Qiana Nylon?"

Qiana nylon is a new glamour fabric originated by Dupont. At present, in garments, the supply is very limited. The fabric has been alloted only to the top European and American designers and the garments will be marketed only in a selected number of stores. The cost of Qiana nylon garments is extremely high, though prices will come down as more of the fabric becomes available.

Qiana nylon, Dupont says, has qualities never before attained in synthetic fibers. These include drape, hand, feel, lustre and a better color clarity than silk. It resists wrinkling, has excellent crease and pleat retention. Its clear, brilliant colors are colorfast to sunlight and normal washing and drycleaning. It resists yellowing and water spotting.

Qiana nylon sounds like a most desirable fiber and fabric, if you can find it and afford it.

IT TAKES powerful hands and nimble fingers to draw taut wires such as these in the tuning area of a $4,000 to $5,000 Schiedmayer piano. Stephan Binion's hands could once do the job. But no longer. His J-B Co. of San Francisco holds an exclusive U.S. franchise for the Schiedmayer piano, which is made in Stuttgart.

Illness Hasn't Dampened The Binion Spirit

we observed following hysterics over three of them.

And he replied, "Oh yes, I do. And they come in handy because of my frequent hospital visits for treatments for periodic bladder difficulties resulting from permanent catheter wear. I find I can't get the nurses to do a thing for me until I come up with a daily funny."

AT HOME HIS wheelchair gets him about the living room to enjoy mounted photography and watercolors produced as hobbies during years when his hands were firm. And he loves his hi-fi and, as well, his own cheffing of such gourmet dishes as Boeuf en Daube, Cassoulet de Leicester, Gnow Yuke Fon, Kidney Creole, Lasagne Binion and Gateau Moka.

The man's eyes bathe in merriment when he funs up. "I was born a count, but presently I'm no account."

But then he adds soberly that his philosophy today is most closely expressed in that old classic, "I cried because I had no shoes until I saw a man who had no feet."

STEPHAN'S HOPES for the future include finding an agent for his writings, particularly for his Bill the Kid movie script for which he accomplished a prodigious quantity of research.

Also, he wants to see his brother Rudolph Binion win next year's Nobel Prize for literature with his tome, "Frau Lou," published by the Princeton University Press. Frau Lou was Nietzche's wayward disciple. The work was considered for the 1970 award.

"My bed is hard, the sheets are cold — It's not because I'm very old. The legs gave up, the hands soon too — My wheelchair does what feet could do. But I can speak and think and write: 'Til these leave me I'll be alright. Until that time, I've much to give; Until that time, I want to live."

A Con's View Of Prison Doc—

Both Hatred And Respect

By DR. LEO L. STANLEY

Why do men in prison so often endanger and lose their lives by partaking of filtered shellac, cleaning type fluid, denatured alcohol and other things they know to be poison?

Is it the recklessness that is inherent in their characters? Is it the monotony of their lives that causes them to seek any kind of excitement? The seemingly ceaseless clanging of steel on steel? The cramped cells in which they live? Or the awful guilts so many of them bear for their past actions?

I do not know the answer. But I do know that sometimes it is the most intelligent, the best educated, the seemingly most normal among the prison population who resort to this senseless practice.

A CASE IN point was Charley Mears, editor of the prison newspaper.

He deliberately drank a cleaning fluid which he and others had found discarded during a "party" in the print shop. Within three hours he was dead. Later yet another inmate died. And two others barely escaped death and became invalids as a result of their escapade.

Medical science has no antidote for this poison and all efforts to save Charley Mears' life were futile.

AND WITH HIS death, my thoughts turned back to an occasion a few weeks earlier when Charley, in his capacity as newspaper editor, had visited the hospital "to get a story." We had even permitted him to be present in the operating room while we performed surgery.

I had expected the usual feature about the hospital medical department. But instead he wrote a penetrating and personal piece about me — and the relationship of the prison doctor to the prison inmates.

It was illuminating to see myself as others saw me. Particularly as the convicts saw me.

HIS PIECE WENT like this:

"The Chief Croaker — that's what the prisoners call him, this steely-eyed man who watches over them.

IN SURGERY, Dr. Leo L. Stanley, long-time chief medical officer at San Quentin Prison, fought for the lives of men who often hated him because he had, on other less serious occasions, seen through their malingering and guile.

"And they adorn that phrase with many anathematized adjectives. They hate him. For his slender, supple body is like a whip — a whip wielded by an iron will. He is tireless, alert. And he lashes them — drives them until fury burns disease from their trembling bodies.

"And he fights for them, too.

"But they hate him. His tongue seems tipped with iodine. His eyes cut like steel knives, seemingly to gaze with contempt at groaning humanity. The weaklings wilt under the scorn of his smile, a smile that cuts through them, tosses them aside, like a clean north wind ripping the scum off a stagnant pond.

"FOR THAT IS what the weaklings are — scum.

"Yet the strong men hate him, too. They hate him because of the mockery that lies in his steady eyes. But the fierce men — the men without fear, the men who deal in death themselves — respect this man who is without fear himself. And they give him grudging admiration: 'Damn him, he's inhuman.'

"We heard many things about the prison Croaker. We wondered about him, and we watched. Then we went in to fence with him — and lost."

"That was a long time ago, in the days when our chains were fresh and galling. Time heals all scars, and laughter lightens all loads. We can laugh now — and whether we won or lost then, we win!"

"BUT IN THOSE days we shook our head in madness and snarled. Like a wolf we paced, looking for a hole. The Mill leered at us, and held like a leech. And we vowed to beat it — with guile.

"We developed a bad heart. We had fooled medicos before, and, truthfully, we were not in superb shape. Few prisoners can be. We determined to get worse. So we performed a few swift gymnastics under the shed and slid over to the 'pogey.'

" 'Bum pump, Doc!' The ice eyes drilled into us.

" 'Been running? What's the matter with you?' And there was scorching sarcasm in his tone. Indignantly we lied, and tried to look thin and pathetic. It did not do us a bit of good. Words flailed us from the room. And we left with curses on our lips.

"LATER WE TRIED to laugh, and still much later succeeded. Life is a game, win or lose. There can be no draw. We had lost — as we had lost before and in so many ways — so we went to the Mill and stayed.

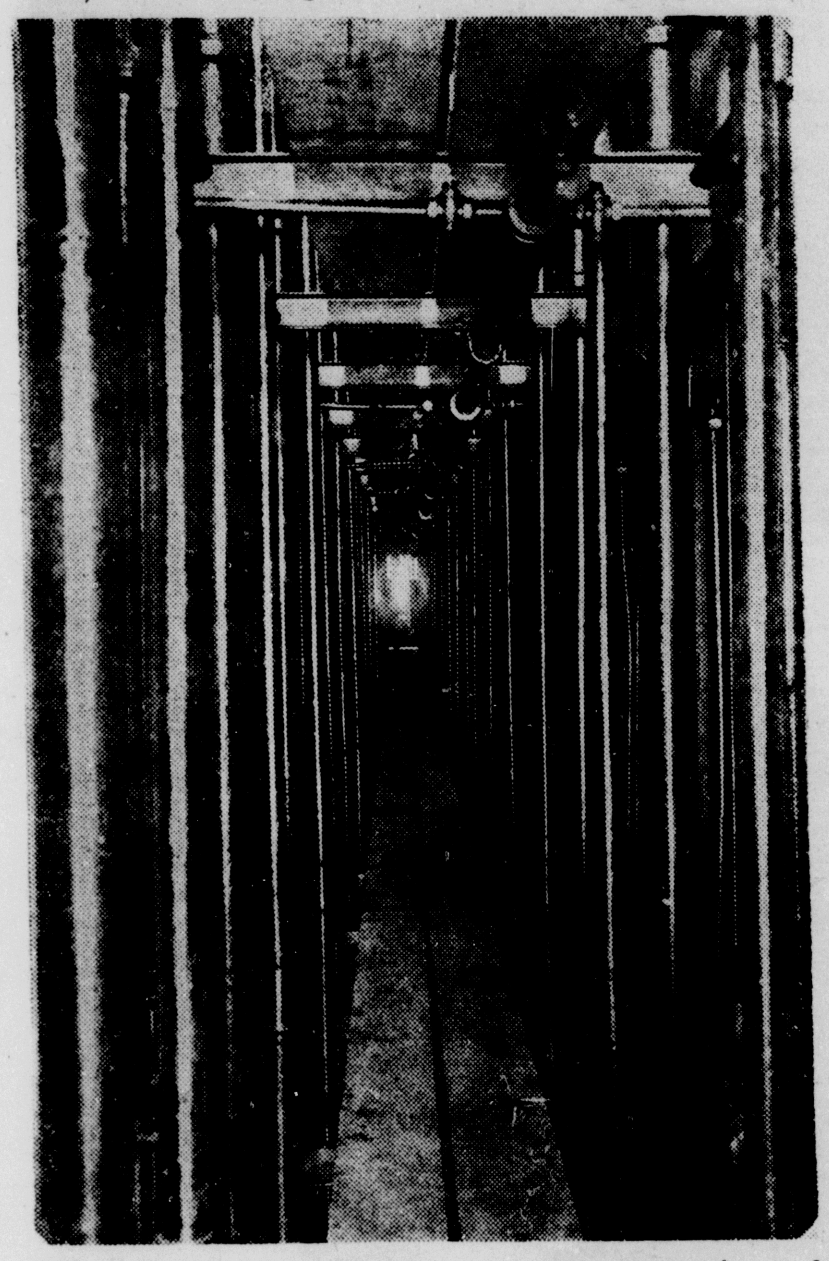
"For awhile we swore fearful oaths and vowed that never again would the Croaker get an opportunity to scourge us with his scorn, that never again would our path lead to the 'pogey' door, that nothing would ever make us sick."

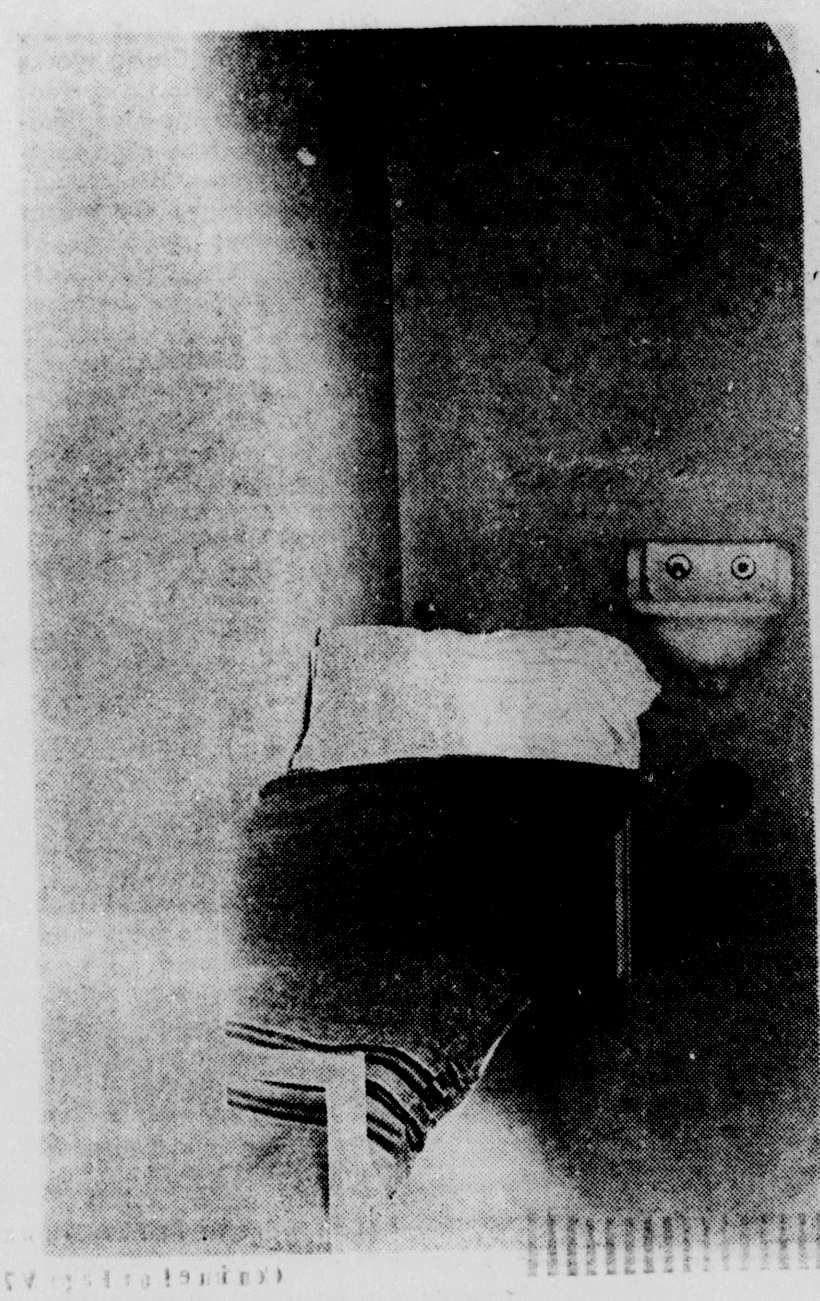
With Charley Mears worse than sick — now dead — I thought back to that story. It had been so perceptive in its look into the tightrope the prison doctor and other prison officials as well must walk in their relationships with the inmates.

PERHAPS IT HAD caused me to be a bit less steely-eyed, less scornful in my encounters with the prisoners who after all, to quote Charley Mears, were men who "had lost — and lost in so many ways," but were still men. Still, I knew, one had to continue to show the strength these men understood and respected. Charley, most certainly, had made me see myself as others saw me.

And I wondered how any man with that kind of understanding and intelligence could have been so foolish as to have drunk a poison that he most certainly knew would prove fatal.

Man is an unpredictable creature. In the unnatural environment of the prison he is all the more so.





WAS IT the seemingly ceaseless and monotonous clang of cold steel on steel, above, or the cramped quarters of their dreary cells, below, that caused convicts to take foolish risks and drink poisonous substances? Or was it the innate reckless in their character? Or the burdens of guilt they carried?

Why wait?

Painter Debo Has His Own Ideas On Art

He Seeks To Capture The Essence Of Man

He's an artist of international reputation who has sold every canvas he has ever painted.

Yet, although he lives right here in Marin County, it is unlikely that you will recognize the name of Denny Clark.

But "Debo" brings a different reaction, for that is the way he signs his work.

AND PAINTINGS by Debo now hang in some of the world's most prestigious museums and private collections. Celebrities around the world regard their Debo acquisitions as among their proudest fine art possessions.

The celebrated automobile racing driver Stirling Moss, flying from New York back to his native England, made a detour by plane all the way to the San Francisco Bay Area so that he could purchase some Debo paintings from the Preston Gallery of Art in Sausalito's Village Fair.

Singer Lainie Kazan, shopping and strolling in downtown Sausalito, spotted some of Debo's work in a window and was fascinated.

That painting was reproduced to decorate the back of Miss Kazan's current hit recording "The Love Album."

And later this year when Miss Kazan will star in a television special, one segment will have her singing against a background of slides of Debo's work.

The interest in art of Denny Clark, or Debo, dates back into his childhood in the Midwest. "I started drawing birds and animals when I was 6."

BUT SOMEWHERE in his high school years, he lost his enthusiasb for art and decided upon a medical career. "For years I never picked up a drawing pencil."

Then he left school and married.

"My wife, Bonnie, and I got ourselves a pickup truck and started driving south," he relates. "And one day, there in the South, we chanced to see some artists at work. That night I drew my first picture in years. Until then, Bonnie didn't even know I had ever been interested in art."

But this time the interest was back to stay. He and Bonnie headed for California and Marin County, the haven of so many artists, and settled in Mill Valley where he began painting seriously.

DEBO—"The name is a combination of Denny and Bonnie" — has definite ideas of his own about art.

"I've developed my own approaches," he says. "I try not

MILL VALLEY artist Debo, born Denny Clark, works intently upon a current portrait, the massive likeness of the face of a middle-aged man. His canvas is six-foot high. The Marin painter does paintings of all sizes, but prefers portraits that enlarge the face, sometimes many times. "It gives the viewer a much closer feeling for the subject," he explains. "I try to paint the essence of the man, and I attempt to tell something about him in my work. I like to think that my paintings will have as much meaning for someone looking at them one thousand years from now as they do for someone who sees them today." Although he has been painting seriously only a relatively short time, Debo has enjoyed immense commercial success, and his works hang in some of the outstanding museums and private collections. Every canvas he has ever painted has sold. But he has also won the acclaim of some of the most demanding of the fine art critics. His "canvases transcend reality," said one.

ALWAYS FASCINATED by the human face, portrait artist Debo, in his Mill Valley home, is captivated by the expressions and gestures of his 6-months-old daughter Lisa, the youngest of his three children. It is the kind of quiet moment that he treasures in a generally busy life.

There's A Big Demand For Debo

Mill Valley Artist Has Sold Every Painting He Has Ever Completed

ENJOYING THE fresh air of Mill Valley and the fence and tree-climbing antics of their son Ronnie, Debo, or Denny Clark, and his wife Bonnie enjoy a few minutes of relaxation. Debo's days of late have been especially busy, not only with his painting, but with his preparations for the opening of his new Sausalito art gallery as well.

to use too much color so that I will not detract from the essence of man."

"And in most art schools they will tell you to keep portraits intimate, about three-fourths of life-size, or else the face will appear somewhat grotesque. I go about it just the opposite. I like to enlarge the face, sometimes to three times life-size. It gives the viewer a much closer feeling for the subject."

DEBO IS unorthodox, too, in that he prefers to paint at night "when I can control the lighting."

And he develops many of his own painting materials such as the making of his varnish.

Even in the display of paintings, Debo has original ideas. He recently staged an exhibition in Sausalito that he called "Orogency" for which viewers sat in a dark room and were shown slowly, one at a time, Debo paintings, never more than six in any one sitting.

"In a museum, paintings are all over, and there is really no atmosphere created by the artist," he says. "With Orogency, I tried to give my paintings some added creative dimensions."

ALONG WITH controlling the lights, Debo was also able to coordinate the sound. He had worked for six months recording a wide variety of sounds ranging from crashing waves to human heartbeats that were played in conjunction with the showing.

"For the heartbeat, we used a stethoscope and a microphone, and as our subject, a girl clad in fur — that was to cut down the sound. And we taped her heartbeat for more than an hour."

"IT WAS A tremendous viewing experience," says Debo.

Debo and another Marin artist, John Steenberger, will be opening their own art gallery, the Fifth Level, in Sausalito this month.

"We won't go quite as far as with Orogency," Debo says, "but our gallery will show that it has been designed by artists.

"All paintings will have their own particular display. We'll control the lighting for each painting with dimmers. There will be two main display walls with thick carpeting, fitted exactly wall to wall, so as to absorb all the extra light."

THE NEW gallery will also feature background sound selected especially to compliment the type of work being shown. And there will be an attempt to "bring the outdoors inside" through such ideas as an interior post covered with vines.

Debo says the name Fifth Level was selected "because art viewing is accomplished on several levels. That is what it is all about."

Even the headhunter in the jungles of New Guinea can view a painting and react on at least one level, he says. Each person must find his own level of enjoyment to a canvas and react accordingly.

"BUT EVERYONE can relate to my paintings," Debo claims. "It is not a matter of age, background, financial position, etc. Viewers, for instance, can look at a painting of an old man and know what he is feeling. Indeed, they can feel as he does."

Debo and Bonnie still reside in Mill Valley with their three children, Kevin, 11, Ronnie, 10, and Lisa, 6 months.

The home is often filled with visiting artists who come from throughout the Bay Area and other points to meet and exchange ideas with the young Marin artist who has achieved a reputation for original thinking as well as successful painting.

ONE ART connoisseur writing of Debo's work recently said:

"The paintings are the reflections of the emotions of humanity transcribed with the touch of brilliance and an injection of compassion. His strong, penetrating style transcends reality. His subjects speak from the worlds of despair, alienation, loneliness and loveliness."

And that, believes Debo, is what painting is all about — or should be.

HUMAN HANDS when painted by Debo can be just as expressive as the human face. The immense amount of work and thought that has gone into this painting of a black hand and a white hand, clasped and clinging to each other, is immediately apparent, as is the symbolic meaning of the painting.

IN A BAY AREA art gallery, Debo and wife Bonnie examine critically some of his finished work. The artist is as exacting in his feeling for the display of canvases as he is in the execution of the work and plans a number of innovations in that regard at the new Fifth Level he and partner John Steenberger are opening this month in Sausalito.

THE INTIMACY with which Debo portrays the human face and his preoccupation with light and its control are reflected in these completed canvases on display in a gallery.

DEBO PAINTS the faces of people of all ages, but the elderly with their lines left by life's experiences are a special interest. Again we see Debo's distinctive use of light and dark that marks all of his work as distinctively his.

THE "IRON FORT" of Portobelo once protected Spain's South American treasure stores of gold, awaiting shipment across the Atlantic, against such threats as the daring English buccaneers Sir Francis Drake and Henry Morgan. But eventually the fortress was captured by the British and fell into decline. Its guns lay silent and rusting. Now Portobelo is being restored as a historic site by the government of Panama with Organization of American States assistance. It is located but 18 miles from Colon and only an hour and a half drive from Panama City. (Panama Government Tourist Bureau photo)

Panama Restores Its Historic Portobelo

By J. J. LAMB

It is quiet in Panama's Portobelo . . . restless quiet that stirs the imagination to recreate an adventurous and exciting past.

Lazy bay waters lap against the foundations of long-abandoned fortifications and the silent jungle persists in a never-ending battle to reclaim a portion of its domain usurped by man.

IT WAS ANOTHER 95 years, though, before Portobelo became a town and grew to become the most important port of the Caribbean.

Previously, Nombre de Dios was the Atlantic outlet for shipments of gold brought from Peru and across the isthmus via the Chagres River and Las Cruces Trail. But repeated pirate attacks, the last by Sir Francis Drake in 1595, caused the Spanish to move to the natural protection afforded by the Bay of Portobelo.

Five forts were built to protect the city and royal treasure house — San Cristobal, San Fernando, Santiago de la Gloria, San Jeronimo and San Felipe. Today, the once proud guns lie ineffective on the ground at their gun ports, their wooden mounts long having succumbed to the tropical climate.

DRAKE PURSUED the Spanish to Portobelo, but fell ill in 1596 before he could attack and died beneath the shadows of the steep hills protecting the narrow mouth of the bay. Some say Drake was buried at sea, but others believe he was buried on a small island off the entrance to the Bay of Portobelo.

Regardless of its natural protection and fortifications, Portobelo suffered six invasions by buccaneers and the English navy.

In 1668, Henry Morgan captured the city during its annual 60-day fair, the largest and liveliest commercial event of the era. San Jeronimo, the last fort to stand against Morgan, was finally taken after the pirate forced nuns and priests to carry scaling ladders to the walls. Morgan held the city for a fortnight, eventually collecting an estimated quarter million pieces of eight in ransom and booty.

BUT IT WAS an attack by the English admiral Edward Vernon in 1739 that ended Portobelo's reign as queen of the New World ports.

After several hours of fighting, Vernon's guns silenced the batteries of Portobelo and the city suddendered. The forts were dismantled and the bronze cannons sent to England.

Portobelo's fortifications were rebuilt and re-armed, but the Spanish began using other ports and sailing around Cape Horn to safeguard their gold shipments from South America. Eventually, traffic through the port ceased and the great fair was held no more.

A CENTURY LATER, when the discovery of gold in California revived inter-ocean travel across the isthmus, there was some hope that Portobelo would again become an active, bustling port. Unfortunately, Colon was built as the Atlantic terminus for the Panama Railroad and Portobelo was relegated to little more than a name in the history books, except to the few isolated families that continued to make it their home.

A new road now connects Portobelo with Colon, and the government, with technical assistace from the Organization of American States, is restoring the 16th Century coastal fort city. Plans also call for the development of nearby beaches to turn the area into a major resort complex.

But during the interim, Portobelo is easily reachable via a pleasant hour and a half drive from Panama City. The ramparts are clear of jungle growth, the cannons lie aligned in their ports, and the small, almost decorative watchtowers provide the visitor with a historic view of the bay waters.

THE WALLS OF the huge stone treasure house still stand, and a few blocks away is a walled slave compound, now used as a cemetery. At the center of town is the old Spanish chuch, even larger than the treasure house.

The church houses an effigy of a Black Christ, which, according to legend, came to Portobelo on its way to Cartagena. Supposedly each time the ship attempted to continue its journey, a storm developed. Only when the statue was taken ashore did the skies clear.

Since then, the Black Christ Festival is held every year on Oct. 21. On that day a procession of 50 men escort the Black Christ through the small town, taking four hours at a rhythmic pace of three steps forward and two backwards.

HISTORIC OLD railroad stock such as mighty steam locomotives fascinate visitors, young and old, to Solano County's California Railway Museum.

Museum In Solano Offers Bonanza For Rail Buffs

Over in Solano County there is a place called the California Railway Museum that very few people know about, says the California State Automobile Association.

For the railroad buff it is a bonanza — a collection of interesting railroad cars and equipment gathered together along the Sacramento Northern's former interurban mainline halfway between Rio Vista and Fairfield.

There are old streetcars complete with cow-catchers that ran along San Francisco streets in 1895, interurban coaches that were in service on such lines as the Salt Lake and Utah Railroad and Western Pacific, a solarium lounge car that was in service between Oakland and Chicago.

MANY VISITORS will experience a twinge of nostalgia when they see some of the Key System trains that ran in the East Bay and across the Bay Bridge in the 1930s and '40s.

There is old No. 317, a Californit type streetcar that is one of San Francisco's original streetcars. It was built in 1895 and is designed much like a cable car.

One of the huge locomotives on display is No. 334, a steam freight locomotive built in 1929. It was one of a number of heavy Mikado-type freight locomotives for service on Western Pacific Railroad's main line between Oakland and Salt Lake City.

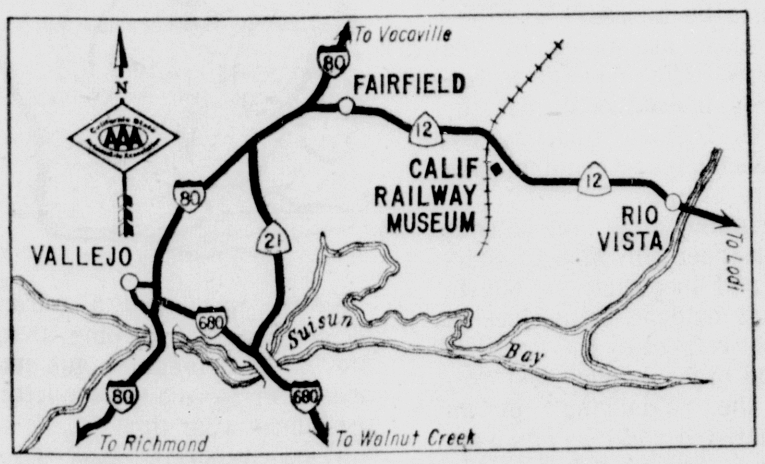
THE CALIFORNIA Railway Museum is the labor of love of a group of railroad enthusiasts who organized in 1945 and began gathering the old railroad cars. In 1946 they formed the Bay Area Electric Railroad Association. In the years that followed their collection of equipment grew and a place to store it and restore it was needed.

In 1960 some of the members of the association found the 22-acre site at Rio Vista Junction and knew it was an ideal site for the railway museum. The land was purchased and the job began of moving their precious railroad cars and equipment to the site. Some were brought by railroad flatcar or truck and some were brought in on their own wheels.

IN JANUARY, 1966, the Railway Museum achieved the actual operation of a trolley car under its own power at the museum. Limited operation for the public continues on a short track.

The museum charges no admission but gratefully accepts contributions to help defray its considerable expenses in operating the museum and restoring the precious old railroad cars. It is open on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, and rides on the various cars are available.

School groups and other groups can arrange to visit the museum during the week by contacting Mrs. Myron S. Pierce Jr., Star Route, Box 152, Suisun, Calif., 94585.



A MAP from the California State Automobile Association shows the location of the California Railway Museum between Fairfield and Rio Vista in Solano County.

London Is Collector's Paradise With Its Museums And Societies

Just Browse Through The Phone Book To Find Those Who Share Your Hobby

Just name it and somebody in London has collected it.

Any tourist can have a wonderful time tracking down the speciality that attracts him. And you don't have to buy.

It is one of the city's great free attractions that collectors, or people who just happen to be interested, can see some of the greatest collections of almost anything in the world. For free — or, in some cases, for a few shillings.

Stamps and coins and medals are easy. The British Museum has some of the world's best, if not the best.

FOR THOSE who want to go shopping there is the famous firm of Spink of St. James's, coin and medal specialists; and for stamps, the world's largest dealers, Stanley Gibbons, in the Strand (just across the road from the Savoy Hotel).

Some find it more fun to shop around the smaller dealers — like the Coin and Stamp Market in St. Martin's Lane. For the adventurous coin collectors British Overseas Airways Corp. travel experts recommend the famous outdoor Cutler Street Market in the East End on Sunday mornings. The people picking over coins are just as interesting as the wares.

The full range of things to shop for, or see for free, runs from Adam chandeliers, through stuffed animals, armor, daggers, decanter labels, model ships, wine labels, woodcuts, and back down the alphabet. From valentines, posters and playbills, to cigarette cards.

IT IS WORTH remembering that there are also societies devoted to the collection and preservation of almost everything from old windmills, trains, ships, organs, pianos, railway relics, steam engines and dozens of other vanishing items.

A good browse through the telephone book under the name of your special interest (sometimes preceded by the word "British") will help you get in touch with the secretaries of these groups. They are usually delighted to talk about their interests, and perhaps you will be invited to one of their meetings or discussions.

If at first you don't succeed in finding what you want in the phone book don't despair. Try another alphabetic heading.

YOU WILL TURN up such delights as the Historic Organs Preservation Society (they hold meetings); the Association of Railway Preservation Societies (they will tell you about all the others); Society for Theater Research; the Oriental Ceramic Society; the College of Arms (heraldry, coats of arms, and the like); the Arms and Armour Society, and the International Society of Military Collectors.

But to see incredible collections of almost anything under one roof the British Museum is the quick answer. If the subject belongs in nature and the outdoors it will be in the Natural History Museum, or the Geological Museum.

There is also the Victoria and Albert Museum, and the London Museum, in Kensington Palace.

All free — you just need stamina. And bus or subway will get you to them all.

A Black Novelist Reflects On King

By DON KEOWN

THE KING GOD DIDN'T SAVE by John A. Williams; Coward-McCann, 221 pages, $5.95.

Man seems unable to resist the urge to deface clean walls with his idiotic graffito, to shatter quiet with his needless noises or to dirty green landscapes with his ugly wastes.

Similarly, there exists a seemingly irresistible impulse to cut down our historic greats, after death, by impugning their motives and exposing their human weaknesses.

It's called "showing the warts" and generally much praised by literary critics, even though it involves the judgment of large men by much smaller ones.

John A. Williams, the black novelist, seems to have come precariously close to this kind of destruction in his "Reflections on the Life and Death of Martin Luther King Jr." that he has entitled "The King God Didn't Save."

To this reader Williams' well-written book bears the blemishes of nitpicking criticisms of King — the kind of sly digs one might expect from a talented man jealous of the greater stature of another he suspects to have been less gifted.

Williams, clearly, is sensitive to such suspicions. "I didn't sit down to do this book to reveal anything or to gossip," he claims. "Some will think so, and that is too bad, for my intent was very far removed from those purposes."

In his broader thesis — that Martin Luther King Jr. was largely a creation, and a victim, of white society — Williams appears on safer, less personal ground. White society, claims Williams, used King as long as he was useful to it in staving off a more threatening black militancy. But, Williams continues, when King himself began to become impatient and to harbor doubts about the feasibility of non-violence, white society turned upon him and eliminated him.

"King's life," argues Williams, "just can't be seen in any other way, and I wanted to do a book on him because his life and death were irrefutable proofs that no matter how high a black man may appear to rise above his prefixed station, he is still a nigger and shall be cut down when his usefulness is judged to be at an end.

"It is extremely important for black people to understand that. It is also important to realize that we as a people, as much as Martin King the man, were the target of James Earl Ray's hired bullet."

The headline-making aspects of "The King God Didn't Save" lie in Williams' unsubstantiated assertion that Ray was, indeed, hired by conspirators to assassinate King (although authorities hold otherwise), and in his contention that King in his last years was the victim of political blackmail utilizing "barnyard gossip" obtained through electronic devices.

Williams throws no new light upon the old controversy over whether Robert F. Kennedy or J. Edgar Hoover initiated the FBI wiretaps of King's telephones. Hoover, he says, hated King. But he also intimates that the Kennedys were more interested in using King politically than they were in boosting his movement. Indeed, and understandably, Williams is not a trusting man, but regards one and all with considerable cynicism.

Williams' version is that King finally decided to call the bluff of his blackmailers and did so by his involvement in the anti-Vietnam War movement. When he thus served notice he would not permit a cause to be jeopardized for his personal welfare, Williams reasons that Martin Luther King signed his own death warrant. This disagrees with the Time magazine version that has King yielding before Hoover.

With the murder of King — "the newest display of white cowardice" —, the black people of America came to a turning in their long, hard road, Williams continues. "His failures to achieve moral gains made others see that gains could only be political." Non-violence fell into disrepute in favor of a greater militancy, for "centuries of black patience and faith" had brought about only the slaying of that philosophy's best-known contemporary spokesman. Blacks gave up on the orderly democratic processes and the nation tottered on the brink of the abyss of revolution.

Williams can be pretty acidic in his own observations as when he says: "The American labor unions today, belying their radical liberalism of the '20s and '30s, are one of the most powerful hotbeds of bigotry in existence. Perhaps they always were."

And: "The state of Mississippi resumed its main business — the oppression of black people. I suppose that when you are the poorest state in the nation, you have to do something to feel important."

With all his basic disagreement with King's tactics and his barbs at and repeating of small libels against the Nobel Prize winner, Williams also accords him overall respect and some measure of credit for his accomplishments.

Thus on Page 145 he says that King in struggling for religious support of civil rights "tilted with windmills and he had to lose; there was just too much white power for him to contend with." But on Page 146 he comments: "Still, out of the chaos of the American church, crumbling down around him in its total failure to be moved, there were signs that King, nevertheless, had planted seeds that would be tended by others (James Forman, for instance)."

Of course, those seeds could not have sprouted if King's tilling had been a total failure.

Williams is no doubt correct when he describes King as naive. He is right, too, when he says King was more attuned to the black middle class than to the ghetto, to the middle-aged than to the young, although, between ages if not classes, he bridged the gap better than most.

But when he seemingly endorses the opinion of Joanne Grant that Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth "was more honest, more intelligent, more courageous, a better organizer, a better grassroots leader than King was," his anti-King pique shows through. No one, of course, was more courageous than the fearless King. And it is doubtful if anyone was more honest.

And what King had to a remarkable degree that many of his colleagues lacked was vision, an idealism and the ability to inspire.

As Williams himself states: "Surely, Martin King, for all his weaknesses, was killed because behind those weaknesses lay profound strengths."

And this comment: "It seems to me that we already have a memorial, living and vigorous, to Martin King . . . a presence in the hearts of those who can no longer, must no longer dream of overcoming on the simple base of morality."

But how tragic have been the consequences of America's refusal to embrace the simple formula advanced by Martin Luther King that our social injustices be swept away by cleansing brooms built from the straws of Christian ethics.

THE IMPACT of Martin Luther King Jr., left, upon American society, before and after his death, is assessed by John A. Williams, black novelist, in his "The King God Didn't Save."

"THROUGH THE Seasons With a Camera" (Doubleday, $3.95) by Paul Villiard is not a portfolio of scenic photographs for armchair enjoyment as the title might lead some to suspect. Rather it is down-to-earth instruction from an expert on camera techniques with emphasis upon nature photography that captures the sense of the season along with its more tangible subjects.

The book is for the not-too-expert and includes a generous black-and-white display of Villiard's own splendid photographs.

The text — on how to picture storms and storm clouds, on recording vacation experiences, on delineating foliage, on photographing snow flakes, on recording insects, animals and flowers, etc. — is detailed as to choice of equipment and film, its use, the framing of the subject, the angle of the picture-taking, the use of filters, etc.

And there is extensive, learned discussion of the various cameras, film and accessories suited to this kind of work.

It seems a most practical asset for the person who wants to add the satisfaction of superior camera work to the enjoyment of his outdoor outings.

"BOB DYLAN" is the 95-cent paperback edition from Pocket Books of the hardcover book published earlier by Citadel Press containing Daniel Kramer's impressions of the composer-performer, and more importantly, Kramer's excellent, candid photographs of Dylan and his expressive face while he was doing his many things. Dylan fans who missed the original will seize the opportunity to acquire the next-best thing at a bargain price.

Here is an absolutely hilarious crime and comedy novel that is not to be missed.

The cast assembled by the author of "May You Die in Ireland" is international, but the place is Ireland. And, indeed, such shenanigans could happen nowhere else.

A criminal crew that outdoes the Lavender Hill Mob in character and ineptitude — but in turn are outdone themselves in that last respect by the forces of law and order — plots and executes the "kidnaping" of an Irish national and religious treasure. Around this unlikely heist revolves one of the merriest and most mixed-up plots to be conceived by a mystery writer in many years.

Kenyon performs a miracle of consistency, keeping things moving at a machine gun pace and never for a moment letting the humor wear thin.

Again: Read this one if you read no other crime novel this year. The missing of it would in itself be a crime against oneself.

Three Interesting Subjects—

THOSE FABULOUS GREEKS by Doris Lilly; Cowles, 372 pages, $9.95. Reviewed by Gordon Parr.

If you are not the best writer in the world, choose an interesting subject. In this case, Doris Lilly, one of journalism's lightweights, has chosen three interesting subjects: Aristotle Onassis, Stavros Livanos and Stavros Niarchos.

In her own inimitable style Doris gushes on and on, but in the process manages to relate much of interest about these two Greeks and one Argentinian. Yes, it seems that Onassis applied for and was granted Argentine citizenship during the days when he was an expatriate from his native Turkey. He was, however, given Greek citizenship by a blanket law which conferred this status on all Anatolian Greeks from Turkey. Still with me?

Miss Lilly seems to rely heavily on her own personal experiences and knowledge of Onassis and is at her best in writing of him. The other two multi-millionaires are covered from a variety of sources including previously published books, although since the lives of the three giants of the Greek shipping industry are interwoven, a study of the life of Onassis reveals much about the other two. One such example is the fact that Niarchos and Onassis each married a daughter of Livanos and but for the formidable personalities of each of the triumvirate might have formed a monopoly on the world shipping industry.

It's all there — the continuing saga of La Callas, the new tales of Jackie, along with the Congressional investigation. It's even timely.

A recent Wall Street Journal article spelled out the unhappy (for oil companies and motorists) news that shipping rates are at an all-time high because of the wave of Arab nationalism that limits oil production and changes shipping routes.

DORIS LILLY is the author of "Those Fabulous Greeks," the story of shipping multi-millionaires Aristotle Onassis, Stavros Livanos and Stavros Niarchos.

The Professor Pierces The Pipe Smoke

Harry Kemelman, a long-time professor now with Massachusetts State College at Boston, is a disarming critic of the American education system.

He is disarming because he is a part of that system, yet he sees it not through the scented smokescreen of a carefully puffed professorial pipe but through the clear eyes of an undeceived parent, who knows the inside that most parents don't know. He is disarming because he leads the reader through the maze so carefully erected by the university establishment, then brings its paper walls tumbling down — not with sweeping blasts, but with gentle jabs.

The thesis of "Common Sense in Education" is found in a chapter called "The Conspiracy" in an imaginary conversation between a college dean and a graduating senior who plans to go on for a higher degree.

"Dean: . . . Now listen carefully: It's all for us — the whole setup, the whole system — it's for us.

"Claude: I don't get it. What's all for us?

"Dean (impatiently): The whole college system. It's for us, for the faculty, not for the students . . ."

That, holds Kemelman, is at the heart of what is wrong with American education. The colleges and universities are set up, not to instruct the students, but to give the faculty opportunities for research (much of it useless and time-wasting), and to build them into "experts" who will be called on by government and industry.

The educators have built the college degree into a necessity for most worthwhile jobs. But what they offer the students at the undergraduate level has less and less to do with what they will need to know on those jobs. And so the students, misled into believing they will study under noted scholars only to find themselves herded from irrelevant class to irrelevant class by teaching assistants, rise in revolt.

They have striven hard, these students, to make the necessary grades to get into college — for the system has turned the elementary and high schools into vast competitions for grades and test scores. Their parents pay heavily to send them to college. And then they don't get their money's worth.

So they revolt. And the faculty and administration yield all sorts of things to them, abjectly, cravenly — but never anything that will disturb the system that keeps the college existing for the faculty.

Kemelman has some solutions. They require revamping the whole setup, and he is quite realistic in doubting whether that can come to pass. But he has suggestions that might at least start the education establishment looking at itself without that cloud of professorial pipe smoke.

Our Judicial System As It Is Seen From Death Row

There are scores of crime and trial stories written by lawyers, judges and law enforcement officials, wrought from their backgrounds and viewpoints.

This work brings a fresh perspective into an overworked field, for it was written by a man who has had experience on what is referred to as "the other side of the law," a man, convicted of murder, who has spent 13 years on Death Row in New Jersey State Prison.

In his story of the murder of a young girl in New Jersey and the subsequent trial, Smith displays an insight into the lives of those involved in crime that no lawyer, writer or probation officer has.

More surprising, he shows a grasp of what makes those involved in law enforcement and politics tick, but his viewpoint of their maneuvers is jaundiced.

Naturally his viewpoint of justice differs from that expressed in law journals, political speeches and newspaper editorials.

He rips into hypocrisy, sham and duplicity, but the story is fast-moving, gripping and powerful enough to stand on its own.

EDGAR SMITH
An insight into crime

The scope is wide, ranging into Mafia activities, smalltown life, sex parties and state politics, and makes for lively reading.

Smith understandably might have overstated his case against the judicial system, but there is a germ of truth that should give everyone pause to think.

A reader might even have a reasonable doubt about the system after reading this first novel.

In his first book of fiction, Jess Stearn keeps things moving along fast enough so that the reader is not overly troubled by the exaggerated characters and improbable incidents.

Stearn, author of 10 books of non-fiction, shows he can be entertaining with fiction. But "The Reporter" leads one to hope that Stearn has gotten the fiction urge out of his system.

A Skill To Learn And Hope You Never Have To Use It

NEW WAYS OF SELF DEFENSE by E.G. Bartlett; Hart, 125 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

It is one of the signs of an unfortunate aspect of our times, its violence, that a number of manuals on self-defense have been published of late, just as schools in karate, ju-jitsu, etc., have flourished.

This seems to be one of the best of the books, its author having combined the Oriental defenses and attacks with the rudiments of Western boxing and wrestling to devise a simple defense program that is practical for the woman or man with no special physical strength or ability.

The emphasis is always upon defense against an attacker, and the old Oriental approach of using your opponent's movements and momentum against him is ulilized extensively.

The text and the accompanying drawings are clear and easily comprehended.

"I have selected those movements that are most suitable for practice at home by ordinary people — persons who are not athletes nor gymnasts nor experts at any of the systems," writes Bartlett. "There are no falls to learn as in Judo or Aikido, so no mat nor any other equipment is required. All you need is a partner."

Needless to say, some moderation has to be used in the practicing.

If you feel the need for this kind of skill and your time to acquire it is limited, then this book is a good first step. Read it, practice it — and hope you never have to use it. If you do, hope, as well, that your opponent hasn't read it, too.

NEW COOKBOOKS FOR HOME CHEFS

By MAXINE KEOWN

Is there a cuisine more exotic to the westerner than that of the South Seas and Southeast Asia?

Well, possibly that of the Caribbean might qualify.

And you can enjoy them both in the pages of two new volumes in the dazzling Foods of the World series by Time-Life Books.

"Pacific and Southeast Asian Cooking" is the work of David Steinberg, a veteran correspondent and traveler in that area, while "The Cooking of the Caribbean Islands" was authored by Linda Wolfe who has written for Gourmet magazine and who wrote "The Literary Gourmet" in the early 1960s.

Both do a splendid job of describing not just the fare but also the foodstuffs and culinary traditions of their colorful regions. We would, however, have to give the nod to Mrs. Wolfe for a particularly outstanding job that makes the Caribbean book perhaps a bit the more impressive of the two.

The two sections of the globe have a great deal in common — a marvelous selection of tropical fruits; a bountiful supply of seafood; spicy condiments; a tradition of outdoor cookery, and the merging with their native delicacies of the ethnic dishes of many lands brought by immigrants.

In the Pacific book the recipes range from the toasted spiced coconut of Indonesia to oxtail stew of the Philippines, from the sweet and sour fish of Vietnam to the lemony shrimp soup of Thailand, from the shrimp and zucchini curry of Malaysia to the skewered chicken livers of Hawaii, from the fish fillets with macadamia nuts of Australia to a baked papaya dessert of Tahiti.

In the Caribbean book, the temptations to the palate are equally varied, from the Dominican Republic's fried yam cakes to Jamaica's baked papaya with meat filling, from Antigua's flambeed baked bananas to Jamaica's mango chutney, from the marinated fish of Martinique to the lobster salad of Barbados, from Trinidad ginger beer to Puerto Rican baby goat fricassee, and from crab stew in Haiti to fish chowder in the Virgin Islands.

Both books are strikingly illustrated, the pictures alone guaranteed to start the taste buds tingling. Both also include separate, handy spiral-bound booklets in which the recipes are repeated for kitchen use. And the $7.95 per book price remains one of publishing's big bargains.

Some other new books of interest to cooks:

"The Compleat Chicken Cookbook" (Simon and Schuster, $3.95) has strong local appeal in that its author, Anne M. (Mrs. James) Fletcher, is a San Rafael resident. But it has much more than that to recommend it. That all-American favorite, chicken, is presented in a diversity of ways — fried, stewed, roasted, stuffed, broiled, devilled, fricasseed, grilled, baked, braised, in soups, in sandwiches, in salads, in casseroles, in souffles, Spanish-style, German-style, English-style, Central American-style, Chinese-style, Italian-style, and what have you. With Mrs. Fletcher's imaginative guidance, you can turn an old reliable into a glamour dish and restore chicken to its former place of prominence as the thing to serve upon the special festive or guest occasion. Mrs. Fletcher has also included in her excellent book instruction on buying and preparing the bird.

"Let's Ask the Cook" (Cowles, $6.95) is by the syndi- $6.95) is by the syndicated food cated food columnist Nan Wiley and is especially noteworthy for its abundance of helpful tips scattered among the decipes. Indeed, the emphasis is upon how to cook rather than what to cook. For instance: "French fries, beets, and cabbage wedges are all improved with caraway seed." And: "Slice tomatoes for a tossed salad vertically instead of horizontically; somehow they retain their juices better." rMs. Wiley does, however, include a good many of her favorite recipes, and they are varied and appealing.

"How to Buy Food" (Cornerstone Library, $1) is not a cookbook at all, but a manual for the supermarket shopper. Valeria Moolman compiled the material under U.S. Department of Agriculture guidance. There's instruction on how to select your meats, produce, dairy goods, etc., plus tips on how to stretch your dollars. This paperback should be especially helpful to the newlywed inexperienced in food buying, but it includes material useful to all of us.

The Tyrant's Climb To Power

For those who like to take their history painlessly, Mervyn Jones has written an intriguing novel based on the life of Joseph Stalin. The story is very close to the truth, although Jones has taken the novelist's prerogative to add a character here, and to speculate a scene there.

To keep track of the large cast of characters the author has thrown out the long Russian names and substituted Anglicized given-names. So Vladimir Lenin becomes Victor and Leon Trotsky is Leonard. But one can't help but smile, when Klimenti Voroshilov is turned into just plain Clem, and Sergo Ordjonikidze is called Sam!

Luckily, Stalin is still named Joseph.

People who read the book hoping to get a new insight into this strange man's personality will be disappointed. He is just as inscrutable as ever. Although Mervyn Jones conjures up some degree of warmth and sympathy for the child Joseph, this is lost by the time he becomes a revolutionary. From then on, he is the taciturn, stoic leader who surveys the world through slitted eyes, puffs on his pipe and plots his Machiavellian maneuvers to grab all the power.

Where the author excels is his portrayal of the people whose lives are touched by Stalin.

The characterization of Stalin's wife, Diana (Nadia), and his son, Jacob, gives the book substance. Here one can understand the dedication and joyfulness of the early revolutionaries. But as one freedom after another is abolished with Stalin's rise in power, Diana becomes disillusioned and finally commits suicide. Jacob's disbelief in his father's tactics, as seen through the eyes of the second generation, is particularly compelling.

Jones' description of the times right after the revolution is interesting: "It was a time of marvelling human growth. Everyone did his job better — got more ideas, talked more eloquently, made new friends, lived more intensely . . . It was a time of freedom, so natural that it soon ceased to be strange."

Lenin was the man who instilled this feeling into the new revolutionaries. Compared to Stalin, he was a saint. His premature death triggered the power struggle that saw the rise of the quietest member of the Central Committee. How Stalin broke each man who stood in his way to absolute power provides an engrossing yet horrifying story.

It is tragic that with all the humane leaders who had come to the fore during the Revolution, Russia had to end up with Stalin. Mervyn Jones sums it up this way:

"The men who get power are the men who think of nothing else; who make it their supreme value; who are the most unfit to have it, if we think freedom matters and power should be limited; who are totally corrupt, if belief in power is a corruption. The men who are fit to have power, because they value freedom and tolerance and mercy, are the ones who won't get it. They don't care enough to struggle hard."

Plantings For The Patio And Pool Side

A part of that leisurely enjoyment can be surroundings beautified by well chosen trees, shrubs, plants and vines.

In fact, without plantings, a pool deck or a patio can be so sun-scorched and hot that its enjoyment becomes an impossibility. A selection of sun-loving plants growing in containers offers the needed relief from the sun.

CONTAINER gardening is also a challenging and rewarding experience for the gardener.

The key thing to remember when it comes to maintenance is that trees, shrubs or flowering plants growing in containers and sitting in the sun need more frequent waterings than do plantings rooted in the ground. And those waterings should be deep and thorough, so that the root zone is saturated. Don't be stingy with the water.

A tree planted in a large-size container, a box or barrel, can be just as effective as a shade-producer as a tree growing in the yard.

SOME ADAPTED to this kind of cultivation are the Southern Magnolia, especially in its smaller St. Mary's version; the camphor with its apple green foliage, the Evergreen Pear of pendulous growth, and the Purple Leaf Plum.

Such fruit trees as the pear and fig can also be grown successfully in large containers.

And don't overlook the Oleander in its tree form. In flower or not, it is a distinctive specimen. And so hardy that it laughs at neglect.

FOR POOL-SIDE containers, the evergreen trees are best, since deciducus trees may cause a problem when they shed their leaves. The slow-growing Mediterranean Fan Palm is an excellent choice for the pool. The Yuccas, Dracaena Palms and the many bamboos are worthy of consideration, too.

Yet another outstanding choice is the dwarf citrus. These are beautifully ornamental all the year around. And a harvest of their fruit may be an added bonanza.

As for shrubs, there are several outstanding landscape shrubs that adapt well to container culture and are things of beauty. The personable flax with its semi-arching, sword-like but not sharp leaves is one. It will take the heat and exposure, as will the hibiscus and the bottle brush.

AMONG THE trees and shrubs especially suited to container growing on the patio or beside the swimming pool are the dwarf citrus. And one of the best of the lot is the Dwarf Meyer Lemon shown at left. It will give you lush green foliage, fragrant blossoms and tasty fruits, and contribute greatly to your enjoyment of your outdoor living. (Drawing courtesy of California Association of Nurserymen)

HEAVENLY BAMBOO or Nandina is an ideal accent plant with its feathery foliage. The privet family is a hardy bunch, and the nursery may have the Wax Leaf Privet in large sizes already trimmed into interesting shapes. There's a pride of ownership that goes with these attention-winning specimens.

Nurseries will have xylosma, pittosporums and photinias that will flourish in the sunshine

Xylosma has soft green, arching foliage. Photinia is larger leafed, a darker shade of green and sports new growth that is a dazzling reddish-brown.

If you are unfamiliar with some of the plant materials that have been mentioned, visit your nurseryman and ask him to show you specimens. He should have all or nearly all. And he can advise you on plants and container sizes that fit your special situation.

For Roses That Bloom In Fall, Give Tender Care Now

Watering is all important this month for your roses.

Don't keep the plants standing in water, but never let them be dry around their feet, either. Deep, thorough waterings are in order.

Remember that roses bloom only on new wood and without proper irrigation there will be little new growth for blooms to form on this fall.

Overhead sprinkling can reduce fungus problems by flushing off disease spores. No sunburn will occur if done early in the day and if the water is brought to a full run on the foliage. The water should run long enough to provide deep irrigation for the plants.

Also important in rose care is spraying.

There are effective and safe plant protective chemicals to use and if you are in doubt, rely on your nurseryman's recommendations and advice on overcoming the insect pests that would sap the vigor and beauty from your roses.

Fertilizing is equally as important as watering and spraying, if you are to enjoy a quantity of quality blooms through the autumn months. Whether you feed your roses on a monthly basis or provide nutrition less frequently, following a planned program will assure you of the results you expect.

Consult your nurseryman for the type plant food to use and ask his advice on establishing a regular feeding program.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- If when you irrigate the water seems to be running off instead of sinking into the ground, add a little penetrant to the water. In late summer the earth in California is often sun-baked and hard-packed, so that your hose needs the help of a chemical in penetrating the crust.

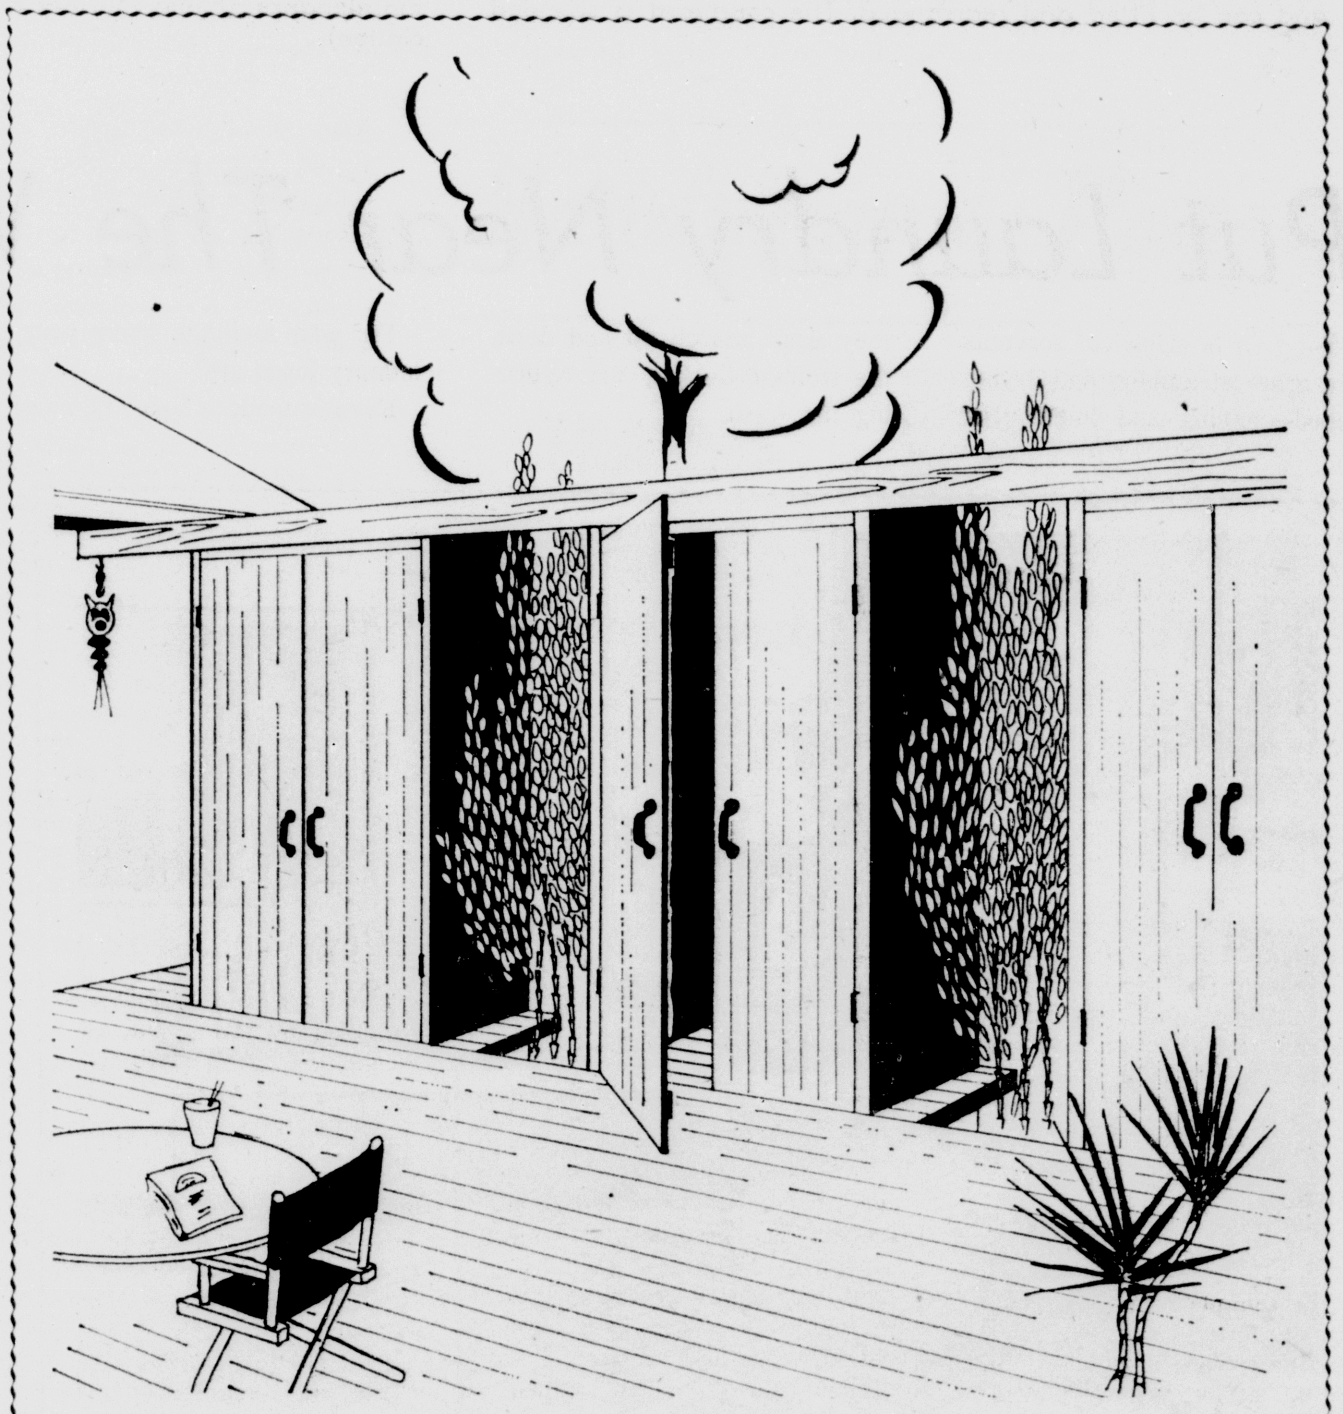
- Prune the leggy growth from your roses, water deeply and fertilize, all to promote a good fall bloom.

- To fill the bare spots in your garden along walls and fences, shop for plants already started on trellises. Among those to be found in the espalier form are the Pink Powder Puff or Calliandra, Star Jasmine, Pyracantha, Evergreen Pear, Bottle Brush and Loquat.

- Having a patio or pool party? Dress up the surroundings with a few pots of blooming petunias, marigolds and periwinkle, all of which can be found in the nurseries now.

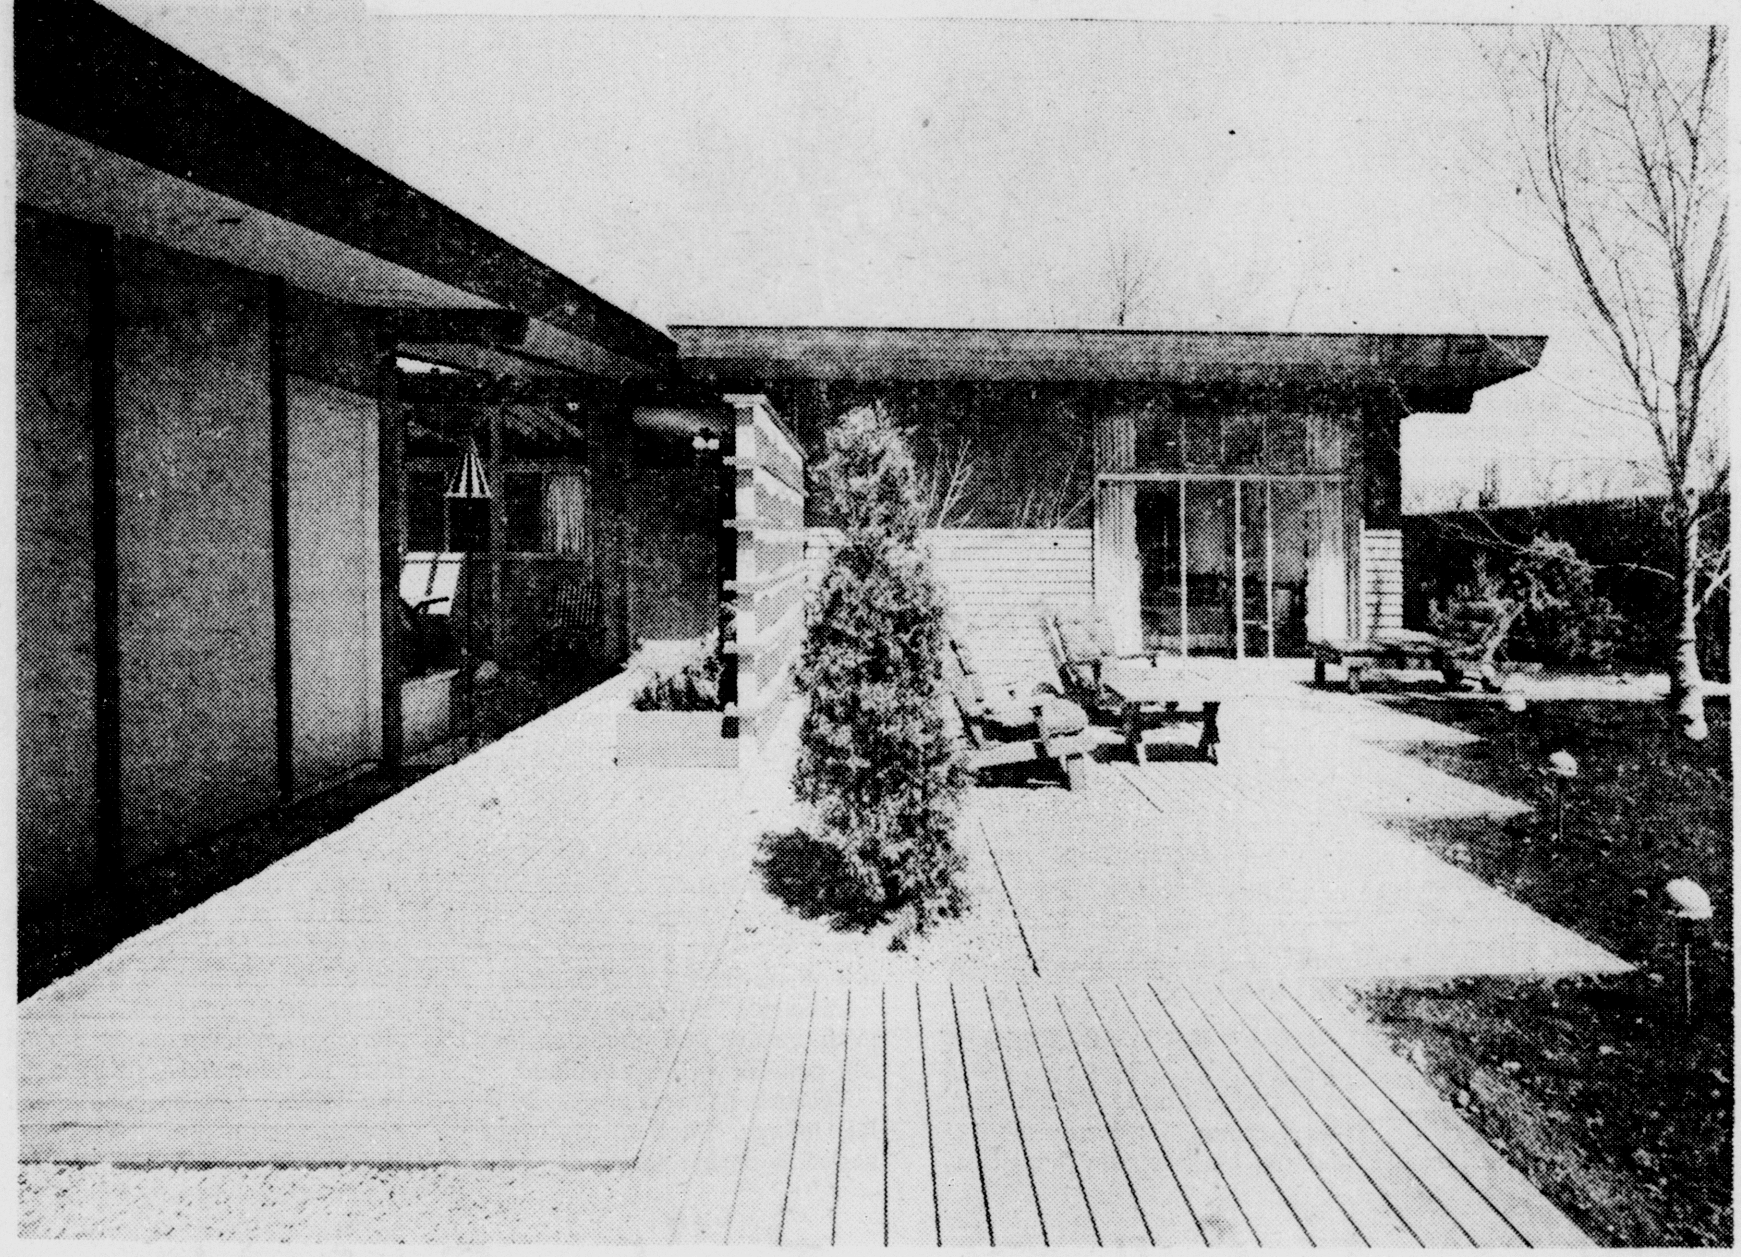
- The creative use of landscape rock in certain garden areas can add a handsome effect.

- Gladiolus plantings should be allowed to dry off only gradually after bloom, so continue to water them occasionally.



A SCREEN BUILT along one side of a deck was designed to provide storage as well as privacy with double-door closets built of vertical cedar siding to match the house. Two-foot-wide spaces between the closets, ideal for storing outdoor furniture and gardening equipment, give an open feeling and have been planted with bamboo.

Portable Decking For The Yard



THIS ENTRY and courtyard feature movable deck pads, each six-feet-square, that have been laid in a herringbone pattern and can be lifted and rearranged. The courtyard is shielded by a property line fence, and there is a screen for the entry. The raised planter box, shrubs and graveled areas assure easy maintenance. (Photo courtesy of Western Wood Products Association)

The goal of most home owners today is an attractive yard without a lot of maintenance work.

And the place to start is at ground level where, quite possibly, the answer might lie in decking that can be installed over either level or uneven ground with little grading.

It's important to insure that the groundcover beneath decking will be weed-free. This means treating the soil or, preferably, laying plastic and covering it with gravel, taking care that moisture runs away from the house. Both deck and gravel then drain freely.

MOVABLE DECK pads are particularly useful and easy to install, since they are built-in units.

Six-foot squares of decking can be laid in a herringbone pattern, interspersed with planting areas for shade trees and shrubs. A stepped or irregular arrangement is more interesting visually than a long straight edge.

Those who like change and variety can simply lift the pads and set them in a new design when the mood strikes.

Areas not decked can have one or a combination of several groundcovers like bark chips, screeds of larger rocks, and areas of thick weed-choking plantings, some of which have colorful blossoms.

Movable planters or raised boxes will provide a show of color with little effort. They can be set along a fence or around the edge of decking.

Western lumber is a fine choice for outdoor construction, and the wood can be finished with a color stain or treated with a clear preservative coating. It's advisable to stain or treat before assembly.

Put Laundry Near The Wash

Today's electrical servants are great at tubbing and drying soiled clothing and linens, but they don't march up and down the stairs collecting and returning the wash.

Put your facilities where your laundry loads are!

Even in modern one-story houses, the utility room is too often quite a hike from the bedrooms. Put a washer and dryer in a hallway built-in and save steps.

IN TWO-STORY houses, utilities tend to end up in the basement, daylight or otherwise, putting the housewife into training for alpine sports.

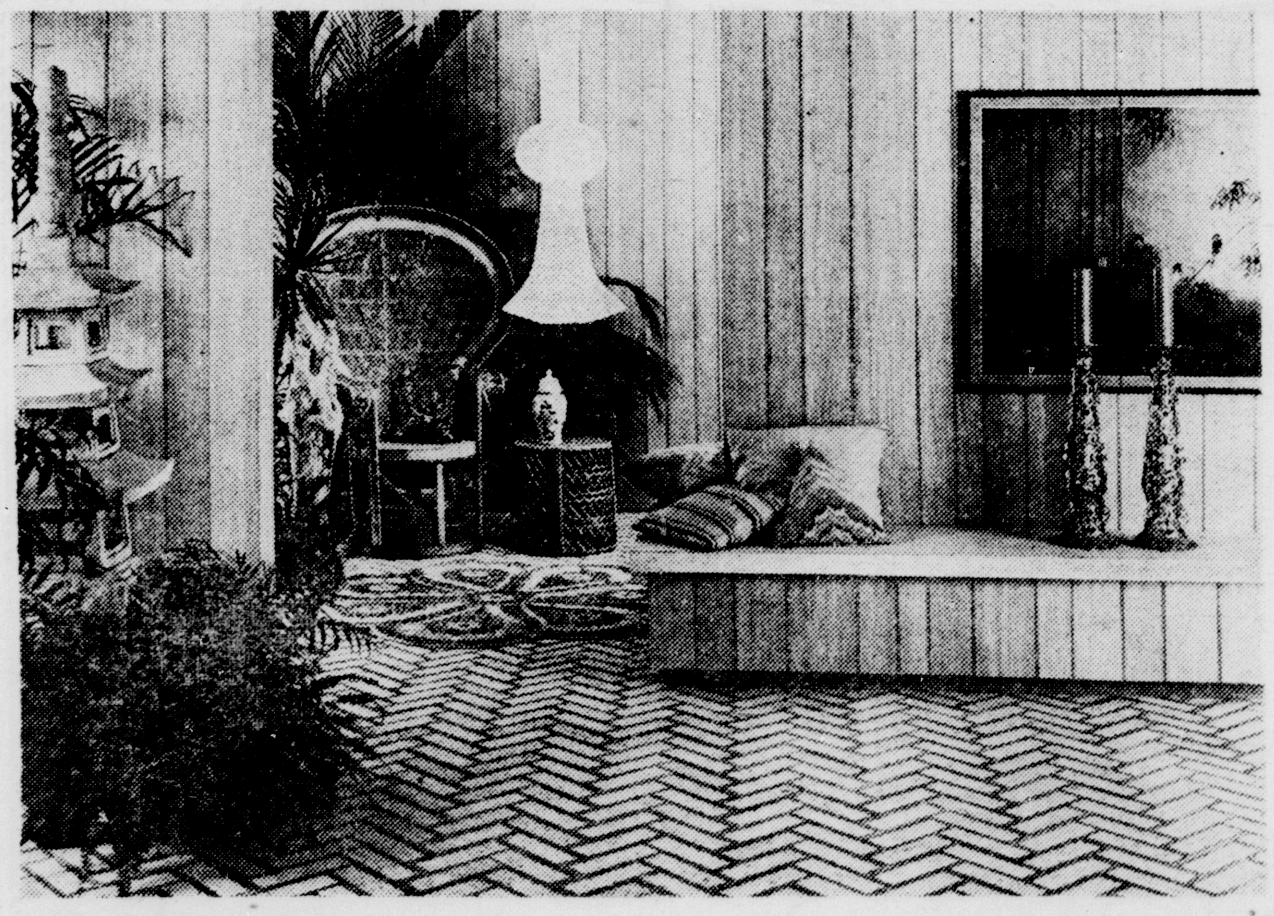
One of the nicest presents a thoughtful family can give her is a utility center upstairs, where the wash accumulates.

Most older homes contain an extra closet or corner big enough to house the appliances, often a useless corner under the eaves will suffice. The trick is to find a spot above or adjacent to existing plumbing.

AND IT CAN be a family secret. A built-in will hide the whole arrangement. Doors and side walls built with solid lumber will quarantine noise.

Fir or hemlock panel doors will make the area most attractive.

Add decorative moldings and make the doors a conversation piece.



THE RICHNESS of Far East furnishings and art have been combined cleverly in this family roon. with paneling, floor and lighting. The paneling is in an antique gold tone that compliments the Peacock chair, rattan circular table, Oriental ginger bar, altar candlesticks and pagoda-style garden lantern. An Oriental print, potted greens and rice paper lamp heighten the Oriental effect.

Economy Tip

When buying lumber, pick lowest-cost grade that will serve the use intended.

If Home Needs Quick Facelift, Install Shutters

Want a quick and easy facelift for your house? Try shutters.

Once a protective window covering used on Colonial homes, wood shutters have changed in purpose but not in popularity. Today, they are considered a "cosmetic" asset for almost any style window, and are appropriate for practically any architectural decor.

Shutters can do a number of things for a house exterior: give texture to a flat wall surface, provide color accents, and give horizontal emphasis to windows — and doors. Because they can be easily removed and repainted any time, they also provide a convenient color change for the house facade.

Another advantage of wood shutters is that they can be easily and economically installed by a do-it-yourselfer.

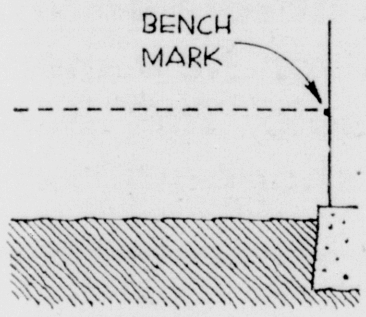
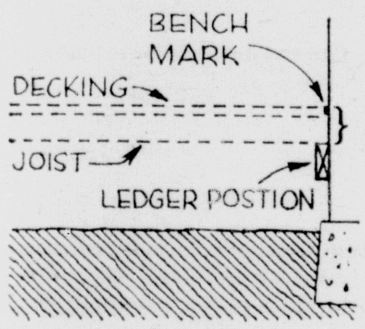
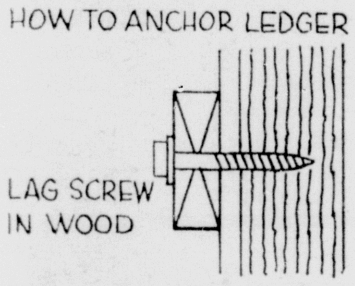
To construct a simple 10-by-10-foot low-level redwood deck under three feet high:

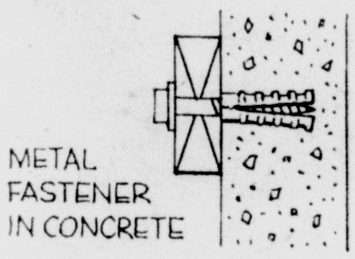
1. Decide the desired placement and height of the deck relative to the doorway it will serve. The planned deck should be nearly level with the floor of the house, or else one easy step down from the doorway. Therefore the deck should be either one inch below the doorway, or four to seven inches below it. With the desired deck surface height determined, a line should be drawn there as a "benchmark" or height reference.





HOW TO ANCHOR LEDGER



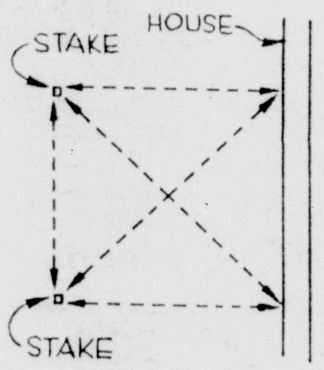


2. Now it's necessary to find the height of where the ledger is to be anchored. The ledger will support one end of the two-by-six joists. Therefore, actual dimensions (not nominal dimensions) of decking thickness and joist depth should be totaled to measure down the wall from the deck benchmark to ascertain where the top of the ledger will be placed.

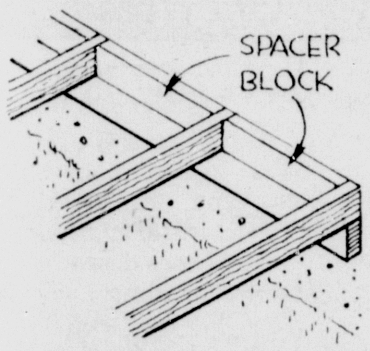
3. Anchor the two-by-six ledger to the house studs or concrete foundation with the simplest anchoring system permitted by local building codes. Two such systems are illustrated at left.

4. With the ledger attached, the deck's outlines can be projected from it by establishing a right angle from the house and measuring 10 feet outward to where one corner of the deck will extend. Mark this corner with a wooden stake. Establish the other outside corner and mark it with a Stake. Prove squareness of projections by measuring between stakes, and between stakes and the house, then measure diagonally between the farthest corners. If these latter measurements are equal, the corners of the deck are properly marked.

5. With corners and squareness predetermined, footings of pre-cast concrete should be firmly seated in their six positions where four-by-four posts and four-by-six beams can equally transmit deck weight to the ground. Outside edges of footings should be placed within the perimeter of the deck if future plans call for enclosing the sides for decorative effect.



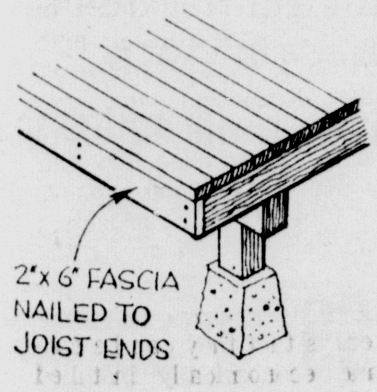
6. Post lengths will vary with the unevenness of the ground and seated footings. Accurate measurement of posts can be achieved by raising a joist (with one end resting on the ledger) to its proper level and elevation (determined with carpenter's level) and attaching it temporarily to a post resting on a footing. Subtract from the post the actual depth of a beam, and mark the post for sawing. The post must be plumb when measured and carefully trimmed to insure a good seat for the beam. When the post is sawn, toenail it to the footing. Repeat the process for each of the six posts, then toenail the beams to the tops of the posts.



7. With the two beams in place, joists may be set in place on 30-inch centers spanning the beams from the ledger. To prevent lateral movement of joists, two-by-six-inch blocks should be installed between joists where they rest on the ledger. Insert blocks between joists along the line of the center beam. At the end of the deck a 10-foot long two-by-six can be nailed to the end of the joists to serve as fascia.

8. With all the deck's structural elements in place, decking may be laid parallel with the wall of the house. With seasoned two-inch nominal clear all heart redwood decking material, allow about an eighth of an inch between boards for drainage.

To prevent staining of redwood by nails use only noncorroding nails: stainless steel, aluminum, or hot-dipping galvanized, size 16d for decking.

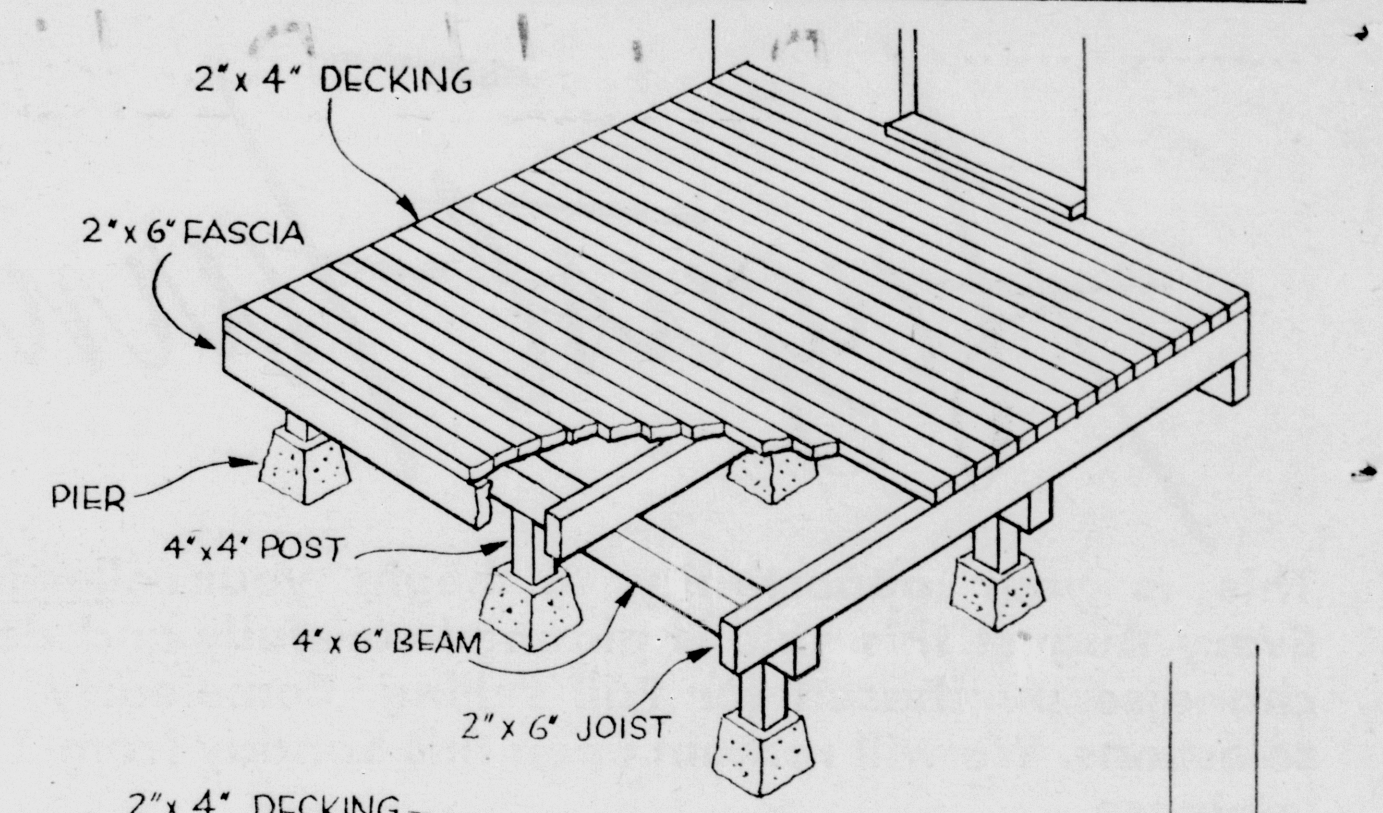


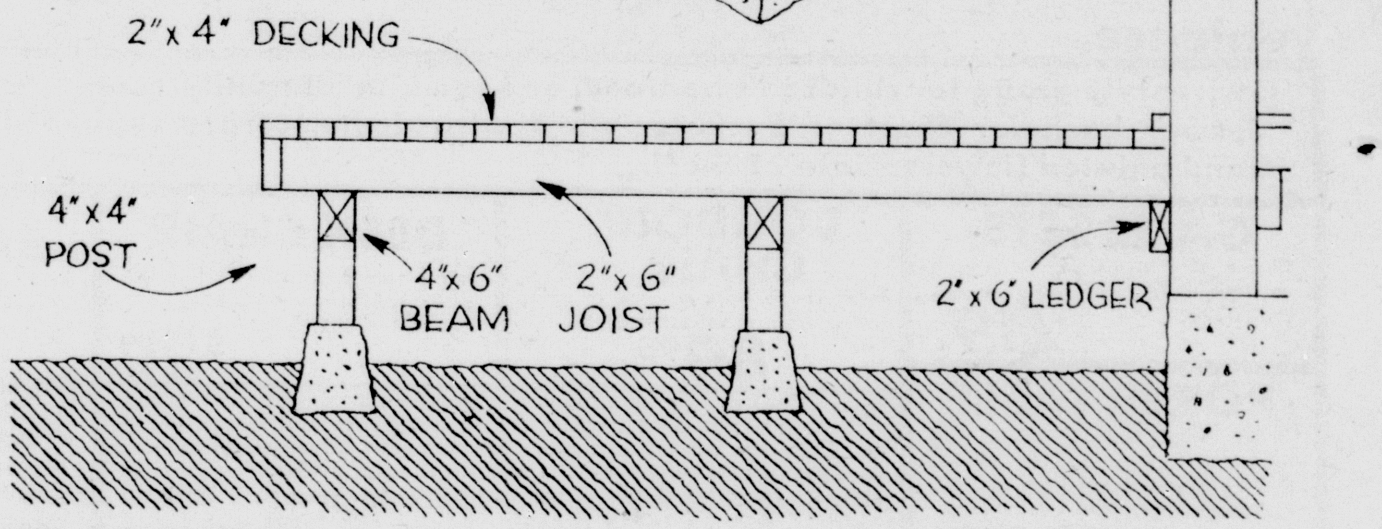
How To Give Furniture That Antiqued Look

If your furniture isn't naturally worn, you can simulate an antiqued distressed wood finish easily and quickly, according to the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association.

First, apply the undercoating and toner that come in the antiquing kit. Then, make scratches and scars by beating the surface with a heavy tool or a burlap bag filled with chains. Sand the scratches and apply artist's oil paint "raw umber" straight from the tube.

Rub off excess oil paint.





THE DECK STRUCTURE gathers the weight and load of the deck and transmits it downward to the ground. The top layer is the decking itself. If built of redwood, it should be "clear all-heart" redwood. The decking rests on joists that are primary structural element of the floor. The joists rest upon beams which gather the load and transmit it to the posts or a ledger fastened to the face of an existing building. These elements should be of at least "construction" grade redwood heartwood. The posts rest on concrete footings set on or in the ground. In extremely low level decks the beams may rest directly on footings. Builders should consult their local building and/or planning officials to make certain their projects conform to building and zoning codes.

TV's Abby Dalton: A Busy Gal

BY VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Abby Dalton, a regular panelist on "The Hollywood Squares," is probably the most active female in the entertainment field.

In addition to her television chores for NBC, she plays tennis, swims, paints, raises three children, skis, and is mistress of a 6,000-square-foot home.

"Try vacuum cleaning a big four-bedroom house with five baths, and you'll know why I need domestic help," Abby says.

The wife of Jack D. Smith, who is in the electrical supply business, Abby has a full-time housekeeper who attends to keeping their comfortable, warm home in apple pie order.

Abby, on the other hand, does all the shopping and cooking herself.

Her schedule on "The Hollywood Squares" is ideal. Every other week she spends one evening — from 5-11 p.m. — taping five shows.

THE REST OF the time she is free to pursue her multiplicity of activities. In the wintertime — frequently during the week — she takes her family to their apartment at Mammoth where the ski slopes are fast and exciting.

When the snow disappears Abby is on the tennis court of a nearby park or splashing in the family swimming pool along with her youngsters, Matthew, 7, Kathleen, 5 and John, 4.

Rainy days provide no traumas for Abby.

Strictly an amateur painter with no formal training, Abby was pressed into entering her art work in a show at Lakeside Country Club, where her husband is president. Abby came away with two second-place prizes in portraiture and landscape. She was as surprised as anyone.

Abby bubbles with enthusiasm and humor. An unpretentious girl, she is also unambitious.

THE COMEDY panel shows allow her to continue her career with a maximum of time to devote to her home and family.

Her San Fernando Valley house is best described as a Williamsburg colonial without the pillars.

Abby has decorated the house with a mixture of modern and classical pieces of furniture. Only the dining room is completely colonial in decor, including a Queen Anne table.

THE LIVING ROOM is off-limits to the three young Smiths. Abby explains why: "It gives us one room where we can entertain guests without having to worry about them sitting down on a toy fire engine or something."

The youngsters have their own play room with plastic, unbreakable furniture and a multitude of toys and games.

Because her show beams during the daytime, Abby's offspring frequently tune in to watch their mother. When they were younger the confusion was great. They couldn't comprehend how their mother could be in two places at once.

The other day Kathleen ran into the kitchen to tell her mother, "Come quickly, Mommy, Abby Dalton is on television."

"THE ODD COUPLE," the smash Broadway hit and motion picture, comes to television, with Jack Klugman, left, as Oscar, and Tony Randall, right, as Felix. The ABC-TV comedy series will debut on Sept. 24 and will be aired on Thursday evenings on Channels 7 and 11.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

Some new albums from Germany's Deutsche Grammophon accentuate the avant garde:

"LIGETI: "Lux Aeterna"; BEDFORD: "Two Poems for Chorus"; MELLNAS: "Succsim"; KOPELENT: "Matka"— Choir of North German Radio, Hamburg/Helmut Franz — Deutsche Grammophon 137 004:

DGG's new Avant Garde Series is impeccable in presentation, programming, notes, and most of all technical quality. The last item is all-important with modern music exploring ultra-wide dynamics.

The super-quiet surfaces of DGG discs have long been a satisfaction to record collectors. With the now nearly universal use of the Dolby system to reduce noises prior to cutting the disc, the presence of annoying scratch, ticks and pops on most American-made LPs has become if anything more noticeable than ever. The frequent triple-pianissimo passages in this music are never masked by such noises and the music comes through unpolluted.

The Legeti piece for a cappella choir will be remembered from the soundtrack of "2001," and even out of that context it conjures outer-space scenes. However, it is based on strict rules of ancient polyphony such as Palestrina employed.

The Bedford works are adapted from poems of Kenneth Patchen, one about the awakening of the rain-dampened countryside in early morning, and the other finding joy in the mood of the open sea.

One doesn't hear too much avant-garde choral music, but this collection demonstrates that some very exciting things are happening in this field. The human voices lend a much-needed feeling of humanity to often aseptic, machine-like contemporary music.

KAGEL: "Fantasy for Organ with Obbligati"; ALLENDE-BLIN: "Sonorites"; LIGETI: "Volumina, Etude No. 1" (Harmonies) — Gerd Zacher, pipe organ — DGG 137 003:

Most first-time listeners to this amazing LP will swear it is a creation of the electronic music studio or at least one of the synthesizers, Buchla or Moog.

In reality only a standard pipe organ is used, but with such techniques as holding down great handsfull of keys at one time and slowly creeping from one handfull to another, or turning the blowers off and on while holding down groups of notes. The latter results in a peculiar deflation effect that must be heard to be believed.

The obbligati in Kagel's composition are a kind of cantus firmus consisting of tape recordings illustrating the acoustic background of the organist's life. Mixed in to the music are sounds of falling rain, kettle boiling, an egg-timer and recordings from christenings and weddings held in the church.

The Ligeti works again strike this writer as the major interest on the LP: Changing clusters of notes form bands of sound in "Volumina," with the forearm and even the upper part of the body being used to depress the keys.

Superb stereo reproduction graces this unique album.

STOCKHAUSEN: "Gruppen" for three orchestras; "Carre" for four orchestras and four choirs — Symphony Orchestra and Choir of Northwest German Radio, Hamburg/Kagel/Stockhausen/Markowski/Gielen, conductors — DGG 137 002:

These Stockhausen explorations of his own individual sound-world play around with the spatial factor in music — something which really hasn't been used since the antiphonal works the Gabrielis wrote for Renaissance Venice.

The three small (36-member) orchestras in "Gruppen" are arranged like a three-channel stereo system in front of the concert audience. The instruments in each group are similar, but there are several layers of music at different tempi that one orchestra could not play alone. The use of sound motion and direction is similar to what Stockhausen did electronically in his most famous piece, "Song of the Youths."

"Carre" has the concert audience sitting in a circular arrangement, with the four orchestras and four choirs behind and against the walls of the auditorium. The work has a contemplative quality unusual in Stockhausen, with small changes taking place inside the tones as they slowly spin out. The "minimal art" approach has undoubtedly affected Germany's leading far-out composer.

It's unfortunate the four-channel original had to be reduced to two channels for the disc. Perhaps when Quadraphonic becomes more widespread we'll be able to hear this work the way live audiences did at its premiere in 1959.

HANS WERNER HENZE: "Doppio Concerto for Oboe, Harp and Strings" — Heinz Holliger, oboe/Ursula Holliger, "Sonata per Archi" — Collegium Musicum of Zurich, Paul Sacher — DGG 139 396:

The chamber music feeling of the "Doppio Concerto" is preserved by the major part in the musical development which is given to the 18 solo strings.

The "Fantasia" is adapted from Henze's soundtrack to the German film that was shown at a recent San Francisco Film Festival, "Young Torless."

The second half of the "Sonata per Archi" features 32 variations on a simple violin statement. The variations explore imaginatively many different timbres and effects possible on string instruments short of the super-avant-garde techniques of banging one another over the head with them or submerging them in buckets of water.

TV Council Proposed

The creation of an American Television Council — modeled along the lines of Britain's Press Council — to receive legitimate complaints of TV viewers has been urged by TV Guide magazine.

The British council has 20 per cent lay members and 80 per cent nominees of the publishers' association and newspaper unions under an independent chairman. Complaints are reviewed by the commission and newspapers publish the findings.

The magazine, in an editorial said:

"A television council would give the viewer someplace to go with his complaints. Since most of the members would be selected by broadcasters, their interests would be safeguarded."

The magazine pointed out that currently complaints about television go to the Federal Communications Commission, which has not assumed authority for programming, or the Television Information Office, a unit of the National Association of Broadcasters.

NET To Show British Series

National Educational Television outlets in the fall will broadcast a British-made series, "Civilization," thanks to a Xerox Corporation grant.

The 13-hour-long programs deal with the history of the western world through paintings, architecture and music over a 1,600-year span.

Presentation begins in October, and the series will be repeated in 1971.

Marin Poets' Corner

BALLAD FOR THE END OF THINGS

Time out of mind a wind will come
Blowing across wet grass —
Wind that mats green stalks with scum
Of ash and lethal gas.

Earth will warp and buckle, dead
Beyond all sun's denying.
And fish will damn seabirds who spread
Wet wings of charcoal crying.

Woe to the wind, when newborn deer
Shall wither before they run.
Die if you can before that year
Of judgment. When, one by one,

Petals and fingers will clench from thirst
As bulls run mad with dying.
O Mothers — curse Wright's gull who first

SAN ANSELMO — ANNETTE M. DEAN

TOO SMALL A CONTAINER

Some of us
Are like the ocean's waves —
Forceful, pushing, restless,
Seldom standing still,
Ever attempting to fill
The unfillable desires;
And some of us spill over
For having forced too much,
In too small a container.

FAIRFAX — DOROTHY E. LYNN

HISTORY

In the West,
Sense of direction,
Selection and
Hope of right patterns;
In the East,
Merging,
Nirvana and the void.
